Associated plans to launch immediately a franchise plan said to have been adopted since the reorganization. The franchise is based on odds made by Phil L. Ryan in films around the country. The policy committee of the organization will be composed of 11 members, all exhibitors. The policy committee and board of directors are divided equally between exhibitors and company executives. There are two officers on the board and these will be elected by exhibitors.

Famous Players' Surplus
Over $5,000,000 for 1920

Many interesting figures are to be found in the annual report of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., consolidated balance sheet for 1920, issued yesterday.

The anticipated surplus of over five million, as noted some time ago, is verified; the actual figures, according to the Price Waterhouse report, being $5,399,089.00. The report also shows that on Nov. 30 last the corporation retired preferred stock of par value of $350,000.

The net operating profits for the year were $5,137,129.79. This compares with $3,132,985.22 earned the preceding year. The earnings are at the rate of $21.77 on the 208,403 outstanding shares of common stock, as compared with $15.35 earned in 1919 on 199,675 shares of common.

It is interesting to note that 208,403 shares of common stock are in the hands of the public. Nearly $1,500,000 of deposits are held by the corporation, and the inventory shows negatives, positives, etc., of a residual value of nearly $12,000,000. All the old negatives are probably included in this. Famous owns land and buildings, including that of subsidiary companies, of about $5,500,000, of which over $6,000,000 is subject to mortgages. The goodwill of the corporation is valued at over $7,000,000.

Dr. Crafts and Other Civic Authorities Discuss Censorship Problem

At Meeting Yesterday

Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, of the International Reform Bureau, who has been conspicuous by his part in the so-called "Blue Law" movement, with a number of civic institutional leaders participated in a general discussion of censorship last evening at a meeting in the rooms of the N. A. M. P. I.

The net result of the discussion, which lasted several hours, was apparent a better understanding on the part of those who sought censorship as the only means of relief from salacious and unclean pictures and the members of the National Association.

It will not prove surprising if, as a result of the conference, a measure was urged on Albany which will avoid censorship and yet, at the same time, through the incorporation of the thirteen points on which the producers have agreed. Bring about a licensing condition, but which in no way could be construed as the censoring of pictures prior to their release to theaters.

Metro Decides to Eliminate Eastern Production—Hears Takes Over 61st Studio

As indicated in WID'S DAILY last week, Metro will center all of its production activities on the coast. Bert Lytell and Maxwell Karger will leave for Los Angeles, probably on Sunday to work at the Hollywood plant.

The decision is not expected to involve S-L Pictures, who are under contract to supply Metro with five George D. Baker Prod. A studio around New York is now being sought.

International Film Service Co., Inc., producers of Cosmopolitan Prod., has leased the Metro studio at 3-W. 61st St. for one picture.

Tom Terriss will make "Boomerang Bill" there. Lionel Barrymore, as noted, will appear in it.

Through With Metro?

It was reported yesterday that Doralda, who made "Passion Fruit" for Metro on the coast, had severed relations with the company, and was about to launch her own company. That production would be in Hollywood and that Eastern capital was in back of the project. At Metro, nothing was known of the matter.

Finding the Way?

opened by Dr. Crafts, who placed full credit for his meeting the producers to Benjamin, time to time. Dr. Crafts read excerpts from the correspondence passing between Hampton and himself. He pointed out that the issues of censorship and Sunday Blue Laws were not to be confused and insisted that there is no Blue Law movement from his organization before Congress. He said, however, that his organization was interested in the problems of gambling, divorce, the use of morphine and moving pictures. He took occasion to criticise the National Board of Review and argued that the motion picture industry through its suggestion of the 13 points by the 18 leading companies admitted the need of decisive action.

He believed that if women could organize and bring about a “buyers’ strike” by refusing to attend theaters which showed “sordid” pictures that this might bring about the desired change for better pictures. He also believed that a strong and larger union should be made of existing police powers.

One of the strongest points he made was that the license fee for improving pictures adopted by the producers should be made part of the license fee to the exhibitor and with this enforcement, that the exhibitor should lose his license if he violated any of these 13 points.

He said that the producers was not leading a movement for censorship of pictures and declared in all of his return experience of 33 years he had never known such a spontaneous movement as existed today against unclean motion pictures. He wanted to know what legal enforcement could be made to the 13 points of improving production. He also wanted to know what the producers intended to do with production of 1926 and had which, in the opinion of the better class of people, were salacious. He suggested that these productions should be fixed.

Dr. Crafts was answered by Gabriel L. Hess, of Goldwyn, who said that the Association favored the enforcement of the present law to prevent the showing of salacious and unclean pictures, but that the producers were opposed “to their last breath” to censorship.

Dr. Crafts asked Hess whether or not his proposal for licensing with the 13 clauses as part of the license would not be a help.

Before Mr. Hess could answer he was interrupted by Mr. Clarence E. Waterman who is interested in the Clayton Bill, who said that in his opinion the Crafts idea would be impracticable. He insisted that she represented a women’s organizations with a membership of 35,000 in New York State, which wanted state censorship. She said that the License Commissioner had not the machinery to bring about the proper enforcement of such an act as proposed.

Dr. Crafts informed Mrs. Waterman that Mayor McClellan had closed a theater in New York because of the showing of unsatisfactory pictures.

F. C. Barber, of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, said that in his opinion, the licensing idea would be placing stress on the wrong spot and insisted that the producers needed to change their methods.

Dr. Crafts asked Hess whether the 80% of good producers could make the others of bad producers.

numerous vexations delays because of the vagaries of the London weather, but we are installing an air filtration and ventilation system which we believe will do away with the troubles arising from foggy weather. "What we need in Great Britain more than anything else at the present time is more theaters—thousands of them. We have built theaters of this type, the spirit of competition will be more evident in showmanship, and the pictures will be given much better presentation. The government embargo on luxury building is not the only obstacle confronting our industry at the present time, as the high cost of building is a most serious problem. Building costs are 200 and 300 per cent higher than they were during the pre-war years, and unless these costs drop in the near future, theater building operations will be slow in getting underway once the government restrictions are removed."

Capitol

Victor Herbert's "Irish Rhapsody" is the overture at the Capitol this week. Capitol News is the second unit after which is "The Swan," in which Mr. Gershonelli, appearing in a Bruce scene study, "Water Trails," is the fourth number. The fifth is "Tambourine and the orchestra. The feature is "A Tale of Two Worlds," a Gershonelli production. After that comes "Nola," a dance number. A Boot Tapping for "Edgar" comedy, "Get Rich Quick Edgar," is the final film number. The organ solo closes as usual.

Criterion

"Serenade" is the overture at the Criterion. A Post Scene, "The Lone Indian," comes next, after which Grace Fisher, violinist, plays "Indian Lament." The feature goes on next. It is "The Faith Healer," a George Melford Prod. for Famous Players. The closing number is an Offendorf Sketcho, "Eve's Leaves."

Rialto

The Rialto also has "Irish Rhapsody" as its overture this week. The Rialto Magazine is the second number and this is followed by a scene study which differs from the regular affair at that theater. After the overture is the Strand Topical Review. A prologue then goes on after which is the first feature, Katherine MacDonald in "My Lady's Latchkey." Redemeer Hollishead sings "Believe Me! If All Those Endearing Young Charms." The second feature, "Love, Honor and Behave," is a Mack Sennett Comedy. The organ solo follows as usual. It is "Grand Cheeur."

Strand

The Strand this week has two full length features and for that reason the program differs from the regular affair at that theater. After the overture is the Strand Topical Review. A prologue then goes on after which is the first feature, Katherine MacDonald in "My Lady's Latchkey." Redemeer Hollishead sings "Believe Me! If All Those Endearing Young Charms." The second feature, "Love, Honor and Behave," is a Mack Sennett Comedy. The organ solo follows as usual. It is "Grand Cheeur."

T. O. C. C. Arouses Over Double Booking of "The Kid" in Far Rockaway

Theater Owners' Chamber of Commerce is aroused over a double booking of "The Kid" in Far Rockaway and threatens court action unless First National gives satisfaction.

The situation as the T. O. C. C. puts it is this:

J. Jutkowitz of the Colonial theater, Far Rockaway, holds an exclusive contract for all of the Chaplin pictures. The First National Exchange of New York has placed "The Kid" in Sol Brill's Strand, Far Rockaway, to play day and date with the Columbia showing. The T. O. C. C. charges that First National is not living up to its promises and is not acting fairly in view of the co-operation the exhibitor organization says it has given the circuit. Jutkowitz plans to show the picture beginning on Monday next.

A letter has been forwarded to R. H. Clark, First National manager in New York.

New York. When Clark was asked to comment on the letter and the matter in general, he said he had nothing to say. The letter follows:

"As at the last meeting of the Theatre Owners’ Chamber of Commerce, the attention of the body was called to the controversy existing between your organization and the Columbia Studio, Far Rockaway, a member of that organization, in the matter of their contract with you for the Chaplin picture, "The Kid." It was constructed that your contemplated action in looking this subject to the opposition of your organization would be a direct violation of our member’s contract and a breach of faith with this organization in view of the negotiations and cooperation extended to you through this organization.

"I have therefore been directed to inform you that the Theatre Owners’ Chamber of Commerce will take strenuous exception to any such action and urgently advise you to render this member the full benefit to which he is entitled under the terms of his contract."

Readers were instructed to cut out the ad, soak it for two minutes in cold water and then fold it up to the light and read it. -C. Studios in Los Angeles, Now Pulsating With Activity; Most Complete Plant on Coast somewhat less than a year ago the plans for the Robertson-Studios, Los Angeles, were begun. So swiftly has the been carried forward that this great producing center w complete and functioning in its entirety.

The location which was picked for the Robertson-Cole Studios in Los Angeles is ideal. Every dollar's worth of material which went into the erection of the studios was the best. A careful study was made of the most modern and the finest production plans in the world before the final plans were printed, with the result that the Robertson-Cole Studios, the latest and largest production center in the country, combines all the best points of studios previously built.

Many exhibitors visiting California during the winter have been able to pay personal visits to the Robertson Cole studios and, when leaving, have voiced their opinions that the new plant is the finest of its sort anywhere.

With the studios complete, Robertson-Cole expects to push forward as never before. Confident through the success of its special product, it has placed in its home office building, its branches throughout the country, and in its studio, the most recent to be completed, a vast investment to the end that the industry may be enriched.

NOW COMPLETING:

"THE PRETENDERS"
The Robertson-Cole Studios, now finished and occupied in Los Angeles, completes the equipment of this organization for producing and distributing pictures, giving Robertson-Cole the newest and most comprehensive productive plant on the coast, in addition to its splendid home office building which, as noted, opened only a few weeks ago.

The studio proper covers a little more than 16 acres fronting on Melrose Avenue and Gower Street. Here eight huge stages, together with the many other structures required, have been pushed to completion.

The executive building is “U” shaped, built around a large portico, with a long flight of white stone steps leading up to it. A colonnaded stairway leads from the reception hall to the second floor of this building. Here are the executive offices, the exploitation department, a large modern theater for the screening of pictures and a private dining room and kitchen used by the executive staff.

On the lower floor a corridor on the left leads to the telephone exchange, the purchasing department and the general accounting departments, while corresponding on the right wing will be found the production department, the art and technical department, the employment bureau and the scenario and research departments.

These departments work directly in connection with the office on each of the stages where a studio representative is stationed to attend to the requirements of the director working on that stage.

There are eight enclosed stages with a floor space of 95x170 feet, with scenery dock alongside and with an overhead clearance of 28 feet which affords ample room for settings. Should necessity arise requiring a greater space for interior settings, the stages are so constructed that sliding doors along their sides may be opened, thus making it possible to carry the setting over two of these huge stages.

A network of bridges, equipped with electrical connections at given points, permits overhead spot-lights to be placed at such angles as to secure any lighting effect that is required. Beneath the floor of the stage is a large concrete tank that can be used for water scenes or for such scenes as require a stairway leading down from the level of the action that is being photographed.

A scene dock furnishes ample space for the storage of scenery and the properties required in the making of a production. Near the front of the stage is located the director's office and offices for his assistants, together with a dark room and repair shop for the cameramen. Each stage has its own cutting room and projection room located in a separate building between the stages.

A 15,000 volt line comes into the grounds. Five 20-ton transformers reduce this current to 2200 watts and spread it out to the two generator stations that are located at convenient points between the stages. In each of these generator stations three synchronized 300 K.W. generators reduce to 1110 volts of direct current and each station is connected with each of the stages, which make it possible to throw any amount of power up to 900 kilowatts on any stage.

The wiring of the entire plant is laid under ground and brought to the stages through connection points located at convenient places to eliminate as far as possible cable running across the stage.

A large building for the electrical department has been constructed. There lamps are stored and repaired and the many electrical devices required for picture work made. Lights of every description are in readiness at all times.

There are no dressing rooms on the stages proper. Following the policy of keeping each company as an individual unit, a dressing room building stands directly in front of each of the stages. The upper floor of these dressing room buildings contains ample dressing rooms for the cast and for the maid and extra talent, while the lower floor has rooms for office purposes and the star's suite at one end. The star's suite consists of a reception hall, a dressing room, private bath and reception room. In this reception room the star can receive callers without having to take them on the stages or into their dressing rooms.

They are furnished with every possible comfort and a private door leads into a picturesque garden. Here the stars rest between scenes, away from the dust and the heat of the studio lights. Each of the gardens is different. Sessue Hayakawa has a Japanese garden, Pauline Frederick an old fashioned Northern England garden, etc. While these gardens provide the various stars with an ideal place to rest, they also prove valuable for background for many exterior scenes.

Directly behind the stages is a paved roadway, twenty-five feet wide, which leads from the freight entrance on Melrose Avenue, directly through the center of the studio. Runways lead from this drive into the various stages, making it possible for the trucks to carry their loads right to the point on the stage where their deposit is required.

On the other side of this roadway are the various construction and service buildings, including a large mill, electric building, the offices of the including the production office, the property department, the wardrobe, emergency hospital, gymnasium, paid and unpaid shops. There is ample space for the many exterior settings such as streets. In this space were placed the mammoth exterior settings that was required for "Kismet."

Centrally located, so as to be accessible to all the stages is the mill and carpenter shop which covers a floor space of 15,4 feet. Here the rough timbers are brought in from the lumber yard, which is directly back of it, and cut to the proper size and shape as they proceed in a direct line toward the carpenter shop, where they are used in the making of scenery, furniture, etc. This mill is equipped to turn out anything from the roughest sort of properties to the most elaborate furniture. It is interesting to note that in this mill all of the furniture for the executive offices of the new studios has been made.

In the property department are stored rugs, lamps, picture bric-a-brac and the many odd things that directors may call for during the making of a picture. All of these properties are carefully catalogued so that they are accessible at all times.

The painting of scenery, furniture, etc. and the repairing of the various interior settings comes under the head of the painting shop, which carries a full stock of materials selected for the photographic qualities. A machine shop also forms a part of the studio equipment. There metal workers fill their function of the general scheme.

In the wardrobe building are the costume making department, the designing department, the storeroom for the costume and large dressing rooms to be used when mob scenes are to be made. One of the foremost designers on the coast has been engaged to supervise this important detail of the organization. A large gymnasium, with all modern equipment for physical training, is one of the features of the new studio. Here a professional trainer attends to the physical development of the attaches of the big plant and assists in the scenes that require a physical display.

An emergency hospital is in constant readiness to take care of accident cases which are bound to occur in a plant this size. This is in charge of a competent physician.

Putting It Over
Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Atlanta.—Motion picture contests have been numerous the past year. Perhaps one of the most successful, if the amount of newspaper space obtained be taken as a criterion, is the one sponsored by Thomas H. Ince. The contest has been started in several leading cities, but the first tie-up was made with the Criterion here, and the Atlanta Constitution, Georgia's leading newspaper. The following were the stipulations:

Girls between the ages of 16 and 30 are requested to take their photographs to the Criterion, where they are delivered to a board of judges, and from all photographs submitted in the two weeks' period five will be chosen. A free screen test will be given each of these by Mr. Ince, and these prints, with others from other sections of the country will be sent to Mr. Ince, and he, together with his advisors, will determine the young lady who is to bear the title, "Ince Find of 1921." The contest in Atlanta was tied up with the appearance of "Lying Lips" at the Criterion, and the announcement that the print of the screen test will be shown at the theater during that week, has a great tendency to stimulate patronage.

Omaha.—It was the first double page newspaper spread ever put over in a Holdrege, Neb., newspaper. R. C. Gary, of Famous Players willingly deposited $5 in the savings' bank to win the president over to putting in the last advertisement that was needed. The president stubbornly refused to "come in" unless Gary had an account with him.

The picture was "Something to Think About." It was shown in the Auditorium theater in Holdrege. The theater seats 2,500 and the town has a population of 3,000. Nearly the entire population was represented at the showing.

E. J. O'Shea, editor of The Holdrege Progress, went with Gary and introduced him to the merchants, who gladly joined in on the first double spread ever seen in Holdrege.

The Johnson Co., department store, helped by devoting its big front windows to a display; T. E. Johnson of the theater had the whole countryside called by telephone, Gary sent out 1,500 postals to farmers, 1,000 heralds were distributed about the town and so much paper was put up that the town looked like a circus.

The Keith theater, North Platte, Neb., also put out a double spread, a big department store gave a window display, and the telephone postals and much paper were used with great success.

In the Courts

An application has been filed in the Supreme Court by Jacob Shenfeld for the appointment of a receiver for the Victor Kremer Film Features. Shenfeld and Victor Kremer individually on the ground that moneys of the corporation are being dissipated and that the corporation is insolvent or soon will be if the diversion of funds continues, and that Kremer is either insolvent or is making himself irresponsible by the diversion of the funds. Shenfeld also names as defendants the New York Independent Master Films, which acquired the Chaplin films, "Carmen," "Work," "Jitney Elopement" and "By the Sea," from the Victor Kremer Film Features; Paul Gross, attorney for Kremer and the corporation; Curt Kremer and Eugenia Kremer. Shenfeld has been ejected from the corporation, he says.

Answer and counterclaim for $10,000 has been filed in the Supreme Court in the suit of the Roubert Pictures against the Reelcraft Photoplays Corp. The defendant admits refusing to pay $750 for films, but alleges that after the defendant had agreed to pay $2,250 for each film featuring Matty Roubert, the plaintiff insisted that it needed more funds and the defendant would have to pay $1,000 for each of ten films to be delivered monthly beginning last October, and then the defendant was to get one film a month for a year at $1,500 each, but the plaintiff refuses to keep the agreement.

Supreme Court Justice Erlanger has denied an injunction asked for by the Associated Photoplays, Inc., restraining Florence Hoyt Stokes and Helen Gibson from disposing of the Helen Gibson Photoplays, "No Man's Woman." The defendant contended that she got the picture from Helen Gibson as security for a $6,000 loan and she agreed to turn it over to the plaintiff, which has a distribution contract for the film, upon the payment of $7,500, but the plaintiff declined to make the payment. The plaintiff replied that she not only wants the $6,000 loaned, but $1,500 additional and 10% more for attorneys' fees, which the plaintiff says is unfair.

“More Than a Worthy Successor to Its Predecessor of First National’s Big Five Productions,” Says Publication

THE OATH

“The Oath” is more than a worthy companion for its predecessors of First National’s Big Five. From every angle it is one of the few really super-specials. An all-star cast which for once is well cast. The production is on a solid foundation, based on a real human theme. Miss Cooper does the best work of her career. A picture with real artistic merit.”—Variety.

THE WOMAN IN HIS HOUSE

“No more sweeping or powerful exemplification of the divine force of mother love has ever been penned—and certainly never realized. Developed with consummate skill and directed with a perfect knowledge of and touching emotions. It is worth seeing twice. It registers as more convincing and moving from the power of its treatment than “The Miracle Man.” The production can readily be ranked with the few great productions of the film world.”—Washington Post.

NINETEEN AND PHYLLO

PASSION

MAMMA’S AFFAIR

“Constance Talmadge is a drawing card and is indeed her charming self in ‘Mamma’s Affair’. She is a thing of beauty and grace. The supporting cast is very good. Particularly fine were the settings.”—Los Angeles Record.

THE JACK KNIFE MAN

“It is tensely human. So different it will be well received everywhere. You cannot afford to skip it.”—H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minn.

THE BRANDED WOMAN

Coast Reports That Is One Reason for J. D. Williams' Visit—Denied at Both Ends Here

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—It is reported here that one of the prime reasons for the recent visit of J. D. Williams of Associated First National has to do with an offer his organization has made to Wallace Reid, who at present is under contract with Famous Players-Lasky.

The report, as it is circulated in film circles here, is this:

Williams has offered the Paramount organization $50,000 to release Reid from his contractual relations. Associated First National is prepared to handle six Reid productions a year which the star is to make with his own producing unit. For each picture $250,000 is to be paid.

When an important official of Famous Players was asked to comment on the coast report, he said:

"It is ridiculous..."

committee, which includes a number of prominent theatrical and stage folk who will arrange the plans for the drive.

Cohen announced that the Rhode Island exhibitors had already decided to hold their benefit performances on April 3 for the Irish relief fund.

John Emerson suggested that the committee emphasize that the fund was for the benefit of the needy and seek to stress that it was non-sectarian and non-political.

During the course of the meeting C. Petittjohn took occasion to thank the musicians and stage hands unions for their splendid support of the Hoover drive.

Many prominent folk attended the luncheon, including Adolph Zukor, who pledged absolute support of his company; Joe Schenck, Walter Wagner, David Selzick, Lee Counselman of Famous, and many others.

Ward Lascelle to Make "Rip Van Winkle" with Thomas Jefferson in Lead

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Ward Lascelle Prod. have leased space at Universal City, where a screen version of "Rip Van Winkle" will be made for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corp.

Thomas Jefferson will appear in the title role, which his father played on the legitimate stage for many years. H. Thompson Rich will supervise the production with Lascelle, directing personally. Agnes Parsons has been engaged to make the screen adaptation.

A few months ago the Goldwyn studios announced the purchase of "Rip Van Winkle" for Will Rogers. A later announcement told of the postponement of the production until a future date.

At the Goldwyn scenario department yesterday, it was stated that there was no record of the purchase of "Rip Van Winkle" for any of the Goldwyn stars or producing units.

Paris Opera May Show Films

The World yesterday morning published the following copyrighted dispatch from Paris:

"The famous Paris Opera may be converted into a theater for movies. This project is being considered seriously by M. Rouche, director of the Opera, following the refusal by the Chamber of Deputies to increase the subsidy. "Director Rouche says it is absolutely impossible for the Opera to continue without outside aid. Rather than close the theater he proposes to introduce picture dramas on a certain number of days each week, and with the receipts to pay the deficit incurred by the operatic performances."

"The Wise Fool"

Lots Of Action And Good Under-water Work In Willat’s Latest

"PARTNERS OF THE TIDE"
Irvin V. Willat Prod.—Hodkinson

DIRECTOR .................. Irvin V. Willat
AUTHOR ..................... Joseph C. Lincoln
SCENARIO BY ................ L. V. Jefferson
CAMERAMAN ................ Paul Eagler
AS A WHOLE.....Plenty of action and well handled climax; splendid under-water work

STORY.....Has been rearranged for the screen in a way that distributes the action but is a bit choppy

DIRECTION.....Very good; gets the most out of the story

PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Excellent
LIGHTINGS .................... Good
CAMERA WORK ................ First rate

PLAYER.....All very well suited and do splendid work; children, in prologue very good

EXTERIORS .................... Fine
INTERIORS ...................... All right

DETAIL ......................... Adequate

CHARACTER OF STORY.....A love story with intrigue playing an important part, and the happy ending triumphant

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 6,150 feet

In order to get the most out of Joseph C. Lincoln’s story for the screen, Irvin Willat has rearranged it somewhat and in so doing has gotten considerable more action out of it. There are several climaxes, all well handled and they have worked in an opportunity to use some of the sea-diving stunts which made such a favorable impression in Willat’s former productions,
"Below the Surface" and "Behind the Door."

There is a prologue well acted by Florence Midgley and another player as old maids and Marion Faducha, as a little orphan, adopted by the maiden ladies. The smooth-telling of the story and plausibility too, have been sacrificed a trifle for the purpose of securing action but they obtained considerable of it. Suspense is also obtained in the underwater sequence when the girl’s rivals are working beneath the surface and the one traps the other. And again in the burning of the diving boat and the explosion which wrecks the vessel, there is more good action. The shipwreck sequence prior to the last mentioned parts furnishes a good thrill.

No well known players are listed in the cast but everyone is well suited and quite capable. Jack Perrin has a principal part and gives a thoroughly satisfactory performance. Others are Gordon Mullen, Daisy Robinson, Gertrude Norman, J. P. Lockney, Joe Miller, Bert Hadley, Fred Kohler and Ashley Cooper.

Bradley Nickerson had been adopted by the Misses Allen when a child. Fifteen years have passed and Bradley is first mate of the “Thomas Doane,” owned by Granny Baker. Her business manager advises that the old ship be sunk for the insurance money. A Swede seaman and Bradley discover the plot and prevent the disaster. Bradley buys an interest in another ship, “The Diving Belle.” Later the “Thomas Doane” is intentionally sunk.

Bradley and Sam Hammond, a deep-sea diver, are in love with Gussie, Granny Baker’s granddaughter.
The insurance company hires Bradley to investigate the sinking, and Gussie implores Sam to hide the evidence of the cause of the wreck. Hammond traps Bradley in a part of the ship while they work below the surface but Bradley is rescued. That night Hammond goes aboard “The Diving Belle” to impair Bradley’s diving outfit. The vessel catches fire and Hammond is trapped in the cabin. Bradley goes out to the burning boat, saves his rival who pushes off in a row boat leaving Bradley. Gussie comes to Bradley’s rescue and later tells him it is he she really loves.

Should Bring Good Results To The Box Office

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There are fewer of this type of picture on the market than any other at present, and so you should be sure to get this and give them something different.
You can promise plenty of action, good suspense and a fair amount of thrills—enough to satisfy anyone.
Show stills of the burning of the ship and also the wreck of the other ship on the rocks. Be sure to mention the under-water stuff.

You haven’t names of players to use so play up Willat’s name and recall his past productions.
"Below the Surface," "Behind the Door" and "Down Home," the most recent. Mention the under-sea sequences in "Below the Surface" and "Behind the Door" and promise more of this in "Partners of the Tide." The box offices results should prove worthy of any exploitation expenses.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... "Rome" father kills himself when he fails to prove to son that latter's sweetheart is unworthy

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,293 feet

Louis Joseph Vance's novel has been given such an excellent production and is so well acted that the fact that it is far-fetched in theme will be quite overlooked. And then too, it has been handled in such good taste that its less pleasant phases aren't offensive. It is essentially a story of "high life" and naturally in such a story there's sufficient opportunity to appeal to the sensation-loving crowd through use of cabaret sets, apartment house parties, etc. But in "Beau Revel" there is only one cabaret scene, or rather it's the "Club de Dance," and Florence Vidor is the very refined "hostess" who doesn't resort to a daring costume to make her dance entertaining.

In connection with Miss Vidor's dance, there is an artistic photographic effect. While the dancer is being photographed a spot light is used which produces the effect of waves. The direction throughout is excellent and the climax, while not pleasant, brings quite a dramatic ending to the career of "Beau Revel."

Lewis Stone is well suited and quite capable in the title role. Lloyd Hughes is a good looking leading man and Kathleen Kirkham is the dissatisfied wife who should have been reunited with her husband to make the picture complete. The photography in "Beau Revel" is excellent and worthy of comment.

Lawrence Revel, known to his friends as "Beau," seeks his main diversion in trifling with the affections of women and loves only his son, Dick. Beau meets Nelly Steele, hostess of the Club de Dance, and with whom Dick is in love. Beau insists that Nelly is not the "marrying kind" and persuades his son to give him two weeks to prove it, saying that at midnight of the last night, Dick will find Nelly alone with Beau in his apartment.

It happens that Nelly has a wayward brother and on the night mentioned by Beau, Nelly goes to the latter's apartment just as he had decided that Dick had won. Beau makes one more try and in all sincerity asks Nelly to marry him. Dick arrives and then Nelly is told of their agreement. Nelly leaves them both but Dick follows her and they are happy together. Beau commits suicide by "falling" out of the window in a way that makes it appear as an accident.

Names And Catchlines And Certain Promises Can Be Used

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Beau Revel" is a thoroughly satisfying picture, particularly because of the way the story has been handled. It is interesting to contrast pictures dealing with practically the same subjects and compare the treatment of each. "Beau Revel" might have been made sensational, but other than the suicide at the close, there is nothing of this sort in the picture. The suicide doesn't seem exactly necessary but it is probably a fitting conclusion to the life of this man.

Louis Joseph Vance is the author and you might give his name good prominence and use Miss Vidor's name in connection with her recent appearance in "Lying Lips." Lewis Stone is also well known and will be remembered in "The River's End," "The Concert," his most recent pictures. Catchlines can be used and the Paramount press sheet contains further suggestions.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Crook reforms and marries girl who forgives him when she learns of his past

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,854 feet

If it weren't for the splendid work of Edith Roberts and Casson Ferguson, two capable players who command your attention in the manner of their playing, and good work on the part of the director, "The Unknown Wife" wouldn't have a ghost of a chance at being entertaining for it's been done so many, many times before—the crook reforms and marries a girl who doesn't know of his record but forgives him when she does find it out.

Edith Roberts has a refreshing personality which dominates the picture and she is capably supported by Casson Ferguson, who also does a good piece of acting in this picture, not an unusual performance, but a sincere portrayal of a crook who wants to "go straight." And the director, too, has handled the story in a way that holds the attention satisfactorily, considering that he was working with very hackneyed material. He has allowed a bit too extensive detail to creep in at times which threatens to slow things up a bit, and he might have spent less time on the ending once it becomes obvious the husband's secret is known by the wife. Everyone knows she'll forgive him.

William Quinn and Joe Neary are two crook pals of Ferguson's who afford a touch of comedy here and there and the title writer has strained to be funny occasionally. But the comedy is short lived. Others in the cast are Spottiswoode Aiken, Augustus Phillips, Bert Frank, Mathilde Brundage, Jessie Pratt, Edith Stayart and Hal Wilson.

Helen Wilburton lives with her father in a small country town. Donald Grant, a stranger, comes to board in Helen's home and when Helen's father dies, she marries Donald and they go to the city to live. Donald loses his job and to help out for a while, Helen accepts a social secretary position which subjects her to the unwelcome attentions of her employer's nephew, who calls at her home and discovers "Miss Grant" is married. The nephew, an attorney, recognizes Donald as a man he had "sent up."

He threatens to tell Helen about Donald's past unless the latter goes away. Donald agrees to do this, but when Helen learns that her husband is going to leave her she returns to her home and even forgives Donald for the mistakes of his past and they go back to the home town to start life over again.

Star Should Carry It Over Especially If She Is Popular With Your Folks

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Regardless of the story's familiarity "The Unknown Wife" is quite likely to satisfy the majority of audiences because of the appearance of Edith Roberts, whose personality is sure to please them. They're liable to be disappointed with the story if you use catchlines along the idea of the crook who was reformed, so if you feel obliged to hint at what it's all about you might say: "If you live in a small town and a stranger comes to board in your home, be sure you don't marry him until you find out who he is. See this situation in 'The Unknown Wife,' Edith Roberts' latest for Universal."

If you usually play Universal pictures your folks probably know they have been hitting a pretty good average lately and with "The Unknown Wife" they are keeping up the good work even despite a weak story.

CHARACTER OF STORY .... Rich mother who insists on daughter marrying a Count, learns that he’s only a waiter

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 4,500 feet

Following the example of Bill Hart, Harry Carey and a few others, along comes Conway Tearle with a story written by himself, for himself, under the title, “Society Snobs.” Hobart Henley has handled the production end of it and together they have turned out a really pleasing picture, not unusual, but a good piece of entertainment. A noteworthy feature of the production is the fact that they waste no time in the telling. They didn’t have material for a long picture and they haven’t made it long by padding, and even the ending surprises you, so quickly is it reached.

Tearle does very well in a part that from a waiter makes him a Count. No one is supposed to know he has been a waiter. He is also supposed to be traveling “incognito.” He is asked how much longer he will have to wait before he will be at liberty to disclose his identity. Some humorous body volunteers that “he should worry, he’s a good waiter.” Hero register’s “I’m caught,” but the speaker was merely being funny. Martha Mansfield is the heroine who decides to keep her Count even if he isn’t one.

There is one angle of the story which might have been made less implausible. It isn’t likely that a Ritz waiter would have the capital to establish himself in a suite at the Waldorf and live in a manner befitting a Count. You’re about prepared to have it turn out that he really is a Count or somebody more than a waiter.

Martha Mansfield is the daughter of a woman, a “Society Snob,” who wants Martha to marry a title.
For this reason Martha refuses a perfectly good American suitor. The latter consults Caroli (Tearle), who is a waiter at the Ritz where Martha often lunches. Caroli admits he is in love with the heiress but on account of his position satisfies himself with sending her anonymous boxes of orchids. Caroli agrees to impersonate a Count. As such he wins and marries Martha but immediately following their marriage tells her who he really is.

The mother insists that the marriage be annulled.
Caroli agrees and the papers are signed. But Martha informs her mother that henceforth she will think for herself. She joins Caroli and they go to Buenos Aires where Caroli has accepted a position with a construction company.

Another Of Selznick’s Recent Good Ones For You

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can be sure you are giving them a thoroughly entertaining picture if you show “Society Snobs.” It’s just what the title implies and sticks to it all the way through. The development is logical and there is no time wasted in padding a story that of itself isn’t complex. Those of your patrons who like Conway Tearle will be well pleased with his work in this picture. His usual sober contenance is often guilty of smiles, too. It’s a bet his admirers will wonder why he doesn’t smile more often.

Be sure to tell them Conway Tearle is the author.
That should interest them. Also mention Hobart Henley’s name and recall his William Faversham picture, “The Sin That Was His.” If you played it, they will want to see this one.

CHARACTER OF STORY ......Man who is responsible for husband's death, falls in love with the widow, ignorant of her identity
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,900 feet

An unusual story is Florence Barclay's "The Mistress of Shenstone," and by conforming closely to the original, the screen version retains a great part of this unusualness. Coupled with this feature is a very well made production, and some fine work by Pauline Frederick, all of which goes to make it a thoroughly acceptable, and generally appealing picture. It is the sort to provide entertainment for a majority without containing either in subject or the treatment of it, anything likely to offend even the very exacting spectator.

Undoubtedly the star is the biggest factor in making it an entertaining picture. She is thoroughly at home in the part, playing all her scenes with a smooth delicacy, and without effort. While she isn't called upon for any sustained emotional acting, the role does give her a number of dramatic moments and a strong climax, which she handles with fine strength and repression. In the scene on the cliff, where she fights the temptation to let go her hold on the man who is saving her, and also in the scene in which she learns that her husband is not dead, as she supposed, her work is certain to win the approval of almost any audience. Roy Stewart, playing opposite the star, is well chosen for the part of Jim Airth, and his work is uniformly good. The other roles are more or less unimportant, but are all satisfactorily handled.

Director King did well to keep the interest high, as it undoubtedly is, because, when closely considered, the action at times is very slow, and at no time is there any great speed to the development. Skilful handling of players and sequences makes any lack of action go unnoticed, and creates a goodly amount of suspense leading up to the climax.

The production has been carefully staged. In every scene a very realistic atmosphere has been secured, and the scenes on the English coast and on the country estate, add noticeably to parts of the picture.

The story is unusual without being improbable, which is perhaps the biggest reason why it is an entertaining one, and while the locale is England, the theme is a universal one.

Lady Myra Ingleby (Pauline Frederick) is informed that her husband, Lord Michael, has been killed in an accident at the front. Another officer, through a mistake, is responsible.

Lady Myra, seeking rest, meets Jim Airth, who is not aware of her identity. They fall in love, and it then develops that Jim is the Earl of Airth, the man responsible for her husband's death. Many complications follow in which the couple are separated, but love finally triumphs.

Play Up The Star And An Unusual Story
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There should be no difficulty for any exhibitor in putting over this one. Pauline Frederick has acquired a large following through her work in "Madame X" and other previous pictures, and a promise of another fine piece of acting from the star should be almost enough to get them into any house. You can make promises about the story and the production too, without fear of disappointing. Make use of the dramatic moments and the thrill of the cliff rescue, in your advertising. Tell them it is adapted from the novel of the same name by Florence L. Barclay. Use the line, "She found the man she was to marry was the man responsible for her husband's death. Could love overcome this barrier?"
SOME Centuries feature HARRY SWEET—some feature BROWNIE, the Century Wonder-dog—in others still you can have both HARRY SWEET and BROWNIE.

Concerning Harry Sweet

WID'S says: "Sweet has an almost unerring sense of what will register and he never overdoes his gags. The laughs are many and the stuff is the kind that almost anybody can appreciate." Ask your Universal Exchange to screen you HARRY SWEET in "FRESH FROM THE FARM"—or his new one, "TOUGH LUCK," released April 6th, which BROWNIE makes still more uproarious.

As to Brownie

"The best performing animal ever seen in pictures," say the critics. Show BROWNIE in "THE DOG DOCTOR," viewable at your Universal Exchange—or "THE KID'S PAL," soon to be released. You can show HARRY SWEET as well in "FIRE BUGS," a recent release and a corker.

As to Centuries in General

"I have used every make of comedies on the market," writes W. H. Stevenson, of the Moneta Theatre, Cleveland, "but I find that the CENTURY COMEDY is the most consistently good one-a-week comedy proposition on the screen today."

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Piano factory owner's employees go against him and the girl he loves refuses him; all ends happily

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 5,000 feet

It's to be feared that Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson will have a difficult time recognizing their brain child when they see it picturized under the new title, "You Find It Everywhere," produced by Outlook Photoplays. The original story, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "The Gibson Upright," promised a much better screen vehicle than "You Find It Everywhere" presents. The production is not up to the mark of present day pictures. And it's the fault of the direction principally, unless, of course, someone "higher up" was directing him.

The spirit of the story hasn't been grasped at all and the result is a cross between a romance and a burlesque with a little propaganda thrown in. Picture a large piano factory (an exterior shot shows it is a large one) where the employees, who have been left a small share of stock by a former owner, rush helter skelter into the private office of the new owner at regular intervals to voice their disapproval of his management. The director never sees fit, however, to let the spectator in on the cause of their dissatisfaction. Again, in an effort to secure some comedy business, they resort to burlesquing a meeting of the directors by having the employees' wives take a hand.

There are several well known names in the cast besides Catherine Calvert and Herbert Rawlinson who are featured. Others are Macy Harland, Wm. Riley Hatch, Arnold Lucy and Dora Mills Adams. Nearly every member of the cast evidences over direction. And whoever wrote the titles must have been trying his hand for the first time. It was up to him to make clear a lot of things that weren't brought out by the picture, but he hasn't done it.

Andrew Gibson's father left him a piano factory and lots of trouble along with his inheritance. The employees had all been left a small amount of stock and so they felt they had a right to see that things went their way. Jose, one of the employees, incites the dissatisfaction because he is in love with Nora, a piano demonstrator, also loved by Andrew. Nora, believing Andrew engaged to a society girl who was merely desirous of "marrying Andrew's factory," promises to marry Jose. Andrew gives away the factory and rides himself of the society girl. When he finds Nora engaged to Jose he goes into the woods to forget, but finally returns, wins back Nora and the factory.

Won't Do If You Show The Better Pictures

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Unless they can do a whole lot to improve it "You Find It Everywhere" won't be found everywhere, for as it is now it is not up to the present day standard of motion pictures. The story isn't clearly defined and incidents and titles leave you guessing, and time and again you are forced to draw your own conclusions. The development is choppy and illogical. Remedies which would help a whole lot would be an entire new set of sub-titles, generous cutting of the sequences dealing with the employees rushing into the owner's office and elimination of the burlesque contributed by one of the employees' wives.

Should the picture go out as it is, it would be well to say nothing about it and trust to luck that your accompanying program will carry it through. The authors' names would attract if you feel obliged to use names. Also the featured players can be mentioned, but they're not apt to gain any new admirers for their work in this.

“exchanging” of her husband’s purchases
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,225 feet

Wanda Hawley’s latest picture for Realart is an adaptation of Philip Bartholomae’s stage play “All Night Long.” On the whole the director has been successful in making an amusing picture of the “bedroom” farce comedy variety, and while it doesn’t contain any riotous humor, there is sufficient genuine amusement to make it hold together nicely, and considering that the story is one of those cases of complications, with each incident making the main situation more complex, the director has managed to keep it coherent and the solution is reached at the proper moment, without dragging things along until it becomes tiresome.
There’s not much of the “bedroom” business in this, that is literally speaking, since there is only one bedroom scene. But Wanda Hawley is in negligence throughout the picture, so her appearance in such attire is the only reflection of the boudoir. Miss Hawley will be sure to please her admirers in the role of the newlywed wife who has a passion for exchanging her husband’s purchases, much to his annoyance. The ladies will be sure to observe that the star has adopted the latest fad in head dress and is showing a “wee bit
o’ ears” with her hair piled high in a coiffure.

Clyde Fillmore, as the husband, hasn’t a great deal to do but the titles inform you that in his professional capacity he is kept busy following up the stork. The newlyweds’ colored maid and the Japanese valet of the artist upstairs have a short comedy sequence which they handle very well.

Dorothy gives a lace peddler a queer looking idol in exchange for a scarf and later the peddler sells the idol to an artist upstairs. When Dorothy learns that the idol is worth thousands of dollars and that her husband was only taking care of it for a friend, she decides to sneak up the fire escape and rescue the idol.
Before she can do so the artist comes in and Dorothy is compelled to hide. The artist practices jiu-jitsu and falls, injuring his head. The valet runs out for a doctor and Dorothy comes out of hiding to help the injured man. Later Dorothy’s husband is called in and the artist tells him about the woman being in the apartment, but the doctor doesn’t know it’s his wife until sometime later when matters are explained and the idol restored.

Star’s Admirers Will Like Her Latest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is an amusing farce comedy, not riotously funny, but containing some genuine humor despite its mild demeanor. You can be quite sure that it will satisfy the majority and it isn’t long enough to get tiresome. Quite often in such farce comedies, it happens that the situations are dragged out until there is no more fun left in them. But in “The Outside Woman” they have managed to keep the interest until the end, and when they reach the solution of the complications they waste no time in finishing it up.
Admirers of Miss Hawley will be pleased with her work, and while the role doesn’t call for anything unusual in the way of acting, she portrays the “Pussykinks” half of the newlywed family adequately. It would seem that a more appropriate title might be found for it. “The Outside Woman” won’t mean very much to picture patrons. Catchlines relative to newlyweds should be a good way to interest your folks.

Slap-stick Comedy Of Feature Length. It Can Be Done

Mack Sennett's
“LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE”
Sennett Prod.—Asso. First National Pict.

DIRECTOR .......................... Mack Sennett
AUTHOR ............................ Mack Sennett
SCENARIO BY ........................ Mack Sennett
CAMERAMAN ............................ Fred Jackman

AS A WHOLE......Slap-stick comedy of feature length; has obvious continuity and generous amount of real Sennett fun

STORY.......Story within the story has much of old hokum plays and some new laugh-getters besides

DIRECTION .......................... Very good
PHOTOGRAPHY .......................... Good
LIGHTINGS .......................... All right
CAMERA WORK .......................... Good

PLAYERS......Charles Murray at his best with Ford Sterling running close second; Phyllis Haver and Marie Prevost haven't so much to do

EXTERIORS .......................... Adequate
INTERIORS .......................... Satisfactory

DETAIL .......................... Suffices; titles fine
CHARACTER OF STORY......Judge tells newlyweds looking for a divorce a story that changes their mind and sends them away happy

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 4,572 feet

It may not “listen” so good to say that “Love, Honor and Behave” is a feature slap-stick comedy, but it’s sure to give you a pleasant disappointment, for, regardless of its footage, Mack Sennett’s feature comedy holds the attention all the way through and they keep the laughs coming without repeating their tricks. Of course, Sennett has employed considerable of the old hokum, automobile chase stuff and slippery pavements, and other means of provoking laughs—that aren’t new, but besides he has put in some new ones and the result is a first rate comedy offering.

And with it all, the story is kept intact and there is obvious continuity. It is actually a story within a story. The first is a really sensible piece in which a newlywed wife seeks a divorce because she has found a picture of another woman in her husband’s pocket. Then the inner story is brought about by the judge relating a story in which he was an innocent victim of a photograph. After the telling of the story they revert back to the court room where the judge is working his “cure,” and of course the couple go away happy.

The direction is excellent and of course the usual Sennett line-up of players help in no small way to put the picture “over.” Charlie Murray is the judge who also plays a big part in his own story. Ford Sterling is responsible for a good share of the laughs as the innocent husband in the judge’s narrative. Phyllis Haver and Marie Prevost are also present but have less to do with the actual comedy.

Murray tells how when he was a mere Police Judge he was prompted by “duty” to follow a married man who was heading toward Gable Inn with a woman other than his wife. The man is Ford Sterling; the other woman Charlotte Mineau; and Phyllis Haver the poor wife. Phyllis accompanies Murray to the Inn where they plan to get evidence of Sterling, who is dining in a private room with Charlotte. The first tragedy occurs when Sterling rises from his chair, which had molasses poured on it. The riot starts when he appears on the dance floor in striped B. V. D’s. Then the chase follows with the photographers on the job for snap-shot evidence. The result is that the innocent Charlie is seen in one of the photographs holding a merry widow, so that as judge he is forced to withdraw any charges against the guilty husband, or get “in Dutch” himself.

Will Surely Please Those Who Like This Type Of Comedy
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This should be a good test for your audience’s preference. If they’re satisfied with “Love, Honor and Behave” it would seem that this sort of feature comedy is a safe bet. That is, of course, if they’re all as good as this one. If your folks like the Sennett type of comedy, you’ll be doing a good thing to book this one. And particularly if you played “A Small Town Idol,” and they liked it, be sure to give them “Love, Honor and Behave.”

You have a good list of Sennett favorites in the names of Charles Murray, Ford Sterling, Phyllis Haver, Marie Prevost and Billy Bevan. Stills of some of the big comedy bits will be sure to attract them and catchlines could read: “Don’t rush for a divorce just because you find another woman’s picture in your husband’s pocket. He may be an innocent victim of circumstances. See Mack Sennett’s ‘Love, Honor and Behave’ before you take the plunge.”

DETAIL .................. Satisfactory

CHARACTER OF STORY......Trapper in love with factor's daughter is accused of latter's murder but jealous rival is proven guilty

The plot of "The Magnificent Brute" is surely as old as motion pictures, but the production can't very well be condemned for this fact, for it is all that anyone could ask and there is a Northwest atmosphere that of itself is sufficient reason for anyone wanting to see it. The opening reel is devoted mostly to shots of this snow covered country, with its streams still flowing, and there is also a final shot—the sun peeping over a snow-clad mountain peak, that is unusually beautiful.

The director has tried at various times to put you off the track, but the ending is quite obvious nevertheless. The incident of the Indian guide and a brawl in which he takes part, promises to have something to do with the plot later on, but nothing comes of it. In fact, the Indian only makes one more appearance. The villain uses rather crude tactics in his plan of murder. The audience is led to believe that it is his rival that he wants to put out of the way, and instead the girl's father is the victim. They never explain whether it was a mistake or not. The villain couldn't possibly gain anything through the death of the girl's father.

Frank Mayo plays the part of a French Canadian trapper, and he puts a good bit of action into the picture in a couple of the fight scenes. Dorothy Devore is satisfactory in the role of the girl, and J. J. Lancoue is adequate as the villain.

Victor Raoul returns to the factor's post from a trapping expedition and instead of the expected greeting from the girl he loves, Yvonne, Victor is received coldly, and finds M. Courtiere, the Paris representative of the firm to whom they sell furs, a guest in Yvonne's home. Immediately Victor realizes that M. Courtiere is the cause of his cold reception.

The trapper warns Yvonne that Courtiere's intentions are not honest, but she refuses to listen. Eventually Yvonne's father is mysteriously attacked and found dying. While Courtiere is urging that Victor be arrested for the murder, the old man recovers long enough to say that Victor did not do it and he did not see the face of the man. Of course, it develops that Courtiere had hired a good-for-nothing to do the job. Courtiere is turned over to the Mounted Police and Victor claims Yvonne.

Another Good Universal For Your Program

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Universal is offering another first rate program picture in "The Magnificent Brute," Frank Mayo's latest picture. And perhaps it is a lot better than the average program picture, for it isn't often they go to the trouble to secure an atmosphere such as has been obtained for this picture. You can go beyond your promises as to the kind of backgrounds to be found. The first reel especially and many shots throughout the picture would make a mighty attractive scenic reel.

There is always a good crowd who respond to a story of the Northwest. Be sure to tell them this. If your folks have a preference for the star, make good use of his name and mention his last two pictures, "Colorado" and "Tiger True." Catchlines will attract and be sure to secure some stills for your lobby.

DETAIL .................. Very good

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Girl in search of adventure gets it when she marries man who turns out to be a crook.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 5,500 feet.

Katherine MacDonald’s latest First National picture is another of the “in-betweeners.” It’s not awfully bad and it could be better. The main shortcoming is the story, which has at least one incident that is too far-fetched even for a motion picture. It’s quite possible that the hero and heroine could fall in love at first sight, but it’s hardly probable that they’d be married the next day without knowing something of each other.

The director has managed to keep the story moving at a good pace and the development is quite logical. There are one or two instances where a gap is obvious, but at the Strand, where the picture is being shown there is also another feature on the bill and it’s likely the management has cut the feature a trifle to fit the program. There is also a good atmosphere of suspense in the opening reel in the action taking place aboard the ocean liner when the famous “blue diamond” mysteriously disappears.

Miss MacDonald is charming and seems to have made a sincere effort to please her admirers in “My Lady’s Latchkey.” She seems to have the ill fortune, however, of rarely having a story that would give her a real chance to act. Edmund Lowe is a good looking leading man but too “gentlemally” for even a gentleman crook. The other members of the cast are well suited.

Ruthven Smith, trusted representative of a diamond concern, is guarding a famous collection of jewels, among them the blue diamond. During the night the jewels mysteriously disappear. Later, in London, Annesley Grayle tires of the gloom of her Aunt’s house and answers an “ad” for a companion. In the hotel, where she is awaiting the person referred to in the “ad,” she is addressed by a young American who hurriedly explains that he is in trouble. In the thought of an adventure Annesley agrees to act as his wife.

The girl takes the young man, who calls himself Nelson Morgan, to her uncle’s home, which through coincident is the home of Ruthven Smith. Nelson and the girl are married and while they are attending a ball Ruthven demands to see the blue diamond Nelson has given his wife. Annesley realizes her husband is a crook but saves him by her quick action in hiding the stone. She forgives him and by this time he’s reformed.

Katherine MacDonald’s Name and Catchlines Should Attract

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is about an average attraction and you ought to be able to play it without hearing any serious “kicks.” If it happens that Katherine MacDonald is a favorite with your patrons, give her name the most prominence or otherwise depend on catchlines and exploitation stunts to interest them.

You might attract attention by announcing a reward for the lost latchkey by working it in a theater “ad” campaign, and finally announcing the finding of “My Lady’s Latchkey” at the so-and-so theater. Catch lines could read: “Do you believe in love at first sight? That much is all right, but don’t marry him until you find out who he is. He might be a crook. Better see ‘My Lady’s Latchkey’ for a warning.”

George Loane Tucker certainly started the ball rolling when he made "The Miracle Man," for since then the "faith" theme has been presented at regular intervals. The latest edition is a picturization of William Vaughn Moody's play "The Faith Healer," which differs from the Tucker picture in that there is no "crook" sequence to it.

George Melford's production is interesting at times but on the whole it has a rather depressing atmosphere which is not brightened by anything cheerful. In the first place the young girl is disillusioned when her lover laughs at her mention of "marriage." She returns to her Aunt's home broken hearted and then a second misery takes form in the illness of the Aunt and in the throngs of cripples who seek cures.

There isn't the dramatic force in "The Faith Healer" that was found in "The Miracle Man." When the healer is effecting his cures he is so composed and the subject of his healing so suddenly cured that the improbability of the thing stands out over everything else. The interest is allowed to lag at intervals and particularly toward the end when there is an unnecessary amount of padding and prolonged detail. Again in the last reel the picture bears comparison with the first of the "faith" pictures in the sequence in which the multitudes of crippled and maimed come from all over to be healed by the shepherd. They take altogether too long to reach the ending especially since it is obvious.

Rhoda returns to live with her invalid Aunt after a sojourn in the city where she met Dr. Littlefield and fell in love with him, but left him when she found he would not marry her. During one of her revelries with the doctor, Rhoda had seen "The Faith Healer" cure a man. Later she persuades her Aunt to see the healer and she too is cured. Then Michaelis, the healer, falls in love with Rhoda but suddenly loses his power to cure the sick. By this time the place is surrounded by people wanting to be cured. Rhoda prays that the gift be restored, and it is.
May Please Them If They Like The “Faith” Theme

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

George Melford’s
“THE FAITH HEALER”
Paramount

By this time exhibitors have a good idea as to just how well the miracle type of picture goes with their audience, so it’s just a matter of whether or not they like them. “The Faith Healer” needs cutting in the latter reels especially. It is too long for the amount of story it contains and if some of the unimportant details were eliminated the interest wouldn’t lag at times.

You have good material in the way of names to work with. Announce “The Faith Healer” as an adaptation of William Vaughn Moody’s stage play and tell them it’s a George Melford production. Recall his “The Sea Wolf,” “Behold My Wife” and “The Jucklins.” Milton Sills should attract a good many people and you might use Ann Forrest’s name. Although she is not so well known those who saw her in “Behold My Wife” will probably want to see her again.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Wealthy girl tricked by “fake” marriage, finally seeks man who really loves her and had warned her

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 5,500 feet

It’s unfortunate that “The Garden of Resurrection” hasn’t been made into a really good picture and even as it is, the production will be nearly a hundred per cent improved upon if they just leave off the last reel which merely detracts from what possible entertainment the picture provides. After the girl has been robbed of her wealth by the man who went to the extent of “faking” a marriage ceremony to get it, she seeks the man who really loved her and had warned her of her “husband’s” fraud. That is quite a logical ending but instead they go on to announce an illegitimate child which conveniently dies, and eventually the girl marries her lover. This whole reel and the sub-titles in particularly are unworthy of exhibition.

There are angles of the story which are a trifle hazy throughout the picture. This is due to the failure of the director, and perhaps the title writer, too, should share the blame, to make his introduction plain. They may have already cut the picture and in so doing have accidently removed a scene or two that should have remained. For instance they infer that the hero had met the heroine before but there is no flash-back to prove it. It would be better to show this than to allow the spectator to believe that any man could so interest himself in a woman merely through a conversation overheard.

Again when the girl comes to her lover’s house and it is known that she is to become a mother, the man is mostly concerned with what his servants think and his excuses are directed solely to them. This seems highly improbable. The players do their best and a little pup contributes any “human appeal” there may be.

Bellairs, lonely, wealthy and a bachelor, overhears a conversation from which he learns that a girl he had once seen, was living in a certain place believing herself to be the wife of the man whom Bellairs hears talking. The bachelor is interested and seeks the girl to whom he tells the story. She refuses to believe it and tells him she hates him. Finally Clarissa learns that Bellairs was right. Outcast and penniless, she seeks Bellairs, grown so despondent that he is just about to kill himself when Clarissa arrives. She becomes ill and when a child is born Bellairs says she is his wife. After her recovery Clarissa plans to go away but she loves Bellairs and eventually there is a reconciliation.

After Certain Eliminations You Can Play This Safely Enough

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who play “The Garden of Resurrection” will do well to forget to use the last reel in case the Stoll organization decides to keep it intact. Even though the ending may be a bit sudden the fade-out can be used where Bellairs opens the door and finds Clarissa. This is a much preferable ending to the one following, and which drags the poor heroine through the mire. And she’s certainly gone through enough of it as it is.

Ivy Duke and Guy Newall are the featured players who might be mentioned if you have played any of the previous Stoll productions in which they appeared. If you want catchphrases the following might be used: “She believed herself married to the man she loved, but she found the “marriage” a fraud to rob her of her money. But see how she found a real love in ‘The Garden of Resurrection.’”

INTERIORS ..................... Adequate sets
DETAIL ...................... All that's required
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Cabaret dancer wagers she can vamp a young doctor but really falls in love with him and gives up old life
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,316 feet

Perhaps because of her association with the Little Club, Realart thought Justine Johnstone should be given a story dealing with Broadway life, and so they have selected Sidney Morgan's "The Plaything of Broadway" and made a picture of just that—a cabaret favorite who cheers Wall Street's tired financiers. And even the touch of sentiment which has been injected through the introduction of the kindly doctor who labors in the slums and is the innocent victim of the Broadway "vamp," doesn't save Miss Johnstone's picture from being anything but a very shallow attempt at screen entertainment.

Not very long ago there was a picture released in which exactly the same situations existed, the vamp, the kind hearted doctor, and the eventual love affair with the vamp realizing the uselessness of her frivolous life. But the director in this case has gone the limit with the "plaything" business and the result is not unlikely to keep the various censor boards throughout the country busy with their scissors, especially with the scenes in the cabaret and close-ups with direct sensations intent. And again the "wild party" in the apartment of the "plaything" is certainly objectionable.

Miss Johnstone has a rather pleasing personality and she is evidently sincere in her effort to contrast the change from the actress to the charity worker. She has been photographed to advantage but has been given an unnecessary number of close-ups.

Lola, the pet and protegee of the dissipative Thirty Club, is told by her admirers that no living man could resist her charms, but there is one present who offers a wager that he knows a doctor whose indifference to women could not even be overcome by Lola. Lola accepts the bet and sets out to win it. Her first attempt at engaging the professional services of the doctor fail, and she tries another. Lola interests herself in the day nursery in the slums where the doctor devotes most of his time.

Later she volunteers as a nurse and wins his admiration. Soon, however, she realizes that she loves him and that she is beginning to like the work she is doing. She dances for her friends once more to secure a sum with which the doctor can build an Emergency House. When the doctor learns how Lola secured the money, he is so broken he even neglects his people. After the various misunderstandings are cleared, Lola and the doctor are married, pledging their lives to helping the poor.

You Know Best What Your Folks Want

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This type of picture finds its best market in the cheaper class house or the so-called "down town" crowds. You know your clientele best and if you cater to the people who find entertainment in such as "The Plaything of Broadway" affords, you can be sure they will find enough to appeal to them in this. On the other hand this picture will find small, if any, favor in the theaters where the audience is composed of people who prefer "cleaner and better" pictures, minus the sex appeal.

There is certainly an unlimited amount of sex appeal in this and it is pungently sensuous at times. The latter sentiment hardly counteracts what precedes it. Exploitation of a picture with a title like this, shouldn't be necessary. Of itself it will either bring them in or keep them away.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... White girl reared by Chinese servant as Chinese is saved from slave marriage by white man

It’s a fact that presentation will go a long way toward putting a picture over and in this connection it might be worth while to mention a fact regarding the way “A Tale of Two Worlds” is being presented at the Capitol this week. The picture opens with a prologue, the action taking place during the Boxer uprising in China. This lays a foundation for the story to come. The film is stopped and a stage setting representing a scene in the picture is reproduced. A girl in Chinese costume sings the cradle song from “East is West.” At the Capitol this was so effective that the audience was already on the road to liking the picture.

“A Tale of Two Worlds” is an Eminent Authors production for which Gouverneur Morris has written an original story, but it isn’t very different from some other Chinese stories with a white girl heroine. The situations in the main are almost identical with a recent Fox production starring Shirley Mason. But “A Tale of Two Worlds” has been given an excellent production and has the thrills attendant to the usual line of Oriental intrigue.

The usual characters are found in the white girl who has been reared as a Chinese, the white man hero who saves her from the lustful Chinese chief who has a torture chamber for his victims. An incident which emphasizes the self-possession of the race is interesting. The chief traps one of his own men in the torture room, knowing that he will kill himself and leave the chief free to possess the money on his person. The chief merely smiles when he finds the victims burned the money before he died and remarks calmly, “The late Ming had a sense of humor,” and later, when the chief is trapped in his own torture room and death is certain, he lights a cigarette and regrets “that he lacks the humor of Ming.”

Ah Wing, a faithful servant, saves a white child during the Boxer uprising. In America he brings her up as a Chinese, calling her Sui-Sen. Ling Jo, a feared tong leader and slave dealer, wants the pretty Sui-Sen and enters a marriage agreement with Ah Wing whereby he agrees to search for the sceptre of the Mings and give it to Ah Wing in exchange for Sui-Sen. Ah Wing never thinks that the recovery of the sceptre is possible and so agrees. Ling Jo presents the sceptre and Ah Wing is heartbroken, but must keep his word. The wedding day is set and Ling Jo insists upon having Sui-Sen even after Ah Wing tells him she is a white girl. Newcombe, a curio collector, has fallen in love with Sui-Sen, and with the aid of “The Worm,” a young Chinaman also in love with the girl, Sui-Sen is saved from the tong chief.

Will Delight Those Who Like Stories Of The Orient

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Oriental atmosphere appeals strongly to a good majority of picture patrons and in this latest Goldwyn picture you can assure them they will be getting their money’s worth of it. You can promise them some genuine thrills and for those who hesitate you can assure them there is nothing ghastly in “A Tale of Two Worlds,” so there will be no objections on this score. Even the torture room of Ling Jo isn’t objectionable.

Presentation and a musical score will help to make the picture more impressive. Use the author’s name, and there are several well known players in the cast who will attract attention. Catchlines and suggestions in the Goldwyn campaign book will give you further ideas in exploitation. The result should be worth any effort you make to put the picture over.
A Fairly Interesting Story With Star In A New Role

Pearl White in "KNOW YOUR MEN"
Fox

DIRECTOR .................. Charles Giblyn
AUTHOR .................. Paul H. Sloane
SCENARIO BY .................. Paul H. Sloane
CAMERAMAN .................. Joseph Ruttenberg
AS A WHOLE....... Good in spots: too much incident makes it too long STORY...... Drawn-out story of domestic troubles that registers partly and at times is rather flat DIRECTION...... Has allowed action to slacken in several sequences

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good
LIGHTINGS .................. All right
CAMERA WORK .................. Good
STAR...... Has new kind of part; is pleasing and does quite well with emotional scenes SUPPORT...... Wilfred Lytell the best; Harry C. Browne often overacts
EXTERIORS .................. Good
INTERIORS .................. Adequate
DETAIL .................. Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Domestic difficulties of a woman who marries from a sense of duty

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION....... 5,315 feet

About the most noteworthy feature in connection with "Know Your Men" is that in it Fox has given Pearl White a new kind of a part, different from any in which she has been seen in the past. And it can be truthfully said that in most instances when emotional or dramatic interpretation is called for the star acquits herself very creditably. Her work is enjoyable all the way through, although at times some discrepancies in the action detract from her performance.

As it stands now, the picture is too long and includes too many incidents. One sequence of events which could very well end the story is no sooner cleared up than a fresh development begins from another angle. It gets away for a good start, with the heroine in love with the wrong kind of a man, and forced by her conscience to marry the right kind of man, to guard her father's honor. Then there is a sag in the interest through the whole middle part of the picture, while the wife's life of unhappiness is recounted. There are here and there in this part some extremely human incidents, which will be pretty sure to score, and which save it from being wholly uninteresting. The interest picks up again with the return of the wife's false sweetheart, and it will be apt to hold most audiences from there up to the climax.

Some of the settings are very good, particularly those of the old-fashioned home of the hero's mother. The titles often could be improved upon, a great many of them being flowery and stagey. This is particularly true of the villain's speeches.

Wilfred Lytell plays the smooth seducer in a highly satisfactory manner, and another good bit is that of Estar Banks, as the hero's mother. Harry C. Browne is a good type for the hero, but he weakens several scenes by overacting. There is also a cute little girl in the cast who will certainly provide a laugh or two, and whose work is commendable.

Ellen Schuyler, in love with Roy Phelps, marries John Barrett, a good man, to shield her father's name. Later Phelps returns and reawakens her love. She goes with Phelps, discovers his villainy, and, penitent, is taken back by Barrett, whom she now realizes she loves.

Will Please The Star's Admirers

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If your patrons are admirers of the star, you should be able to please them with this one. You can promise a new kind of part for Pearl White, and also promise a pleasant surprise to her following in the way she handles the role. Use her name above anything else in your advertising, because, while the story is basically good screen material, a number of faults, as mentioned above, will be noticed by critical spectators. If you talk about the story, make the biggest play of the fact that the woman leaves her home with the villain and is taken back by her husband. It will do well enough in transient houses, and those catering to less critical audiences. Use the line, "She was married to the right man, but she loved the wrong man even then, until her folly found her out."
Some Short Reels

"The Simp"—Sunshine-Fox
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy
This number contains more laughs and a greater number of good gags than anything usually seen by Pathe. Al St. John is the featured comedian, and as his comedy has found many admirers in the past, his name should be a good drawing card for this one. Also Al puts over some good stuff all the way through. A business is not new, but all of it is pretty sure fire, and bound to get a heap of laughs. The first part develops into a burlesque of a regulation Western thriller. The burlesque isn't made too prominent, and there is quite a lot of subtle comedy that will be particularly funny to intelligent audiences. Then there is some slapstick that will appeal to most anyone. This is in the form of a story that Al relates to the cowboys, just before they hang him, and it occupies all the second reel up to just the end, when they return to the hanging and a good punch is furnished to the whole thing. It should be a highly satisfactory number for any kind of a house. This one was directed by Ferris Hartman.

"Factory To Consumer"—Fox
Type of production......................................1 reel animated cartoon
This Mutt and Jeff isn't much comedy to go on. The reason isn't very obvious, but perhaps it's because the idea is too far fetched to give the touch of humanness that makes these characters generally appealing. They have a plan in this one to make double profits in the milk business. Mutt ties a cow to the under side of an airship and they sail from house to house, Jeff delivering the milk direct from the cow. One or two laughs will register, but it isn't up to standard.

"The Bug House"—Universal
Type of production......................................1 reel comedy
This number stars Dorothya Wolpert, although fully as much of the comedy is furnished by Eddie Barry. It's the situation along that is amusing, as what gags there are in the piece have all been used before. But the idea of the thing is new and makes the real mildly funny all the way through. They pull the stuff fast and the rather complicated situation is kept clear all the way along. The scene is in a crazy cafe in Greenwich Village, in which Dotty is the maid of all work, mostly waitress. A lost heiress hides in the cafe, and she is discovered by the hero, who tells his friend that Dotty is the real heiress. Dotty then finds herself the center of attraction until the truth comes out. There are no real laughs in it, but it should get over fairly effectively on its speed and the humor of the situation that runs all through the reel.

"The Desert Wolf"—Pathé
Type of production......................................2 reel western Tom Santschi is the star of this one, which, like most of the previous numbers of the series, is a first rate picture of its kind. The story is very well and smoothly told, the action fast and coherent, and the whole thing presents a very finished appearance. Fine locations have been secured for every shot, and they bring out some exceptional western scenery. The photography too, is noticeably good. Santschi is in one of his accustomed character parts and acquitted himself in a satisfactory manner. The story is of "The Wolf," an outlaw, who has rescued a woman and her child in the desert. Her husband has been murderer by the sheriff for stealing cattle, and the "Wolf" bargains with her to save her husband if she will give herself to him. After saving the husband, "The Wolf's" heart is softened by the little child and he re-unites the husband and wife. A very good two-reeler.

"The Coward of Coveloe"—Universal
Type of production......................................2 reel western
This one stars Jack Perrin, and both the star and the story make pretty good entertainment of a fast fightin' western. While Perrin is a little too polished looking for a tough cowboy, he gives a good account of himself in several fast fights, and acts tough if he doesn't look it. The story too is somewhat better than the average of this type. It's not always repeatable, and is well told. The star keeps things moving all the time, so that there is no drag in the action in any part of the two reels. Perrin is first seen as an extremely tough cowboy who meets the new parson in town and also meets his daughter, just as he is enjoying a fine for all fights. Gradually the minister impresses him with a "turn the other cheek" doctrine, until the whole town believes him a coward. The villain steals the girl and it is then that the hero shows what he can do with his fists. The whole thing is of the sort to be very enjoyable to all western fans.

"Making Up"—Universal
Type of production......................................1 reel comedy
A clever idea makes this one a very amusing, and wholly satisfactory comedy reel. Billy Fletcher is the featured comedian, and his style of comedy is quite universal in its appeal, even though it is not particularly funny. The story is of a single lady who is a property owner. Fletcher is the manager of the building and makes all right by them. The idea is that he is a very "movie struck" man and in spite of his wife's protests, he engages a dramatic teacher, Hubby finds out and tells the part himself in a large false beard. All the fun comes in when wife hides the teacher from hubby and Fletcher does some quick change acts to play both parts. The leading lady is a very pretty girl, and the piece is above the average of its kind.

" Matter of Choice"—Universal
Type of production......................................1 reel comedy
Billy Fletcher is starred in this number. Whatever amusement can be found in it is due entirely to one or two situations, as the gags are not particularly funny. Fletcher puts over the stuff as well as possible, but most of it is more or less silly business without much punch. It won't be apt to prove very entertaining to discriminating audiences. The idea is an old one. Father and mother each have a different choice for daughter's future husband, and father cooks up a scheme to queer mother's choice, who is also daughter's. He plants a chorus girl's picture in Billy's pocket. Then Billy turns the picture up with the center sample to the father. A few of the incidents are funny, but as a whole the attempted comedy falls rather flat.

"The Man Who Always Sat Down"—Bruce-Educational
Type of production......................................1 reel scenic
This is the first of a new series of seven European scenes of Robert Bruce. It is a first class number too, the whole thing being unusually good airplane views, high above the Swiss Alps. The Matterhorn is the central figure of most of the shots, and the big peak has been shot from about every possible angle. At one point, the machine is caught in an air pocket, and the rapid drop of several hundred feet is shown in the film. The peculiar title is explained by sub-titles which state that the reason for the airplane trip is because the traveler wishes to be a mountain climber, but wanted to do it by sitting down. It should make an especially good scenic offering.

"Mixed Bedrooms"—Educational
Type of production......................................1 reel comedy
This is one of the Gayety brand single reels, depending entirely on one situation for its humor. The situation is a fairly good one, but it isn't enough to hold the interest of the reel. There are two pretty girls, who are good to look at but are rather amateurish in their performance. The story is about a girl who leaves her diary on the table in her sweet-heart's room, and the resulting difficulties in getting it back, while dodging the family. It is just mildly amusing all the way through, without any big laughs, and will be only a moderately satisfactory offering.
Short Reels

"The Show Down"—Universal
Type of production .................................................. 2 reel Western Art Acord is the star of this one, which ranks above the average of its kind because of a strong fight and a big thrill. Acord has a tremendous amount of pep and he keeps things moving so fast that some excitement will be aroused in even the laziest spectator. The story is similar in general theme to all westerns, but there are new touches here and there to make it a little different. Then there is a very realistic fight between the hero and a gang of villains. The big thrill is furnished by the heroine's fall over a cliff. She clings at a crevice in the rock and hangs high in air until lassoed from above by the hero and dragged to safety. The stunt has been cleverly photographed and certainly looks like the real thing. The heroine's guardian has robbed her of an inheritance and Acord tries to get the goods on him. The guardian blackens Acord's reputation with the girl, when he leaves the town, and the excitement all comes when Acord attempts to get back with the proof of the villain's guilt. It's a good number.

Type of production .................................................. 1 reel Fan Magazine
This number is up to the standard of this series, and will bring the fans into more or less intimate touch with a lot of their favorite stars. First comes a novelty with a shot of the first colored company, making motion pictures for colored folks. The director is shown rehearsing a heavy scene with his colored cast. The come a few views of a race between Marshall Neilan's "Bump" and one of the Navy dirigibles, with Colleen Moore starting them off. Next Joy McCreaey, winner of the Ince Screen Talent contest, poses a bit, and then Eugene O'Brien's admirers are given a chance to see him without his marcelled hair, in a morning swim. Then in new order are a shot of the Christie bathing girls, an introduction to Dolores Casinelli, Irene Tann, and Ann Luther, leaving New York for Los Angeles; and some views of the new Ambassador Theater, Los Angeles. In the latter the spectator meets Wallace Reid, Earle Williams, Carter DeHaven, Anita Stewart and a number of other stars. After that there are a few shots of young sons of famous stars, who prove that they are following in their parents' footsteps. The reel ends with "Snooky," the monkey, on a vacation. Nearly all of the stuff should greatly please the star fans.

"Putting It Over"—Universal
Type of production .................................................. 2 reel Western Eileen Sedgwick is starred in this short feature, which is strong on action and speed, but which contains several noticeable faults in the continuity. The star looks very attractive and she is pleasing in her work, except for the fact that the direction requires her part to be inconsistent. The story is a really original theme for a western. The heroine is the daughter of a wealthy rancher. She goes east to a "finishing" school, and returns a far different young lady. The foreman of the ranch is in love with her, but hardly knows her when she returns with all her highbrow airs. Then is when the principal inconsistency occurs, for she suddenly drops all her manners and becomes quite rough and ready. There is considerable excitement in the chase and capture of two outlaws, and this part brings out some noticeably good riding as well as two thrilling falls. Its speed and dash make it an acceptable offering, and as the star is well known from her serial work, it should be a drawing card.

"Christian Crusaders in Constantinople"—Burton Holmes-Paramount
Type of production .................................................. 1 reel travelogue
In this reel there are presented some interesting and unusual views in and around the Turkish capital. The greatest point of interest to most people will probably be the fact that these pictures give a very clear idea of the change that has come over the city, brought about by the war. First the European part of the city is shown in panorama, with the Turkish city of Stamboul lying on the other side of the Galatia Bridge. Then there are street scenes in the latter district, with a view of the admiralty building, and a shot of a remnant of the Turkish army in camp. Views of the harbor show the warships of all the allied nations, and the old ships of the Turkish fleet. The last part of the reel shows a review of the French troops on July 14th. This part is very good. A satisfactory travel reel.

Type of production .................................................. 1 reel magazine
"Getting out the news" is the title of the first subject of this issue. It shows every step in getting out a metropolitan daily, from the time the reporter hangs out his copy until the paper is sold on the street. The pictures were taken in the New York Times offices and press rooms. It should be an interesting bit for most audiences. The next subject shows a number of "four footed enemies" in the zoo, among them the tiger and Barbary sheep. Then comes a slow motion bit showing a juggler in action. The reel ends with some colored shots of the Matterhorn in Switzerland. They are very prettily tinted. A reel of about average interest.

Why Not? Asks Prof. Harold F. Richards, Ph. D. In March "Science and Invention." And echo answers: Why not? The amiable prof helps his article a lot. By illustrations. One shows how the X-ray would work. With a bank of powerful Coolidge X-ray tubes. Concentrates the rays from the bank of tubes. By directing each bundle of rays thru a hole in a lead screen. Lead being opaque to these rays. And the caption writer says: "Imagine an X-Ray movie of a 'love scene.'" The answer to which is: Don't. The prof gives this as part description of an X-Ray tense love scene:

"The jaw-wagging quickens—the situation is becoming more tense. Percy's right humerus and ulna creep stealthily around the twelfth rib of the slender-boned Dorothy. She struggles, and we see her ribs contract as the bony arm tightens its hold. Now she lays a submissive skull upon the clavicle of her lover. His ribs heave up and down as he realizes that the object of his adoration is his at last. The shadow in the left side of his chest fluctuates rapidly and we know at once that his pulse has quick-

We can easily protect it.

This is the Barker production of "East Lynne" made on the banks of the Severn River, England, where the story's incidents are laid.
It was released here about eight years ago on the state rights market and played as a road show attraction at 25c and 50c. William Fox bought New York and its success is said in some quarters to have been what induced him to later film an "East Lynne" with Theda Bara. The Tarzan Co.'s film retains its original form, except for new titles, the company states.

New York has been bought from the Tarzan Co. by the Claxton Film. This makes the third "East Lynne" on the market, the last being the old Biograph production which Nathan Hirsch of Aywon striate rights.

you and your interview published New York papers today in view of your statement made at recent conference in New York City that you would not for a reasonable length of time advocate or encourage legislation of any kind involving the motion picture industry so that producers and distributors would have opportunity to overcome objections to certain motion pictures. Do you think you are fair after stating in your telegram that the producers, public and reformers should help think out plans to compel all producers and distributors not members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to adopt new standards and in the same breath give details to newspapers of your plan for Federal Interstate Motion Picture Commission without consultation with producers, public and other reformers. The sincerity of your statement at recent conference will be tested by your willingness to confer with producers, public and other reformers before rushing into print and stunting your views."

W. D. McGuire, secretary of the National Board of Review, when asked for a statement on Saturday, said: "It's a big dream. This proposed Interstate Motion Picture Commission is a dream of certain motion picture producers and Dr. Crafts which will turn into a nightmare. Claiming legislation is Dr. Crafts' hobby, but its enforcement is another question. Do Dr. Crafts and these motion picture producers think that the public will accept this, and that the state politicians will give up their idea of taxing the motion picture industry to provide jobs for their absentees under the guise of safeguarding the public morality? The National Board which has an administrative group of 12 years' experience, and is the only organization which acts in the realm of reality, refuses to become involved in this trip to dreamland."

End. With gentle claws of bone Percy grasps Dorothy's delicate skull, deliberately raises it until her empty eyesockets are on a level with his own, then suddenly draws it to his jaw. Teeth rest against teeth as the ardent kiss lingers its sweet length."

WHAT IT COSTS

Censorship. In Pennsylvania, looks like coming year will cost over $76,000. Ten years ago, when censors were organized, it cost $2,700. This to State. But what it has cost producers runs to hundreds of thousands. Yet Crafts says never has he seen such spontaneous movement in 33 years of reform. As there is for censorship this year. Yet despite censorship there are 17 bills affecting pictures. In Pennsylvania. Showing censorship isn't the answer.

RALPH KOHN—SHOWMAN DE LUXE

Hear those theaters aren't doing such-a-much. On the wrong side of the ledger. Also that Steve Lynch looked at them. Just looked. Nothing more.

VALUES—NOT COST

Big showman. Middle West. Owns nearly 30 houses. Developing rapidly. Talking of pictures. "It isn't what they cost," he says, "but what value they possess. I can buy Chaplin at a stiff price. And clean up. Doing it. Get another feature for a lot less. And it dies on me. It's value that counts. Not cost."

ROWLAND HAPPY

Over at Metro. Also Marcus. Also Atkinson. And all the rest. Over the big things. "The Four Horsemen" is doing. Metro has never had such a box office bet. Did over $22,000 first week. Went bigger still last week. At Lyric. No wonder Joe Engel smiles. Says it's doing same thing in Los Angeles. Cost a lot. But this dwindles fast. When you pile a $20,000 gross weekly from one house against it. And beginning this week more out of town special showings start.

RATS!

"AL" vs. FRED

Like Finnegan. On ag'in. Off ag'in. Coast says Warren's out. Lichtman in. Running the AP. Then Oscar Price says contract hasn't been signed. Maybe not. But remember the old classic: What's a contract in the film business? And the other: A contract is binding only on the party of the first part. So don't bother about the contract. Over at Mrs. Astor's they're betting on "AL." And there's a lot of wise money there.

Meanwhile Warren does the Sphinx act. Why shouldn't he? Maybe he believes in his contract. And Lichtman's on his way home. With an odor of bacon about him.

RESTING

The annual statement is out. Famous shows way to the good. So Adolph Zukor decides to go away. To Europe. For a "rest."

Casualty Companies In Agreement to Exclude Certain Class of Responsibility—Ebenstein Sees Danger

Herbert R. Ebenstein, head of the firm of insurance brokers bearing his name, has forwarded a letter to William Brandt, president of the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce, advising Brandt of what he terms is a "serious matter" in connection with liability insurance.

Ebenstein, in speaking of the matter stated yesterday: "It has come to our attention that the Casualty Companies writing liability insurance for motion picture theaters, have recently agreed to include in their policies a clause specifically excluding their responsibility for loss from liability to any person resulting directly or indirectly from a fire or conflagration."

Ebenstein's letter to Brandt, said in part: "I wish to bring before the body the very serious condition which has just arisen in connection with liability insurance for theaters."

"Our office has discovered that the new policies being issued by the various companies specifically exclude 'Loss from liability for injuries or death to any person as a result of fire or conflagration.' This clause, which has been generally adopted by all the companies and members of the conference, specifically excludes liability from an accident to any person as a result of fire or conflagration to which a theater owner is constantly exposed."

"This clause, by its brevity, covers a wide field, and it is our belief that should the interpretation of this clause remain in the discretion of one of the smaller companies, that liability could be imposed on any one of the following contingencies:"

Plans Big Special

It is understood that this will be only one in a series of pictures which Edwards will make in Europe.

Friday, March 5, 1915, WID said:"

What will be one of the biggest events in the film industry, for everyone concerned, is the day the director is not forced with his work to a speed that endangers the production. It seems a pity this practice exists, especially with big productions, because a man who is rushed is going to slip some day and then his haste is going to seriously affect the results incurred on the expenditure of several thousand dollars. The sooner the men who control the money give their directors in incentive to do great work—a reasonable time instead of the best they can in a limited time—the sooner there will be more great films and the sooner will all films be proclaimed 'worth while.'"

Winnipeg—K. M. Leach and W. P. Nichols have just completed a booking agreement involving their respective theater interests in Western Canada. The agreement includes every key city in the western part of the Dominion and takes in 25 theaters.

Of this number, five of the largest and best in Winnipeg are included and four in Vancouver. It is said by film men here that it is the largest booking agreement ever entered into in Western Canada. The booking for the entire circuit will be handled by Leach from the Lyceum theater here. Leach states the circuit will be in the market for big state right productions.

Sigmund Lubin Leaves for Germany
— Plans Consolidation of Number of Existing Units
(Special to WID's DAILY)

Philadelphia—Sigmund ("Pop") Lubin, pioneer motion picture producer, and his daughter, Emma Lubin Lowry, wife of Ira M. Lowry, director general of the Betwood Film Co., sailed for Germany yesterday aboard the Mongolia for the formation of a powerful production company abroad to include the present manufacturing units in Italy, France, Germany, Spain and Vienna.

Their project, it is said, is being financed by large picture interests in this country and it is generally understood here that arrangements have already been completed for a conference of the various executives in Berlin upon their arrival.

Bennett May Direct

It would not prove surprising if Whitman Bennett were to branch out into the directorial field. As noted, he has a number of specials planned for Associated First National release.
Two New Series
(Special to WID’S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Paul Hurst and Louis Chandet have formed their own producing company, to be known as the Chandet-Hurst Prod., and have commenced work at the Independence City studios on a five reel melodrama.

Arrangements for the release of these pictures, eight of which will be produced during the year, has been completed with Eddy Eckells, president and general manager of the Independent Films Association, whose organization will market the stories on the state rights plan.

Eckells has also contracted for a series of five reel westerns to be produced by Cliff Smith, who recently formed his own organization under the name of Cliff Smith Prod. The company will feature Pete Morrison, Naida Carl and Al Kaukian. Eight subjects will be produced a year.

Morgan Promoted

Emile Ehrnstrum, director of foreign department of the Famous Players, announces the promotion of Oscar A. Morgan to an important position in the foreign department.

Mr. Morgan is one of the oldest employees of the organization, having become connected with same about a year ago. He started as advertising manager in Philadelphia, He was graduated to the positions of head salesman, assistant sales manager and assistant branch manager of that office.

Later he was made manager of the Washington, D.C. branch, and assistant general sales manager at the home office.

Mr. Morgan will work directly under Mr. Shauer.

Williams Back

J. D. Williams returned from a three weeks’ stay in California. He stated that with one or two exceptions, huge consolidated producing units had passed out in favor of the smaller independent company, headed by a star or director. He was of the opinion this was a move for better pictures, inasmuch as stars or directors operating independently would have better competition with better films coming as a natural result.

Chaplin is well advanced on his new comedy, Willmard reported. There is a possibility that this will be another six reeler.

Cut Liability Risks

"Should smoke from the boiler room rise in the theatre with a pungent smell and a general exodus of your patrons, and should it immediately be ascertained that the accident is due to a defect or to an accident in the boiler room, liability could be disavowed, or even some two men, in a very direct way, the fire.

"Should the fire occur upon the premises next or nearby adjoining the theater, and it is determined that it originated with similar results, liability could be disavowed, the result being directly from a fire.

"Should the film in the projection booth catch fire and cause a glare which might frighten your audience and cause confusion with a general retreat from the theater, an accident occurring therein might be disavowed as resulting indirectly from a fire.

"The fact that this insurance is excluded from any one particular policy is not of vital importance if an alternate plan for insuring this liability is offered. The seriousness of the situation lies in the fact that should any such contingency occur, the insured would be left without protection of any sort, and since the limits of liability insurance are governed by the psychology of the negligence lawyer or jury, there is no definite way in which a theater owner could prepare to offset losses, and there is not the reason why more or less serious accident of this nature could not result in the entire loss of his property.

"We have communicated with the leading insurance companies, taking strenuous exceptions to the inclusion of this clause in their policies, and we hope to be successful in having it removed in the near future."

"We believe that the recent tragedy at the Riviera is directly due to an action by the companies, but we do not feel that all these pictures, as sterilised by the companies, are good enough to stare at, in that many of the films are poor, and the noise of the fire engines are the result of some incompetent drove a machine recklessly with disastrous results.

F. P. After Paris Opera

In a statement given out before Adolph Zukor, president of Europe, the following appears:

"Arrangements also will be discussed by Zukor in connection with the extension of Paramount pictures at the Paris Opera on nights when operatic performances are not being shown.

"Zukor stated he also plans to increase production activities of the F. P.-Lasky British Prod. Ltd., and may arrange a tour of British and American films for James Barrie's visit to this country.

This correction is made for the protection and information of the buyers of the Barker East Lynne series, which the Tarzan Co. is selling in state rights.

Knoles Back
Has Alliance's Big Picture With Him
—Denies Difficulties of Company

Harley Knoles, director general of the Alliance Film Corp., Ltd., variously described as England's most important picture company formed to date, is back in New York from London, where he spent eight months.

Mr. Knoles has brought with him the negative and one print of Alliance's most important picture, "Carnival," in which Matheson Lang appears. The picture was slightly under four months in the making. Some of its scenes were shot in Venice, where Knoles and his company spent several weeks.

Developments in the history of Alliance Film have been recorded in these columns from time to time. So far as is known, Mr. Knoles is the first important official to be connected with the company who has reached New York since the affairs of the organization have fallen into less favoring channels. He was asked by WireDAILY to make a statement regarding the standing of the company.

Knoles declined to go into detail at this time, but he said:
"You can say: for me that the affairs of the Alliance Film Corp. rest in the hands of some of the most able and most reputable men in all England. They are of the type that would not willingly be associated with any business which was believed to be of suspicious character."

The following wire was received yesterday from E. V. Richards, general manager of the Saenger Amusement Co. of New Orleans:
"Please deny any reports that Julian Saenger has had a talk with Masting or anyone else with reference to the National Booking Corp.

"Mr. Saenger has never taken any active part in the National Booking Corp, nor in any other booking corporation now or in the past."

"It is true that mistakes have been made in the management of Alliance, but I do not believe that those errors are more pronounced than those that occur in the conduct of any new enterprise. I know that Alliance directors are doing all in their power to straighten out whatever faults may exist."

Knoles plans to stay here about a month and then return to England. He stated yesterday that Alliance had a number of other pictures completed, including a number of dramas and several comedies. The English press has devoted considerable space to "Carnival," terming it Britain's most important picture to date. Knoles while here will arrange for the American release of the picture.

When Alliance was formed it was said First National was to handle the pictures in America for a period of one year. Later a statement issued by G. A. Rogers, American attorney for the company, was said that First National would handle only part of the output of the company and that the remainder would be released through other channels, probably through the existing exchange system. Upon one occasion, when a First National official was asked relative to the handling of the Alliance product, he said his organization was not contractually bound to release the pictures, but that it was true that it held first call on the material.

Knoles said yesterday that "Carnival" was designed for First National release. At the latter offices it was said officially that First National did have first call on Alliance Films and that nothing had been done about the distribution of "Carnival."

G. A. Rogers, when reached at his office stated: "So far as I know, the contract between Alliance and First National has not been canceled."

Over 400

"Way Down East" turned the 400th mark at the 44th St. Theater with the matinee Tuesday afternoon. With one exception, the Griffith offices state, this is the record for a picture's consecutive performances on Broadway. The defendant contended that the money was not payable until it had collected the sum for the leasing of the films.

States Position on Films
(Special to WID’S DAILY)
Washington—Clearing up many points of misunderstanding and directly contradicting claims made by advocates of legal censorship, the National Catholic Welfare Council, has made clear its stand on the program for “a campaign for better motion pictures.”

It stands “uncompromisingly for decency on the screen.” It urges cooperation with exhibitors to bring about the exhibition of clean films. “Will advocate legalized censorship only in the event that the producers, distributors and exhibitors fail to make good in their announced house cleaning campaign,” is the wording of the ninth point in their program.

Six Years Old

Thursday, March 11, 1915, TD said:

"It is much better to pay a super salary to a capable man than to have some one who you are never going to make a fine film which will please the crowds it pulls, am to pay a great price for a book or play which is possibly not fit for film purposes, and then cheap on the director's salary, with the result that you get a mediocre film, which will pull down your business on account of the time of the production, but does the patrons home discontented. This is a big, vital question in the film business today, and the men who hold the reins must regard seriously. The public wants well-woven books and plays when they are well done, but if the production is to be good in the matter of expense, because so much has been paid for the work up to the production, then fatal error is being made. The safe thing is to make now your directors. It is always the director who can make or break any film."

Bill Must Pass

So Governor Miller Is Quoted as Saying in Albany Regarding Clayton-Lusk Measure

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Albany, N. Y.—Well informed quarters here state that Governor Miller has said that the Clayton-Lusk censorship bill must be passed.

That the bill will become a law seems certain to those observers who point as a sure indication that the measure is being sponsored in the Senate by Senator Clayton R. Lusk, majority leader, who has promoted successfully all of the governor's legislative program as has Speaker MacNab in the Assembly.

A meeting was held here on Wednesday between Sydney S. Cohen, William A. Brady, Senator James L. Walker, Charles J. O'Reilly, Sam L. Berman and about 25 exhibitors from various parts of the state to outline a method of procedure.

Veteran Producer Has Ambitious Plans Mapped Out—Sam Rock Interested

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Col. William N. Selig, veteran picture producer, plans to produce on a large scale again. Sam Rock is to be jointly interested in the company.

Four specials per year will be made, from well-known stories on which Selig already owns the rights. The "Snowy" Baker Prod., plans for which have already been announced, will also shortly get under way.

A series of two-reelers will also be made from famous short stories of Sir Gilbert Parker, James Oliver Curwood and others. These reelers will be known as Diamond S. Prod., and the first picture will be started next week, under the direction of Bertram Bracken. The story is by Sir Gilbert Parker.

That's 1 of Film Receipts as Compared With Those of All Other Theaters

Receipts of motion picture theaters for 1920 were more than four times the receipts of all other kinds of theaters, according to a statement covering the financial status of Famous Players-Lasky, and issued by Dominick & Dominick, brokers. The circular, the general character of which was outlined in yesterday's issue, also states that there has been no falling off in attendance.

Some extracts follow:

"In spite of the general business depression, the statistics of Famous Players-Lasky Corp. show no decline in the motion picture business and no indication of a falling off in attendance at theaters. On the contrary, numerous signs indicate that public interest in motion pictures is on the increase. Estimated box office receipts for motion pictures for 1920 were $730,000,000 as against approximately $640,000,000 in 1919 and $502,000,000 in 1918. Receipts of motion picture theaters for 1920 were more than four times receipts of all other kinds of theaters. From a comparatively insignificant industry a few years ago the motion picture business is now

In the Courts

In connection with the statement published last week regarding the action brought by Jacob Shenfield, that the Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., was about to be forced into involuntary bankruptcy, Kremer has answered through his attorney, Louis Weinberger.

Weinberger says: "The Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., has filed its answer in the case denying all the statements made by Shenfield, and has filed proof by affidavit to the effect that Shenfield has no claim whatsoever, the only transaction between the Kremer corporation and Shenfield being that Shenfield was hired by Kremer as office manager under a contract for a year beginning Oct. 1919, and was to draw $100 per week, his compensation being dependent upon the profits to be realized by the corporation, but his drawing account to be paid in at any event. Shenfield made no investment whatsoever and owned no stock of the corporation. Kremer, having full confidence in Shenfield, authorized him to draw checks on the corporation bank account without counter-signature, this being necessary by reason of the fact that Kremer continued to make extended trips throughout the country in the course of his motion picture business and other enterprises. Some time in April, 1920, while Kremer was out West on a business trip he received information that Shenfield had overdrawn his account to more than $700, and was planning to go in business with another employee of the Kremer corporation and that Shenfield was betraying his confidence in other ways, and thereupon Kremer cut short his trip and came back to New York and forthwith commenced to resolve the corporation, the board of directors, discharging Shenfield and the other employee.

"Prior to the present proceeding Shenfield had instituted two other legal proceedings, both of which had been dismissed and fully decided in favor of the Kremer corporation, and the main purpose of the present suit is to enjoin the interests of Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., by unfounded statements, and this action is without basis in law or fact and lacks any element of good faith.

"It is intended by the Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., to promptly institute suit against Shenfield to recover damages for the unfounded legal proceedings instituted by him."

The jury in the Supreme Court that heard the suit of Elizabeth A. Reilly on an assigned claim of Mary Pickford against the music publishing house of Waterton, Berlin & Syrder, gave a verdict for $2,600. Miss Pickford sued for a balance of $3,900, alleging that after she appeared in the films, "Daddy Long Legs," "The Hoodlum," and "Heart of the Hills," the defendants agreed to give her $2,500 for the use of her name in connection with a song, "Daddy Long Legs," and $1,500 for each of the other two songs, but failed to pay $3,900.

This is a story of a genuine management which does not go into detains as to what subsidiaries famous players controls. Regarding them it says:
'The famous players-ldy corp. incorporated under the laws of New York in June, 1921, was a merger of several well known producing and distributing companies, including the Paramount Pictures Corp. and the Aircraft Pictures Corp. Subsequently there had been acquired a week of part interest in 147 companies, including all three branches of the few existing companies distributing companies, and theaters for the exhibition of films. The employees of the corporation hold a subsidiary number over 8,000.
In connection with the 1920 earnings, the following appears:
'The 1920 earnings are nearly seven times that of the previous year's earnings. The earnings of the year were $12,177, per share available for the common stock. Earnings for the year 1921 are at an even better rate than 1920.
With an inventory consisting of pictures which are depreciated in value in the books automatically as released, until at the end of three months they are carried at only 50% of their cost, and which at the end of four years are carried at $1, this company does not have to incur the great maintenance charges that have been so startling in the past history of many industrial companies. Its business is run on a practically correct basis.

Regarding preferred stock, the circular says:
'The preferred stock shall be preferred as to assets as well as earnings. The corporation shall, at the next annual meeting of shareholders, on or before November 10, 1920, and so long as any of the preferred stock shall be outstanding, on each succeeding November 10, as a sinking fund for the purchase or redemption of its preferred stock, a sum equal to the maximum aggregate purchase value of the preferred stock which thereafter have been issued and not converted into common stock, whether or not paid in the form of preferred stock, on the face of such stock in the sum of $300,000.
'The preferred stock shall be redeemable in whole or in part, at the option of the corporation, on any dividend date beginning February 1, 1921, at par, regular dividends on 60 days' notice, subject to the holder's right to convert up to redemption date.
'At the option of the holder thereof, preferred stock may be converted into par, at any time into common stock at 125 to and including November 10, 1921, and thereafter.

With the consent of the holders of at least two-thirds of the outstanding preferred stock, accrued dividends shall not create any mortgage or lien to secure an issue of bonds or otherwise, or any bonds, notes or other obligations of the corporation issued more than one year from date of issue, or any such obligations, priority over or pari passu with the present authorized preferred stock, or increase the latter.

Members Perfecting Organization

Federated Exhibitors' League of America has prepared a series of important meetings at the Astor. The series have been going on since the beginning of the week and have been attended by a large number of members from all over the country. The meetings have included discussions of general policies, the effect of the new censorship laws on the business, and the need for cooperation among exhibitors.

Rogers' Next Big "A. P."

Although some members of the organization have expressed objections to the new censorship laws, the majority of exhibitors have agreed to support the initiative. A special meeting has been held to discuss the plan to produce a film that will appeal to a wide audience and is not considered objectionable.

Away From Haste

At the meeting yesterday, James Rogers reported that the company is making progress in producing the film. Rogers said that the company is working hard to produce a film that will be successful and that the team is working diligently to meet the deadline.

Working Together

G. A. Rogers and Senator Lusk on Same Case—May Mean Something to Films

Film men were more than casually interested yesterday when it became known that Gustavus A. Rogers and Senator Clayton R. Lusk, author of the censorship bill now pending in Albany, were working jointly on the bankruptcy proceedings involving the Hudson Navigation Co.

Rogers yesterday was called in by Senator James A. Emerson, receiver for the navigation company, to advise Lusk on an application brought to remove Emerson as receiver for the company. The significance lies in the fact that Rogers and Lusk will be thrown together very often. Rogers has an interest in the film business which is a large one, since he and his brother Saul E. are general attorneys for Fox Film, while G. A. Rogers personally represents additional film people. Rogers will be remembered, figured to some extent in the Sunday Opening and had a good deal to do with the new-old fight of Fox against the Motion Picture Patents Co.

Fox To Make 'Nero' Reported It Will Be Another of Gordon Edwards' Big Specials—Production to Be in Rome

William Fox, according to authoritative information, plans an elaborate production of "Nero," as one of a series of European-made spectacles. The report has it that J. Gordon Edwards will produce it in the actual locale of the story—Rome, Italy. No definite information could be secured at the Fox offices yesterday regarding this. Edwards, as stated recently, will make a story in England based on the life of "Mary Queen of Scots."

What's What

Conflicting Reports of Albany Conference—Some Talk of Compromise

Conflicting reports have reached New York from the developments at the Albany conference of executives of the M. P. Exhibitors' League of New York held on Thursday and of that held on Wednesday between exhibitor officials and William A. Brady.

The Sun, in a special dispatch from Albany, says:

"The compromise plan of the motion picture interests would provide that a producer exhibiting a film of an objectionable character might be fined and the picture confiscated with denial of permission to produce it again in this State."

While in Albany, the M. P. Exhibitors' League issued a statement covering its activities there. The statement proper is preceded by a few remarks, among them the following:

* * * members of the Legislature were reported as understanding that representatives of the industry in the chamber of censorship because of news item.

In the Courts

Justice Guy, in the Supreme Court, has announced his findings in the case of John D. Williams, the theatrical producer against H. B. Warner, the actor. Warner was engaged by Williams to star in the play, "Sleeping Partners," in the autumn of 1918, and continued in the cast of "Sleeping Partners" Williams applied for an injunction to restrain him from leaving, and this was granted. Counsel for the defendant and the injunction granted against him was confirmed by the Appellate Term. Warner, while this litigation was in progress, left the state, going to California, where he has since remained, starring in moving pictures.

The question before Justice Guy was the amount of damages that should be awarded Williams for Warner's defection. The findings were, that judgment should be given Warner against Williams for $12,500, with interest from February, 1919, and all costs.

Frances Eldridge has brought suit in the Supreme Court against the World M. P. Corp. for $9,750 for failure to pay for her services and costumes in "The Little Liar" and for which she gave away the copyright of a contract alleged to have been entered into on Nov. 6, 1920.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has upheld a judgment for $3,547 obtained by Harry Samwick against Elias Mayer, Lona Schneider, Philip Cohen and Jack Borodkin as officers of the Blinderman Amusement Co., because they transferred the assets of the corporation and he was unable to collect from the corporation.

AS A WHOLE......Delightful comedy-romance

on the whole; pleasing romance

DIRECTION.......First rate; never misses a trick

STAR ..................... Best he's done lately SUPPORT ................. Excellent cast all through EXTERIORS ..................... Many pretty scenes
INTERIORS .................... All right
DETAIL .................. Good; well written titles
CHARACTER OF STORY ......Railroad engineer who proves he's good at putting over deals other than railroad

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,855 feet

This is undoubtedly the best story that Wallace Reid has had of late, and he evidently realized this himself, for he's put forth his best efforts in the part of Jim Glover, construction engineer. Yes, and he's gone so far as to forget all about his slick hair-comb and clean face to add realism to the part. But of course he comes back to the real Walie before Agnes Ayers, the heroine, falls in love with him.

The story is rather novel in that there haven't been any just like it of late. It has been adapted from Frank Spearman's novel "The Daughter of a Magnate." It is a clean, wholesome romantic comedy with the two well-blended, and there's a fine background. There's a villain too, but, unlike other villains, he never gets very far in his operations.

The direction is excellent and there's never a chance for comedy that has been missed. There's no particularly extraordinary laughs, but it's a touch here and another there that register genuine humor. And everyone seems to be working toward the same goal.
And everyone gets a chance to do his bit. Reid carries the main role splendidly and other well known players who contribute their respective shares of pleas-ture to the picture are Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres, Sylvia Ashton, Clarence Burton and Lloyd Whitlock.
Snitz Edwards, whose name got a chuckle from the Rivoli audience, provided some more fun as a "hick."

Jim Glover, construction engineer, is selected to guide the president of the road on a trip of inspection.
Laura Gage, the president's daughter, is aboard the special train. It isn't long before Harrison, a director, also on the train, is aware that Jim is attentive to Laura. Harrison wants Laura himself and decides to get her by buying over a strip of land which Gage has an option on. Laura overhears the conversation.

Gage has gone on ahead of the party, and in order to reach her father before the option expires and Harrison can acquire the land, she makes a flying trip during a snow storm on an engine which Glover agrees to run when an engineer cannot be found. The president is reached in time, the land is saved and Glover wins the girl! What more could anyone want?

Here's What Happened

SENNETT'S BEST IS THE BEST.

When Charles Chaplin ran a hall in his foot it was as bad as if Dr. Moretz had lost a finger and it led us to hope that Mack Sennett's little writer will persuade his boss to be very careful in crossing the street. Casualties involving Bennett and Chaplin involve national resources, and if Chaplin is careless we hope Bennett will be careful. If we ever lose one of them it will be bad, no matter who is in the street, and we prefer it be not Bennett.

When he touches high, as he did in his latest release, The Small Town Idol, it is as high as Chaplin and Bennett works all the time. He produces his Niagara of production, almost like the flood that Dickens used to release.

To name the desire of every picture comedy would be to name at once three of Chaplin and at least five of Sennett. Chaplin was only half developed in Carmen. But he reached his peak in Shoulder Arms, Easy Street, and The Kid. Sennett was on his heights with Uncle Tom's Cabin, Salome vs. Shenandoah, Married Life, Love, Honor andDevotions, and now in The Small Town Idol he has his head wrapped in a cloud. He has no trouble in running in competition with Chaplin right at this minute when Charles is at his best in The Kid. We are half inclined to say that The Small Town Idol is the greatest moving picture ever made. For some time we have been convinced that if Sennett would take D. W. Griffith as George Cohan takes a melodrama or a romance and join D. W. within an inch of life, the United States would laugh so that Europe would bear it.

He is within an inch of or so of doing that very thing in The Small Town Idol, but what he needs as a basis is the honest to goodness production of Mr. Griffith to begin on. The Way Down East if Sennett has no scenario handy. This is just a suggestion to a man who seems to need more than the fancied censor has done something to The Small Town Idol. It may have been inevitable.

When Bennett used all of his girls for scenic effect a censor is likely to think that something must be done about it and so thinking do it. A censor who would touch this picture would take a whitewash brush to Raphael, but some one must have had the heart to do it. Bennett was in love with his ambition to take Griffith's Paul of Babylon and join to it the scene in Salome which filled the bird down the bateaux by upsetting the water tank. You remember the scene. "My mistake."

CHARACTER OF STORY......Gifted penman becomes forger by which means he marries the woman he loves and is eventually found out

Lionel Barrymore's fourth Whitman Bennett production hits along the medium line. It's really melodramatic in theme, but the "melo" is feeble, and it's not until the end of the last reel that there's any live action. "Jim the Penman" was quite a success as a stage play and in its screen form maintains practically the same development. The direction is very good and the story smoothly told, and though there are one or two bits a trifle hazy, they aren't important enough to confuse.

The story has to do with the crime of forgery and is interesting because of its plausibility. There is but one incident which might be called an absurdity. It isn't likely a detective could become a guest in the house of the man he was trailing in such simple fashion. There's no good excuse for the woman inviting the man to stay at her home.

Barrymore makes the most of "Jim," but somehow he seems inclined to stare into space for a long stretch at a time without altering his expression. This is probably the more noticeable because the close-ups are too frequent and too long. The whole picture is blessed with an unusual number of close-ups, in fact, of all the players. The star does his best work in the climax, the fight aboard the yacht, when he sends himself and his band of forgers to the bottom, for "society's benefit."

His first attempt at forgery is made upon a dance program, when he forges Nina Bronson's name for the last waltz. Jim offers to save Nina's father from ruin by forging a check. The forgery is discovered, but rather than prosecute Jim, the owner of the check decides to use him, and so for twenty years Jim is bound to serve Hartfield. Jim loves Nina who is engaged to Louis Percival. Through notes forged by Jim they become estranged, and Jim and Nina are married although Nina never loves her husband.

The twenty year period is nearly up and Louise, Jim's daughter, is about to marry the son of an English banker whom Jim is about to ruin. Just as this time Percival, previously ruined through Jim's band, and Nina discover the forgery that separated them, and Jim, realizing that he is trapped, ends it all by sinking the yacht and locking himself and his companions in the cabin.

Offering Should Please A Good Majority

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You have probably shown Barrymore's three previous Whitman Bennett productions—"The Master Mind," "The Devil's Garden" and "The Great Adventure," and should be able to judge from past performances whether or not you want "Jim the Penman." Unlike any of the others, "Jim the Penman" has a tragic ending and not at all the conclusion that most folks will be expecting. Play up Barrymore's name extensively and the title should attract because the play is well known, though an old one.

Perhaps in your announcement, instead of referring to the forgery angle of the story, keep your lines in connection with the title, and refer to Jim's gifted penmanship. You can say: "Don't imitate a girl's signature on your dance program. It may be a bad beginning. See 'Jim the Penman,' Lionel Barrymore's latest Whitman Bennett production, and you'll heed the warning."

CHARACTER OF STORY......Woman governor cannot pardon her husband sentenced to die, though innocent

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 5,000 feet

All told, this latest offering being sold on the state rights market by Plymouth Pictures, Inc., is a thoroughly satisfactory program attraction, bearing a certain angle of box office value that many exhibitors will be able to make good use of in showing it, especially in attracting the attention of their women patrons.

And perhaps the men will be more favorably inclined toward women in politics after having seen "Every Woman's Problem." At any rate the picture is a good argument for suffrage. This is rather a new theme for picture plays, and ought to be a good one upon which to build up an interest in this film. The atmosphere toward the latter reels is perhaps a trifle depressing because of the situation, which places a woman governor in the position of being unable to save her innocent husband, who is condemned to death because of public opinion, and the fact that he has been convicted. The sequence, however, contains a strong human appeal and a good heart interest, which rather relieves the tenseness of the thing. The direction is quite satisfactory and the story is smoothly told. Dorothy Davenport lends dignity to the part of the woman judge, while others who give adequate performances are Willis L. Robards and Wilson Du Boise.

Clara Madison, a poor girl, is elected judge of the Supreme Court in a small city. She has two powerful opponents to contend with, Morse, the editor of the Democrat, who continually attacks her through his paper, and the other, Big Bill Deavitt, leader of the opposing party. Clara convicts an Italian and he is sentenced to death. Two other Italians decide to revenge the conviction of their pal and get rid of the judge by implicating her husband in a murder. Williams, Clara’s husband, had previously threatened Morse’s life for his attacks against the judge.

The Italians, promising Williams, who is a lawyer, a case, get him in front of Morse’s office, and one of the men throws a bomb, killing the editor and wrecking the office. Williams is convicted as an accomplice and sentenced to die. In the meantime Clara has been made governor, but is unable to save her husband’s life. At the last moment one of the Italians confesses and Williams is freed.

Woman In Politics Idea Can Be Used To Good Advantage

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

In view of the main situation in the story, that of the woman judge, you should be able to create a good interest in "Every Woman's Problem." Appeal largely to the women members of your patrons, and you should be able to get quite a little publicity, and without much effort, by securing the co-operation of some local woman’s political organization. Besides exploiting the picture for you, it will be a boost for them.

It would be better to confine your announcements and catchlines to the main situation, but if you think the idea of the woman governor confronted with the ordeal of being unable to save her own husband’s life will have a stronger appeal, you can go to it from that angle. The fact that Dorothy Davenport is Mrs. Wallace Reid may attract the “fan” crowd.

STORY .......... Not impressive screen material; dream phase unconvincing though well done DIRECTION .......... Good on production angles; might have handled players more advantageously
PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Very good
LIGHTINGS .................... Satisfactory
CAMERA WORK .......... Good; double exposure work excellent

CHARACTER OF STORY ........ Selfish Englishman is reformed by a dream in which he sees himself as others see him

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,198 feet

The picturization of Richard Ganthoney's English stage play makes but mildly interesting entertainment. Being unfamiliar with the play it isn't possible to say just how the story was treated, but certainly it wouldn't have found much fame in the sober atmosphere which has been provided for the picture version. There is very little incident and what there is has been padded at length.

Title And Star's Name Have Drawing Power

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You have a good title to announce in this latest Metro picture, which together with the star's name should give you little difficulty in bringing them in. But Bert Lytell has done better things than this. You can probably play "A Message from Mars" and give fair satisfaction. If you care to interest them from an angle other than the story, you might get your local papers to give you some space to devote to a short story telling how the big exterior sets for the picture were made in the world's largest armory. They should be interested in the result.

Use catchlines in connection with the title such as "What is 'The Message from Mars'? The answer will be found at the blank theater." Or, "If you're troubled with egoism there's a cure awaiting you in 'The Message from Mars.' Try it yourself. It cured Bert Lytell in his latest Metro picture."

The best thing in "A Message from Mars" is the message itself, in which the selfish Englishman in a dream is visited by a messenger from Mars who shows the egotist himself as others see him. During this sequence there is some unusually fine double exposure work with one, and often two, of the characters figuring in the double exposure. There is a long stretch of this and the whole is very well done.

Bert Lytell is the almost ego-maniac Englishman. He is capable of much better work than he does here. He overacts considerably and has the appearance of giving more attention to the director's instructions than to registering egoism. Even after he has had the dream and learned a lesson in "charity," he fails to shake off the mask. He's let it grow upon him, seemingly.

Horace Parker, a wealthy egotist, is an amateur scientist who is cultivated by real scientists merely because of his wealth. Horace agrees to finance a project because he is to be given full credit. That night Horace is so rapt up in his importance that he refuses to take his fiancée to a reception. He remains at home alone and is visited by a man who served under him in the war, and who is in need of funds for his starving wife. Parker refuses to see him.

In a dream that night Horace is visited by a vision who calls himself a messenger from Mars. He makes Horace invisible like himself and takes him to the reception where he sees another man making love to his fiancée. They also go to the scientists' club where the members are discussing him and his selfishness. Then the messenger makes a beggar of Horace. When the egotist awakens he has learned his lesson and rushes to the home of the man who sought money. He saves the woman from a burning building and opens his home to the homeless.
Irvin Willat's production of the famous Story by Joseph C. Lincoln.

There are fewer of this type of picture on the market than any other at present, and so you should be sure to get this and give them something different. You can promise plenty of action, good suspense and a fair amount of thrills—enough to satisfy anyone.

Play up Willat's name and recall his past productions, "Below the Surface" and "Behind the Door." Mention the under-sea sequences in "Below the Surface" and "Behind the Door" and promise more of this in "Partners of the Tide." The box office results should prove worthy of any exploitation expenses.

Call, Write or Wire for Screening
The one thing that stands out the most in this picture is Director Willat's intelligent work. His characterization is so marvelous, that he should be entitled to the fame of a director of first rank. His children characters could not be handled any truer to life; nor could his spinster characters.

The submarine views are extremely interesting; they are instructive. The wrecking of the ship looks real.
Some Originality In A Chorus Girl Story

Alice Brady in
"OUT OF THE CHORUS"

Realart

DIRECTOR ..................... Herbert Blache
AUTHORS ................... Harry Chandlee and William Laub
SCENARIO BY .................. Coolidge Streeter
CAMERAMAN .................. Jacob Badaracco
AS A WHOLE .......... Fair entertainment; well acted;
a trifle too long for the material STORY ...... Chorus girl love story with sufficient original features to make it seem new DIRECTION ...... Has developed climax in good shape; spent too much time on unimportant incidents in spots
PHOTOGRAPHY ................. All right
LIGHTINGS ...................... Satisfactory
CAMERA WORK .................. Average
STAR ...... Is pleasing, but not impressive in strong scenes
SUPPORT ...... Vernon Steele and Charles Gerard satisfactory in principal parts; rest fair EXTERIORS ..................... Very few
INTERIORS ................. Realistic theater atmosphere
DETAIL ......................... Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Chorus girl wife's strategy to hold her husband against the plottings of his wealthy parents
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,888 feet

The most prominent feature of "Out of The Chorus," and the thing that will make it provide fair entertainment for most audiences, is a truly interesting, and more or less dramatic theme. Stories of the stage, and particularly chorus girl stories, usually have a large appeal, and this one has the added advantage of possessing some originality. The actual tale could be told in a very short picture, and while this one isn't long, it has more footage than is necessary, which has caused some padding of unimportant sequences.
This doesn't detract much, however, for these incidents have been so placed that the interest holds over them. The direction through most of the picture is good. The climax is worked up especially well.

There isn't anything particularly noteworthy about anybody's performance in the cast. Alice Brady wears some beautiful gowns, and is generally pleasing in all her scenes, but in the strong ones, where a display of emotion is needed, she is not impressive, nor does she make the character as strong as one would expect it to be, from the foregoing delineation of it.
The rest of the cast is just about average, with Vernon Steele in the hero part, and Charles Gerard, as the villain, doing the best work.

They have secured a stage atmosphere in all the theater scenes, that registers very realistically. The dressing room scene, the stage during the play, and the shots of the audience at the finish are better than is usual in such settings. There is a good touch of comedy at the end, when the heroine's family are cought congratulating her on the stage, by the rising curtain.

Florence Maddis, a chorus girl, marries Ross Van Beekman, son of an aristocratic family. Mrs. Van Beekman, senior, is determined to turn Ross against his wife, and to do this, she plots with Ned Ormsby, a wealthy rogue, who really wants Florence for himself. Mrs. Van Beekman contrives to have the latter two constantly thrown together, until finally Ross begins to doubt his wife.

He sets a trap for her, and returns to find evidence that Ornsby has been there, although the girl is the innocent victim of the rogue's scheme. Ross shoots through the door behind which he believes Ormsby is hiding and when Ormsby is mysteriously murdered at his home Ross believes himself the murderer.
At the trial, Florence, to save her husband's life, lies, and says that he shot Ormsby because the latter was with her. The truth, and Ross' innocence are finally established, and the girl's pluck wins her the love and esteem of her husband and his family.

The Star Will Draw

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If your patrons have liked other pictures of the stage, and chorus girl stories, they probably will be pleased with this. You can safely promise them a good story of its kind, and one of the best ways to make it clear is to tell them enough incident of it, to impress with its originality. The title offers opportunity to make evident the kind of a story it is.

If Alice Brady is popular with your people, tell them that she has a part just suited to her in this one.
Mention of the beautiful gowns worn by the star will be interesting to women patrons. If you want a catchline use this: "She was tricked by a mother-in-law who hated her, and still she shielded the husband who suspected her. See what happened then in 'Out of The Chorus.'"
Good Suspense At Close Pulls It Through

Eva Novak in
"THE SMART SEX"
Universal

DIRECTOR ................. Fred Leroy Granville
AUTHOR ..................... Emma Bell Clifton
SCENARIO BY ................ Doris Schroeder
CAMERAMAN ................. Leland Lancaster

AS A WHOLE......Fairly entertaining picture that starts out as sort of romance and ends up with a crook business

STORY......Pleasant farm atmosphere and good romantic twist; is somewhat hazy in spots

DIRECTION......Technically good but allows im-probabilities to creep in

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good
LIGHTINGS ........................ Adequate
CAMERA WORK .................. Average
STAR.......Has a satisfactory part but doesn’t dress to suit it

SUPPORT .................. All do average work
EXTERIORS .................. Many pretty farm shots
INTERIORS ................. Satisfactory
DETAIL ............................. All right

CHARACTER OF STORY......Stranded chorus girl finds good home on farm and later marries wealthy fellow

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,800 feet

For a five reel picture they certainly have it jam-mmed full of incident, and probably because there is so much of it they have had difficulty in keeping it always coherent. The director has secured a thoroughly pleasing farm atmosphere, but to have such a citified residence so adjacent seems a bit far-Fetched. Then too, if Eva Novak is a stranded chorus girl, folks are going to wonder whence cometh the pretty frocks. If stars insist upon wearing Lucille’s latest, they ought to make sure they have the right story in the first place.

This is Director Granville’s first picture for Universal, and all told he has managed rather well with a story containing almost an over abundance of incident. Toward the close the plot takes a new twist and there is some crook business introduced with the discovery of the missing diamonds. The director has handled this bit very well, and a good suspense is created, and the identity of the real crook is well covered until the close.

"The Smart Sex” isn’t the most appropriate title for the picture, but probably because the heroine proves she has brains as well as good looks and wins the hero despite parental objections she’s “The Smart Sex.” Eva Novak makes the most of the chorus girl role, while others are Frank Braidwood, Geoffrey Webb, Mayre Hall, C. Norman Hammond, Dorothy Hagan, Calvert Carter, Margaret Mann, Jim O’Neill and Evelyn McCoy.

Rose is one of a stranded theatrical troupe. With a goose, which she has picked up along the road, Rose enters a theater which is advertising “Amateur Night”.
Rose wins the first prize and the friendship of a rich college student, who sends her to a farm near his home.
Rose is happy in her new surrounings and when Fred, the student, returns from college and has a row with his Dad because of his gambling, Fred also goes to the farm and later tells his folks he is going to marry the chorus girl.

Fred’s parents plan to break up the match by “showing up” the chorus girl. They invite her to their home, but Rose fails to do anything unbecoming, and later when Fred’s father, who is a diamond merchant, misses some stones, it is through Rose that the thief is actually discovered and then, of course, there is no further objection to the girl.

Average Program Picture
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Following close upon her last picture, “Society Secrets,” Eva Novak has another story which gives her a country locale. “The Smart Sex” hasn’t the human interest of “Society Secrets,” but there are other good phases of it which will please a good many.
The latter reels especially are quite satisfactory and there is a good mystery bit in connection with the theft of the diamonds, and of course, the eventual happy ending is what most of them want.

If Miss Novak is popular with your patrons make the most of her name and tie up the title with catch-lines such as: “Can a chorus girl be happy on a farm?
‘The Smart Sex’ gives the answer.” Or, “His parents objected to his chorus girl bride-to-be so they invited her into their home to “show her up.” Did they do it? See Eva Novak’s latest Universal picture for the answer.”
Plenty Of Thrills In This Western "Meller"

Buck Jones in
"THE ONE-MAN TRAIL"

Fox

DIRECTOR .................. Bernard Durning
AUTHOR ...................... Jack Strumwaesser
SCENARIO BY ............... William K. Howard

STORY.......Typical western with excitement and thrills plentiful DIRECTION......Keeps speed and interest high, after slow start
PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good
LIGHTINGS .................. All right CAMERA WORK.....Very good in catching some of the thrills

STAR......Has one of his accustomed parts; is pleasing and works hard SUPPORT......Beatrice Burnham is very pretty and a capable little actress; rest satisfactory EXTERIORS ............... Good western locations
INTERIORS ............... Satisfactory
DETAIL .................. Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Cowboy’s hunt for the man who killed his father and stole his sister

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....About 4,200 feet

Buck Jones’ latest gives him more than the usual amount of opportunity to display his horsemanship, more than the usual number of fights, and an abundance of thrills. So if your audiences like westerns at all they will certainly enjoy such a “meller” as “The One-Man Trail.” It’s a typical western story, not so different from a lot of others, but the excitement and suspense are both there, and coupled with a pleasing performance by Buck, they make it a satisfactory offering to western fans. Jones gives several exhibitions of horseback riding that are skilful pieces of work. The scene where he leaps from a standing position on the horse’s back to the runaway team is a sure-enough thrill, and has been very well photographed.

The picture gets off to a somewhat slow start, which is partly alleviated by a good bit of comedy around an unimportant incident. This is when the cowboys give Buck a typical western farewell in the form of a roughhouse. As soon as the plot gets going, the speed starts and keeps up all the way through. The director has spread the thrills around in a way to keep the audience always looking for the next one, and the fight scenes, which are numerous, both gun and fist, are all well done. The love interest doesn’t enter in until almost the middle of the picture, but most of the forerunning sequences are taken care of by thrills and plenty of action. And when the love story does start, both Buck and his leading lady put it over in good shape.

All the locations are well chosen and some of the western mountain shots are especially good. They all contribute a fitting background for the action. The scene in the gambling den, where the big fight takes place, is also worthy of mention as being very realistically done.

Tom Merrill returns home from the ranch where he is employed, to find that his father has been shot by a gambler, while trying to elope with Tom’s sister, Grace. Grace has gone away with the gambler, Crenshaw. Tom starts out to search the country for the two, and brings his sister back to his mother.

In his wanderings in one town he meets a girl, Cressy, whose step-father is the henchman of the proprietor of the local gambling den. This proprietor is Crenshaw under an assumed name. He has tired of Grace and is desirous of possessing Cressy. He attempts to kidnap her and she is rescued by Tom, who then rescues his sister from the villain. Crenshaw is killed by a fall in the chase that follows, and Tom returns home with his sister and his bride-to-be.

Star’s Following And Western Fans Will Like It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This one has all the points that appeal to lovers of western pictures, and each of the thrills and the fights can be made a point in advertising the picture. Tell about the leap from horseback to the runaway team, about the villain’s fall from the cliff, the fight in the gambling den, and talk about the general speed and excitement all through the picture.

If the star is popular with your patrons, you can promise them a good performance in one of his characteristic parts. Tell about his riding and fighting ability, as displayed in this one. If you want to tell them something about the story, use this line: “See how a cowboy went out to avenge his sister, and brought home a wife in the bargain, in “The One-Man Trail.”“
They Don’t Make “Fatty” Work Hard Enough In This

Roscoe (“Fatty”) Arbuckle in
"THE DOLLAR A YEAR MAN"
Paramount

DIRECTOR ......................... James Cruze

CAMERAMAN ...................... Karl Brown

EXTERIORS ......................... Adequate
INTERIORS ......................... Suitable
DETAIL ......................... Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY…….. Amateur sleuth who wins the fair lady by rescuing a Prince
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,606 feet
Perhaps if “Fatty” hadn’t set such a precedent with his last two comedy riots “The Life of the Party” and “Brewster’s Millions,” this one wouldn’t strike folks as falling short of the comedy line, but after such pictures as the last two were “The Dollar A Year Man” doesn’t quite satisfy. But it’s not Arbuckle’s fault for he takes advantage of every opportunity the story affords, but that’s where the hitch comes in. the story lacks the humor that puts Arbuckle’s pictures over.

It’s good in spots and the haunted house episode is great, but that isn’t enough to satisfy. In the first place the director lets altogether too much footage roll by before there’s even a laugh. And the first reel practically is just pictures relying on the titles to tell what it’s all about. Besides being the proprietor of a laundry which perfumes the linen, “Fatty” is an amateur sleuth and a member of a Yacht Club. The laundry and the perfumed linen might have been worked in for some comedy, but it plays a small part in the fun. The haunted house provides the biggest laugh in the picture. “Fatty” is left alone and things begin to happen in the shape of contrivances planned so that the house will live up to its reputation of being “haunted.” Lila Lee is a pleasing lead lady and the others are well suited.

The Yacht Club of which “Fatty” is a member is to dine Prince Rupert. Fearing “Fatty,” who is not a blue-blooded member, will commit some indiscretion during the visit, the members plan to have Kate Connelly, the club detective, lure the hero to a haunted house and keep him prisoner until after the ceremony.
It happens that Tipton Blair plans to actually kidnap the Prince and make him a prisoner in the haunted house.

Kate gets “Fatty” to the house but a fight ensues with members of Blair’s gang which is awaiting the arrival of the real Prince. In the meantime Prince Rupert is playing “hookey” from the dinner, and is motoring with Peggy, who “Fatty” wants to marry.
Out of curiosity they visit the “haunted” house and are in time for the fight between “Fatty” and Blair’s gang. Members of the Royal party in time to save the Prince, “Fatty” is the hero of the fight and wins Peggy.

The Star’s Name Should Be Sufficient To Get Them In

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“Fatty’s” latest falls a bit short of the standard set by his last two pictures, but like everything else, pictures can’t all be knock-outs, and so even if “The Dollar A Year Man” isn’t as funny as “Brewster’s Millions,” the fact that it’s Arbuckle and he does his best will probably satisfy the majority. This is not to say that this one hasn’t any humor. It has. But not enough of it. At least not as much as folks have come to expect of “Fatty.”

In view of the star’s recent successes and those in anticipation, you need not worry about showing them this one. They’ll find enough to satisfy them until his next release. Play up the comedy in the haunted house episode and use catchlines based on “Fatty’s” efforts to rescue a Prince and win the girl he loves.
The Paramount press sheet can be consulted for additional ideas in exploitation.

Some Short Reels

"Something To Worry About"—Educational
Type of production..................................1 reel scenic
This is a Chester-Onting number, and while the subject dealt with is a much photographed one, this picture gives a little different aspect of it that makes for some novelty. The whole thing is views in Yellowstone Park, but they are taken in mid-winter. All the geysers are shown in action and some very good close-ups of the Giant Geysers. Just as she starts to rumble, have been obtained. Then there are shots of various animals in the park in their winter surroundings. The grizzly comes out of his cave looking very lean and hungry, long enough to be photographed. Views of the ice and snow formations on cliffs and woods make a pretty hit, and in fact every familiar object in the park presents an entirely new appearance in winter dress. A moderately satisfactory offering.

"On With The Show"—Century-Universal
Type of production..................................2 reel comedy
Written and directed by James Davis, and with most of the laughs supplied by Harry Gribben. Some of it is good and some just ordinary. It starts off rather slow, but develops some good stuff about the middle of the first reel, when they do a burlesque melodrama. This latter is in the form of a motion picture which the hero is supposed to have taken, and in the end it shows up the villain (Gribben), who is in the audience. This part also brings into view the Century lions, who perform before the camera. This stuff carries the pictures along until very near the end, and is all pretty good. The last bit hasn't much amusement in it, but on the whole the picture will be a satisfactory offering. Gribben puts his stuff over well, and most of his gags will register with any audience.

"The People of Old Bruges"—Educational
Type of production..................................1 reel scenic
This is one of the World Wandering brand scenes, and as a whole, should prove an interesting reel to most audiences, chiefly because of the quaintness of the subject. The shots of the streets of Bruges, the oldest town in Flanders, which are presented at the beginning, bring to view many spots that have been historically prominent for centuries. There is a view of a tower which has been destroyed and rebuilt three times in a thousand years. Then come some interesting types of inhabitants shown with their dog teams, and in their homes. Interiors of the houses are shown, and they are furnished exactly as they have been for a hundred years. The last part of the reel shows girls and women at work making lace, which is the principal occupation of the city. The people shown are all interesting types, and a final shot of some children making faces at the camera provides a good laugh at the finish.

"The Goat"—Metro
Type of production..................................2 reel comedy
Buster Keaton continues to put over some of the best comedy in recent days in this latest offering. It was written and directed by the star and Mal. St. Clair, and they have doped out just as many new gags and bits of tremendously funny business as have featured the foregoing numbers of this series. There are so many stunts, each good for a big laugh, and the stuff is pulled so fast, that the attempt to tell what they are would require a page, but it is enough to say that nearly every foot of both reels is a scream. It's the kind of stuff that gets almost anyone, and this number should be one big hit for any kind of a house. Keaton uses his acrobatic ability to great advantage, and performs some stunts which not only are a riot, but are mighty clever tumbling tricks on their own account. One of the funniest bits in the picture is when Buster, dodging a detective, climbs onto a newly carved clay statue of a horse, trying to disguise as part of the statue. The horse gradually caves in and crumbles up. The result is a scream. Altogether a fine comedy.

"Her Western Adventure"—C. B. C. Film Sales
Type of production..................................2 reel western
This short feature, which was written and directed by and also stars Grace Cunard, is just about an average offering of the type. It will get over with western fans on the strength of its regulation thrills, and a very fair element of comedy. The latter is provided by a cowboy who trades his horse for a motorcycle and then tries to use horsemanship tactics with the machine. The star rides well and is right at home in the part. The story is of an eastern girl who inherits a ranch. She goes there to live and discovers that the foreman is a cattle rustler. As he is about to make away with her she is rescued by the one cowboy who stuck to the ranch, and they soon discover a mutual attraction in each other. The action through most of it is fast enough, and should satisfy them where they are strong for westerns.
Some Short Reels

"The Garden of The East"—Burton Holmes—Paramount

Type of production............................................1 reel travelogue

This one is a trip to the island of Java, and is more in the nature of a half-length travel picture, as most of the reel is devoted to views of natural beauty on the island. Most of the shots of rivers and tropical vegetation and of huge bamboo groves are very pretty. The reel starts with a view of the harbor of Batavia, followed by a brief trip around the city. Then come views in the surrounding country. About the most interesting bit in the reel is that devoted to the sugar cane fields. Snub is extremely method of irrigation he hands, and gives a good idea of how the cane is cut, bundled and shipped to the mills. The reel as a whole is just a moderately satisfactory one.

"The White Horseman"—Universal

Type of production............................................Western Serial

This is Universal's latest serial offering. Art Acord, who starred in "The Moon Riders," is also the star of this one. It is in eighteen episodes. Five of these were reviewed, and if the balance holds up to these, it will be a very good bet in the serial line. The suspense is sustained exceptionally well in these first episodes, and ought to surely keep the audience coming if they are strong for this type of picture. It is highly imaginative in its ideas, but it's a good story in spite of its impossibilities. There is an abundance of excitement furnished by fast and furious fighting, and the expected number of thrills are to be found in Acord's acting. Acord is a good, typical western hero. He looks the part, rides and fights with plenty of pep and ability, and gives a generally satisfactory performance. Iva Forrester is the feminine lead. She is a pretty girl, and does everything required of her in a creditable manner. Acord plays the part of Wayne Allen, a young westerner, who falls heir to some apparently worthless land. A complicated system of mines is discovered on the land, which shelter a treasure hidden by an extinct band of Indians. The story then develops into a struggle over this treasure between the hero, his girl's villainous uncle, and a band of outlaws, headed by "The White Spider."

"Running Wild"—Pathe

Type of production............................................1 reel comedy

This is a Vanity Fair number, featuring Eddie Boland, and with some of the Vanity Fair girls in evidence in parts of it. There's a funny idea all the way through it and the gags are nearly all good ones. It is better than many of the preceding offerings of this series, both in business and the way Boland puts it over. He's eluding the cops from the outset of this one although he doesn't know what it's all about. He runs into a restaurant kitchen to hide and has considerable trouble impersonating the chef. After charming him all over taking the cops for himself and he discovers that he is heir to a large estate. It's a fast reel and should go over pretty well with almost any audience.

"Tough Luck"—C. B. C. Film Sales Corp.

Type of production............................................2 reel comedy

This is the latest number of the "Hallroom Boys" series. Sid Smith and Harry McCoy are featured as the two boys. There is a lot of business that is good for big laughs in both reels, and there is some that isn't so good. The laughs are well placed though, and it will hold up satisfactorily on the strength of the really funny gags, and several amusing situations. There is some more of the clever photography which has featured other numbers of this series, and it will continue to provide a thrill. Most of the comedy in this one centers about the boys' entry into the ranks of the book agents. They can't get a job, even when they learn from a drowning man the location of a treasure, so they finally try to sneak into the town. There's no keeping them out of a busy man's office, and their persistence makes the thing amusing. It runs off pretty fast, and the boys put their stuff over in good shape.

"Who Was The Man?"—Universal

Type of production............................................2 reel western

This short western stars Hoot Gibson, and gives him a chance to go all the way from comedy to thrills, with a pretty fair supply of both. Hoot puts the stuff over in good shape, and it's a better story than the average theme of short westerns, because there's an original turn to it. Also a big surprise at the finish, which in this case served her right. Hoot appears on the ranch as a tenderfoot whose father wants to make a man of him. He falls in love with the rancher's daughter, but when all the cowboys rough him up without any retaliation on his part, the girls passes him up. She is just about to marry the foreman of the ranch, when Hoot shows him up as the head of a band of cattle rustlers, which in this case served him right. He takes After a thrilling fight and finally the girls gives him the laugh. There's some good humor in it and it ought to be a satisfactory number, unless they demand a clinic at the finish.

"La Rue of Phantom Valley"—Pathé

Type of production............................................2 reel western

This is a Tom Santschi offering, and like the preceding numbers of this series, it is a thoroughly high class picture of its type. The locations, all outdoor westerns, are splendid, and the photography, too, is especially good. The whole cast is a capable one, and Santschi, in one of his accustomed parts, gives his usual performance. The story is a good one. Santschi is a mysterious character living in the desert, and is reputed to have hidden wealth. A dance hall girl and a gambler frame a plot to rob him. They follow him to the desert where the girl pretends to be dying and is taken in by Santschi. He falls in love with her and eventually tells him of her plot. After a proof of her love, Santschi forgives her and they are happy. If you use short westerns at all, this one will be very acceptable.

"Putting Nature Next"—Educational

Type of production............................................1 reel scenic

This is a Chamber of Progress picture, and takes up a number of points in the Philippine Islands. The greater part of it is made up of a study of various native occupations and examples of the Filipinos' handiwork. The start shows some views of the city of Cebu, and then a little journey to the surrounding country. This part shows how native women weave cloth from bamboo fibre, shows them making pottery and baskets, and weaving hats. They are extremely skilful, and the whole operation makes a really interesting subject, it should make a satisfactory offering.

"Blue Sunday"—Universal

Type of production............................................2 reel comedy

This is the latest starring vehicle of Lyons and Moran, who also wrote the story. The subject is very pertinent to the present time, and the boys have built up a gag around almost every conceivable situation in connection with the bluest of blue Sundays. Of course, there are all sorts of conditions that could ever exist under any blue laws, and it is also very funny. Starts off rather tame, but it soon commences to produce laughs, and there are some big ones through all the rest of the picture. It took quite an imagination to conceive of a state of affairs such as are shown, and it will surely be appreciated by almost anyone who sees the picture. Nothing is permitted on Sunday, according to Eddie and Lee's idea, except breathing, and the result is a "baby silencer," a Quaker police force, and the bootlegging of everything from bird seed to weddings. Those caught moving faster than a walk or wading in the pools. The whole thing is on similar lines. It's a good number for Lyons and Moran, and ought to make a hit.

"Fellow Romans"—Pathé

Type of production............................................1 reel comedy

This is a Snub Pollard number, with Marie Mosquini and Sunshine Gambo featuring largely in the fun, as well as an unprogrammed comedian whose stuff is very good. The idea is a good one although it by no means new. It's a burlesque of a Shakespearian drama, with Snub acting as property man and Sunshine Gambo acting everything wrong in all its details, but a good gag out of oldtime slapstick stuff, and it's a pretty lively reel from start to finish. On account of its age, some of the business will not get over any too well in the bigger houses, but it should make a good one for the smaller theaters, and be moderately satisfactory for any.

The formation of the Allied Distributing Corporation creates a definite market for the product of the worthy independent producer. It assures him an outlet in the independent field that will put his production plans on a definite basis.

For the operator of the independent exchange in every territory it means an assured quality product with a definite number of releases during the year.

In operating on the Franchise basis with the buyer he is assured of such product and such quality and in sufficient number so that he can place his business policies definitely before the exhibitor much in the same way that the program companies do.

And for the Independent Producer it offers a market where the intensest kind of showmanship prevails in the exploitation of a picture, which means it will earn its utmost.

Our plans are Mighty Interesting. They are a definite step in the co-ordination of the independent faction.

Six Years Ago
Almost six years ago, on Saturday, May 1, 1915, WID saw the day coming when director would be recognized as a potent force in production. It was at that time he was going to be a hard fact because of the fact that no concern or group of lucers has a monopoly on brains of the business, and if there are not enough rich men producing end to give one concern absolute eminence. This means a keen interest in the services of the directors.

Curb Stars' Salaries
German Producers Say Collapse of Industry Can Be Avoided Only By Limitations

Karl H. Von Wiegand, special correspondent of the New York American in Berlin, cables his paper, in part, the following:

As a result, all the large German film producers, it was understood today, have formed a combination to curb the salary demands of the film stars.

"The stars, said to be inspired by the tales of tremendous salaries paid in America, are declared to be making demands of $100,000 and more for a single role. The producers have agreed to set a limit and not to allow the stars to play off one producer against another. The limit has been placed at $2,000 marks a day, which is approximately $30 at the present rate of exchange, for shadow luminaries of the first order. Stars of the second magnitude will be limited to $1,500 marks per day. A forfeit of 100,000 marks is the penalty for any producer violating the agreement.

"The average reduction in the salaries of the high-priced artists is calculated at 50%. No specified number of workdays are to be guaranteed in contracts hereafter. Contracts now running are not affected.

"The picture directors are considered in a class by themselves and are not included in the salary limiting agreement of the producers.

"The defense of the producers is that only by this sort of organization (Continued on Page 2)

can the collapse of the German film industry be prevented?

An Ulterior Motive?

That Germany has an ulterior motive in filming stories of historical character, that is of history dealing with allied countries, is the thought voiced in an editorial in Sunday's New York Times. The editorial in full follows:

"A motion picture broker in New York lately received for sale in America some 30 motion pictures, all made in Germany, but none of them dealing with German life. His statement that the American public could hardly be expected to welcome series showing the late enemy at home is reasonable enough, but the character of some German productions of the recent past or the near future suggests that the why lies in a truly German motive in locating all his filmed stories in foreign lands. There was lately shown here with great success, a German picture based on the life of Mme. Dufu and the frivolities of the Court of Louis XV. Announced for early appearance is another spectacular production dealing with Anne Boleyn and the habitual witticisms of Henry VIII. In process of preparation is a history of Catherine the Great, England, France and Russia having thus been exposed in all its infancy, one waits for a pictorial biography of Cesare Borgia, unless the German still bores to drive a wedge between Italy and the rest of the Allies.

"The Germans have heard that America is a great moral nation. To their simple track minds it must seem only natural that after going in his neighborhood movie and learning the infamies of British, French and Russian history, the solid American citizen would come to the conclusion that only one nation in Europe was moral enough to deserve his appreciation. And so it may be, unless the present tidal wave of reform rolls on. If that happens, the American picture fan—assuming that he is still allowed to see the pictures—may think that back in the days of Henry VIII. England was merry indeed, and that something is to be said for such a liberal country."

New F.P.-L. Star
Reported Under Way for Rich-Barthelmess—Griffith Offices

Say It Isn't So

was reported yesterday that Players-Lasky was about to choose a new male star in the person of richard Barthelmess, who, it will be recalled, was borrowed from D.

Griffith, Inc., to play "Youth" in the Fitzgerald's "Experience," where he is said to be the property of the company's Island studio.

is understood that at the time arrangement was made, it was agreed for Famous Players that suitable material be found for Barthelmess, the contract the latter with D. W. Griffith, Inc., would be taken over. No one could be announced at Famous for a statement.

Griffith offices Albert F. Grey, manager, stated there was no definite information to the reporter.

Barthelmess' contract with

Griffith is generally understood, is still to that existing between the actor and Dorothy Gish, where-

Griffith exercises a kind of supervision over the productions without taking direct part in their making.

Directors Re-elected annual meeting of the stockholders of Famous Players-Lasky, was held yesterday, proved a tie affair. The same board of di-tors was re-elected.

Director Is Insurance

That WID realized the importance of the director to the office is clearly indicated by what he said on Sunday,

November 24, 1918:

"The director is insurance.

He has not yet reached the point where the director is of great value in bringing money to the box office, but we are definitely practical at the present time where a director's name gives great value in bringing a picture with exhibitors. It is a matter of a few months

possibly a year, when the names of certain directors will bring money to the box office."

I Am Guilty!
What a tremendous box office title; what a chance to stand the people of every city in line. It's the title of J. Parker Read Jr.'s next Louise Glanum "A. P." special production—Advt.

Republican State Committee Sends

Out Editorial "Educating"

Public for Censors

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Albany, N. Y.—The news bureau of the Republican State Committee has actively taken up the work of "educating" the public to the necessity of censorship as outlined in the Clayton-Lusk bill. An editorial captioned "Clean Movies" has been sent out to over 400 newspapers in the state. It says, in part:

"How to make moving pictures clean, and how to keep them clean may be some problem, but the Legislature is doing right in taking some action to purify this industry to some extent at least."

"There will be wide differences of doctrine as to what constitutes a clean picture and an unclean picture, but there can be some steps taken that will put a check upon producers who figure that appealing to the worst that in us will mean the biggest profit for them."

Deflation?

Tribune's Financial Editor Thinks

F. P.-L. German Move Significant—Comments on Rise

Several of the morning papers yesterday commented on the activity of the film issues in Monday's market.

The financial editor of the Tribune

said:

"The 'movies' are deflating, a process which it is believed will materially reduce operating costs and at the same time cut off the income of some former high-salaried stars. The Famous Players-Lasky Corp., it is understood, has made progress for deflation by curtailing home production and securing new films abroad, notably in Germany, where the depreciated value of the mark has enabled the company to buy much more for its dollars than it can here in America. The listed 'movie' stocks were strong in yesterday's session on the Stock Exchange, while the majority of other issues were showing the effects of short selling and profit taking.

Famous Players at 75 was up 434 points while Loew's gained 154 at 201 2/5."

F. B. Warren Out

Packed Belongings and Left Associated Producers' Offices
Monday—Lichtman In

F. B. Warren, since the formation of Associated Producers, Inc., general manager of distribution for the directors' organization, withdrew from the "A. P." on March 28.
Warren was notified of the action of the board of directors in terminating his contract on Monday by President Oscar A. Price, who has just returned from the coast.

When he was reached yesterday afternoon for a statement, Mr. Warren said he had nothing to say, and referred all questions to his attorney, George Edwin Joseph. At the office of the latter no statement was made for publication.

That Al Lichtman, formerly manger of sales for Famous Players-Lasky, would succeed Warren at Associated Producers, Inc., has been talked of in film circles for some weeks past.

On March 14 WID'S DAILY, in a coast dispatch, stated that Lichtman had signed with the organization.

When Lichtman returned from the coast late last week he refused to make any statement regarding the closing of the deal.

There was considerable speculation yesterday over Warren's future plans.

Those who were yesterday informed of his severance of relations with Associated Producers, Inc., recalled that when Warren left the Toddiott Organization last summer,

there was also considerable conjecture

as to what he was going to do.

Warren himself made no statement at the time and remained silent until he announced that he had assumed the general managernership of Associated Producers, Inc.

"I'm in Charge"

When Al Lichtman was finally reached at Associated Producers, Inc., he admitted that he had taken Mr. Warren's post as general manager of distribution. He said:

"I am now in charge here."

When Oscar A. Price was reached for a statement, he said:

"Mr. Warren has resigned and Mr.

Lichtman has been named to succeed him."

Eleck Ludvig, secretary-treasurer of Famous Players, has returned from his trip to the coast.

Newspaper Opinions

"Man-Woman-Marriage"—First National

AMERICAN—Some people will find it appealing. Others will think it overdone, but stars in it. The actors seem to have had no effect on its worth. It is truly an expensive picture. * * *

Dorothy Phillips is a charming actress and James Cagney is a perfect husband for her.

TRIBUNE—The good points in the picture are not nearly as strong as the bad. The story is good, but the acting is weak.

SUN—Three of the most whimsical characters that have ever reached the screen: "John S. Robertson's" "Sentimental Tommy" has created a picture of beauty, even more far-famed than his "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." MAIL—For sheer beauty of treatment and picturization it would be difficult to conceive anything to surpass the film version of "Sentimental Tommy." GLOBE—It has the wistfulness, the innocence, the whimsicality that in Thurston—Thurston alone. The real Barrie has never before reached the screen. MAIL—It would be the part of kindness to forget all about this film, because the rest of the bill is so superlatively good.

Perhaps all who see "Sentimental Tommy" will want, and want very much, to see "Man-Woman-Marriage." The first film that truly is an epic. The first film to make the audience feel that they are in the world of the film, not just watching a movie. This film will be remembered for years to come as one of the greatest achievements in film history.

"Rods of Destiny"—Goldwyn Capitol

TRIBUNE—For a fairly good picture this has been made from it, it follows the stage version closely.

MAIL—It would be the part of kindness to forget all about this film, because the rest of the bill is so superlatively good.

WID Was Right!
After fighting for director recognition for years, WID, on May 9, 1918, said: "Way back in 1914 I began amminin on the importance of the DIRECTOR. In those days a salary of two or three hundred dollars was considered excessive for the man who had charge of the making or (breaking) of a production. I remember that in 1915 I hit a list of the first thirty or forty directors, listing them order according to my guess.
I should have nosed something out, but that was exactly what had in mind. It made more people talk about directors than nything which had been written to date.

The importance of the director is recognized as never before. One of the prominent manufacturers said to me this week that in the future he imated to pay all of his big laries to directors, reversing the old situation of two hundred or the director and fifteen ured for the star, by giving large, big end and the
at the little."

Los Angeles—Prominent state educators held meetings here last week in San Diego and Santa Barbara with F. S. Wythe, head of the California producing organization which made "Film Lessons.

These educational films, which will be installed by the beginning of the next school year in all the leading schools of the state, will furnish practical instruction and standardize the course in civics. The course is in 30 reels, prepared and edited by national educators.

IT'S TOWN TALK—"THINGS MEN DO"
Pioneering

Back in 1918, WID urged ex-patriots to acquaint their public with the names of directors.

The idea was that by August 18, 1918, it is interesting:

It seems to have been the costly to look down upon the cub, until it finally came to point where he could no ger be denied.

To every exhibitor I want to suggest that they begin immediately, if they have not done in the past to acquaint their cub with the directors who develop various pictures.

Long Reported Move Develops—Fred

Coast

Alexander Pantages, the millionaire

Greek theater owner, is in New York closing a deal which means a new entry into the producing field. That Pantages would produce pictures has been reported at various times for almost two years. The move is now crystallizing.

At the local Pantages office in the Fitzgerald Building, General

Manager Keefe admitted that the reports reaching New York from the coast were correct. He stated that Pantages had been working for the past three months in rounding out the details of his producing organization.

The plan, it appears is three-fold.
Pantages will make his own pictures;

expect to appear in the films that they buy pictures to be shown in his string of Western and Southern theaters.

He plans to build a large studio in Los Angeles, where his producing headquarters will be located.

Plans are now under way for the necessary changes in the Pantages theaters, to allow the exhibition of pictures.

At present, there are 42 theaters in the tact with Federated Film Exchanges of America, whereby they will deliver a series of 52 one reel comedies at the rate of one a week. This is in addition to the previously contracted series of Monte Banks two reeilers.

Federated issued a statement covering its last week's meetings. Another series of one reeilers has been contracted for, but final details have not as yet been settled. For that reason, the producer's name is being withheld.

The statement did not go into detail as to changes in the territorial line-up. These changes are understood to be under way. Details may be available later.

Fred C. Quimby, formerly of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., it tied up in the deal in a manner that was not definitely learned yesterday. Quimby is just back from the coast. It is understood that he is to figure in the distribution of the product, but this is mere conjecture, since he could not be reached yesterday for a statement.

WID'S DAILY from time to time has published reports of Pantages' reported entrance into the producing field. On April 25, 1919, the reports first circulated. At that time, it was doubtful in New York that Pantages would enter the manufacturing end of the business. It was then removed that his theaters were to be jointly interested in the company.

On Jan. 13, 1920, this publication in a Los Angeles dispatch, stated that Pantages was ready to start producing to supply his houses with an exclusive line of product. On July 8, 1920, in Seattle comes the report that Pantages was making arrangements to renovate all of his theaters to permit showing of films. These plans call for the installation of projection machines and Wurlitzer organs. The plans, as then stated, was to show pictures and vaudeville at the prices formerly secured for vaudeville only.

Theater for Legitimate Shows

The theater talked of for the southeast corner of 7th Ave. and 50th St.

is a reality. Earl Carroll will build it. The Tribune in commenting on the deal yesterday said, in part:

"The 7th Ave. and 50th St. corner was intended for improvement with a moving picture theater. Several months ago interests associated with the Strand, at Broadway and 50th, were dickering for possession of the property. The deal was said to have advanced to the point of closing when a deal developed which deterred

the transaction, which in time was abandoned."

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send long your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned it.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—During the showing of "The Last of the Mohicans" at the Strand, Manager Hyman added a novelty which he called "A Prologue Colonielle." One of the shots in the film shows a Colonial scene.

The narrative, "Cellina My Own," then a spectacular Colonial dance "The Iowa Gavotte." The novelty was interrupted for a moment, and gave in flesh and blood a picture that had been produced from Cooper's book upon screen.

Junction, Colo.—Taking part in the activities of his home town to the extent of throwing open his theater for the free entertainment of out-of-town guests at conventions, fairs and other functions, has set up a splendid matinee business Otto Nelson, manager of the Magic. He keeps in touch with all the shows, clubs, and societies, and ad serves the free entertainment for attending. The result is that theater is mentioned in press accounts of the going, and he can always count on good boost for the recipients of his courtesy, cites a recent example in "The Knife Man," with which he did dramatically well after a convention committee had publically thanked him "One of the most wholesome and interesting pictures they had seen."

Atlanta—An exploitation campaign made full use of the possibilities of the Howard Theater Motion Picture News, an eight-page paper, used by the management of the theater in putting over "Prisoners of Love." On the cover was a portrait of Betty Compson with the dates of her first picture and its showing date at the Howard. The second page was devoted to an article on Miss Compson, with portraits. On the third page was the prologue, and on the fourth page sketches of the players in support of the star. The house organ was distributed to members of the theater for a week in advance of the showing, and certainly raised a desire to see the picture on part of those who read the prologue account of the film and the

Reciprocity

It's A Necessity

So says Samuel Goldwyn, while in London—Speaks of the International Picture

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Loudon, Eng.—Great Britain, and France and Italy and Germany have all got to produce international pictures, too, and there will have to be a good deal more reciprocity between us all than there has been in the past," says Samuel Goldwyn in an interview published in The Film Reuter. Goldwyn left here recently for Italy.

Speaking of the cost of production, Mr. Goldwyn said that "although salaries have come down, the total cost of film production has increased from 200 to 400 per cent."

It is generally understood here that Goldwyn's trip is for the purpose of annexing more authors to write directly for the screen. It is also understood that he is of the opinion that his organization can amply fill its producing needs at its Los Angeles studios and, that, for the present at least, no European production is contemplated.

New Italian Units

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Rome—A number of new Italian film companies have been launched. One is the Rosa Film Co., now capitalized at 6,000,000 lire. Another is a company which will make educational pictures and news weeklies exclusively. The V. I. S. is the name of a third organization with a capitalization of $500,000. All three will make historical pictures based on Dante's Divine Comedy.

Allen of New York for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Brazil, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela, Guiana, Central America, Panama Canal Zone, Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, Santa Domingo, Haiti, Spain and Portugal.

Before and After

Both a prologue and an epilogue will be used in a motion picture being made at the Capitol next week for the presentation of "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari."

The Empire Film Exchange of Chicago has bought "Every Woman's Problem" for Northern Illinois and Indiana from Plymouth Pictures, Inc.

Cutting Deposits

There has been an increase of increased competition the remaining distributors find they must keep in line with whatever advanced steps are made.

That idea has not affected all of them, however. Famous Players still insists upon advance deposits and the payment of all films, at least seven days in advance of bookings. First National of New York states its sub-franchise system does away with advance deposits.

The Theater Owners' Chamber of Commerce has been fighting for credit for some time, and the $5,000 trust fund was established recently. United Artists waived demands for advance deposits and extended credits to T. O. C. C. members. A T. O. C. C. official stated yesterday that this trust fund covered activities so far as some of the other exchanges were concerned, while in the case of the remaining number he stated there was a verbal agreement which protected the exchanges from defaulting exhibitors.

Because of the manner in which various companies divide the local territory, a considerable number of exhibitors are involved. For example, the local Robertson-Cole exchange covers all of Green and Berkeley, New York, Northern New Jersey, Long Island and as far north as the Canadian border. Goldwyn, Pioneer and Reafart operate in the same manner. They also take in Connecticut. Others like Famous Players go about half way up the state and the Atlantic exchange picks up the business from that point.

Some of the managers of the exchanges involved did not care to be quoted yesterday. Henry Siegel of Select had no comment to make; Irving Schmertz of Fox took the same attitude, as did Robertson-Cole. George Uffner at Universal stated his company extended credits whatsoever, inasmuch as the business was purely a cash one. He added that the company formulated its policy regarding advance deposits according to the character and integrity of the exhibitor involved.

W. E. Raynor of Pathé could not be reached for a statement. Joe Streimer, local manager for United Artists, said that under the agreement his organization held with the T. O. C. C. no advance deposits were sought.

Recover Stolen Films

Three men were arrested in the Hotel America Wednesday night, charged with having $13,000 worth of stolen films in their possession. The films, the police say, were a print of "The Kid," alleged to have been stolen in Boston last Saturday, and an episode of "The Lost City."

The prisoners gave their names as Nathan Nathanson, David Hochman and Henry Pasquaie, all of New York. The police arrest has Pasquaie said he intended exhibiting the Chaplin film at a theater he owns in Havana, and was dickering over the price when the detectives broke in. It is alleged that Pasquaie has been buying stolen film in New York for the past year.

Regarding Deposits
Claim That They Are Being Elim-

Met With Denial
Following the publication in WID'S
DAILY of the attitude of certain exchanges towards the elimination of advance deposits in the New York territory, there was considerable discussion in film circles yesterday.
It was learned from reliable sources that certain companies named as having practically ceased asking for ad-advance deposits still adhere to the former practice of asking for deposits.
A rather peculiar situation developed with distributing heads of various companies so far as statements for publication were concerned. No company involved cared to make a statement inasmuch as it was assumed that were any company to issue a flat denial the impression might follow that the company was not eliminating advance deposits, as claimed.
From those who should know it was learned that contrary to whatever has been claimed, certain of the companies are still insisting upon ad-

Natl' Ass'n. Takes Action When Explosives Bureau Complains of Violations

Violations of the law against carrying films in the subway have caused the transportation committee of the National Association of D.W. Griffith to address a warning against a repetition of the offense. A letter signed by P. H. Stilson, chairman of the committee, has been sent to all members calling attention to the fact that it is illegal to transport films under any conditions in the subway. It is absolutely imperative that those violating the rule be subject to a heavy penalty and possible imprisonment.

"The Bureau of Explosives files a complaint with me today," says the letter, "that two boys carrying film from two well known exchanges to a theater were apprehended in the subway and their case is receiving consideration at the present time. It is absolutely imperative that you take this matter up at once with your shipping departments to avoid a recurrence of this offense."

The boys referred to were employed by a Brooklyn theater.

Hearing on Tuesday

D. W. Griffith Among Those to Speak Against Censorship in Albany—Situation Serious

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Albany, N. Y.—Among those who will appear here Tuesday at the hearing on the Clayton-Lusk bill and will speak in opposition to its passage will be D. W. Griffith, Thomas Dixon, Mayor Canfield of Kingston and Sophia Irene Loeb of the State Child's Welfare League.

Assemblyman Walter F. Clayton, the introducer of the bill in the Assembly, said yesterday:

"I am profoundly convinced that the bill will have the effect of incredible censorship, forcing the attendance at the movie theaters from 10-20% for the reason that thousands of people in the State of New York will not attend the movies and will not allow their children to attend the theaters because they do not know the character of the pictures that are being shown, consequently exerts exhibitor of motion pictures in the state should be as highly in favor of my bill as I am myself. We hope to reach the producer, not the exhibitors."

Governor Miller has definitely stated that he favors a strict picture censorship.

Sydney S. Cohen issued a lengthy statement regarding his organization's stand. Extracts from his statement:

"Our organization represents the motion picture theater owners of the State of New York and is not to be confused with other irresponsible combinations professing to talk for the motion picture industry."

"We serve notice on all producers that we want clean and wholesome pictures and we do not want unclean or sensational exhibitions. We want the public to make the distinction between the producer and the theater owner. We, the theater owners, make no connection with them."

"This bill if enacted into law will put out of business of the extra taxation, a few hundred small theater owners throughout the state who cannot pass extra cost back to their patrons because of the business depression now prevailing, particularly in mill and factory centers."

DIRECTOR ..................... John S. Robertson
AUTHOR ...................... Sir James M. Barrie
SCENARIO BY ................. Josephine Lovett
CAMERAMAN .................. Roy Overbaugh

AS A WHOLE ...... Beautifully produced with all the quaint charm of Barrie transferred to the screen

STORY ...... A bit overcrowded with incident for one feature but continuity saves it

DIRECTION ..................... Excellent
PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Also excellent LIGHTINGS ..................... Quite artistic CAMERA WORK ................ Very good

PLAYERS ...... May McAvoy given a real chance at last; Gareth Hughes does the best work of his career; others all splendid

EXTERIORS .................... Pretty
INTERIORS ...................... Good

DETAIL ........................ Very good

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... A combination of two well known Barrie works

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 7,470 feet

Admirers of the works of Sir James M. Barrie have a delightful treat in store for them in Paramount's picturization of a story adapted from two of Barrie's books, "Sentimental Tommy" and "Tommy and Grizel." And not only those who like and know Barrie, but folks who appreciate pretty and wholesome pictures, will be well satisfied with "Sentimental Tommy," which opened at the Criterion this week.

Considerable credit is due Josephine Lovett, who had the difficult task of writing the scenario, and considering that she had such a wealth of incident to combat with, Miss Lovett has done very well. But it remained for director John S. Robertson to do the big job and it is doubtful if it could have been done better. All the quaint charm of Barrie has been transferred to the screen, and both in the handling of the cast, exterior and interior settings, the matter of detail and other whatnots that make real pictures, Robertson has again proven himself one of THE directors. His last big picture was the never-to-be forgotten "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" with John Barrymore.

And last but not least, all due praise must be accorded the cast as a whole, but the featured players in particular—May McAvoy, Gareth Hughes and Mabel Taliaferro. As Grizel, May McAvoy has the best chance she has ever had, and a deserved one, to show what she can do. She is refreshing, beautiful and to a good many the most delightful feature of "Sentimental Tommy." Gareth Hughes, as Tommy, is all that Barrie meant Tommy to be. His work is splendid. Mabel Taliaferro has a short role and lives for such a brief time that the wonder is why she is featured. Of course her name is an attraction. George Fawcett makes a good deal of Doctor Gemmell.

Grizel is the daughter of the "the painted lady," a social outcast, who still believes her lover will return. Her "bairn," Grizel, is ostracized by the other children in Thrums. But Tommy Sands and his devoted sister Elspeth come to Thrums and the kind-hearted Tommy is friendly, although the jealous Elspeth always keeps her distance. When "the painted lady" dies, old Dr. Gemmell makes Grizel his housekeeper. Time passes, the doctor dies and Grizel, now twenty-one, loves Tommy, who is well known as an author in London. Tommy visits Thrums but cannot decide whether or not he loves Grizel. She, however, realizes that he doesn't love her, and after Tommy returns to London, Grizel's unhappiness turns to insanity. Tommy returns and marries Grizel although he knows she will hate him when she becomes herself. After two years of devoted care by Tommy, Grizel regains her health and is happy with Tommy when he vows his care came of love, not of pity or remorse.

Be Sure To Treat Them To This, And Give Credit Where It Is Due

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Sentimental Tommy" will undoubtedly go down in the annals of picturedom as one of this year's best pictures, so it shouldn't be necessary to say that every exhibitor will want to secure it for an extended run. Its exploitation possibilities are extensive, not perhaps so much because it is the work of Sir James Barrie—because everyone isn't familiar with his books—but more so because it is a delightfully wholesome and charming picture—and there aren't half enough such pictures available.

Give those who are responsible for the picture their just share of credit, and in using John Robertson's name as director, recall his "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and promise them more good things from him in "Sentimental Tommy." May McAvoy and Gareth Hughes should have equal prominence, and you should have a well filled cash box after every showing of "Sentimental Tommy."
A LEAF FROM A WOMAN'S SOUL
Which meant more to him—the frail, beautiful girl, who welcomed his baby, or the pampered, spoiled creature who found motherhood too irksome? CHARACTER OF STORY......Texan looking for excitement finds plenty of it in small western town

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,000 feet

Admirers of Tom Mix have a real thriller in store for them in "Hands Up," and all "western" fans generally, will be well satisfied with the latest picture from the Fox cowboy star. The story isn't unusual or original either, but that is an unimportant matter in this case, for it's the star's stunts and the fights and gun play that are in it that make it a real wild and woolly western.

The first reel or so is slow in getting started, and they've put in some unnecessary padding, but once they are started there's enough action to suit anyone. The first thrill comes when Mix ropes a cowboy and swings him over a wire, lowering him into a tank at frequent intervals until he apologizes for insulting the heroine. Then again when the heroine's little sister is playing in the road, Tom saves her from stampeded horses. Later there's a "killing" and Tom is on the job to get the guilty one. And once more Tom's single-handed fight against the Mexican gang as he arrests Tony for murder, provides more excitement. And finally the hero's rescue of the heroine, gives the final thrill in "Hands Up."

This is about the livest western Mix has made in some time and he has managed to get in a good number of stunts, many of them new. He has plenty of opportunity to show what he can do with the lariat and there's shootin' galore. The settings are of the usual western character, the direction is satisfactory, and the supporting cast is adequate, including Pauline Curley, Charles K. French, Lloyd Bacon, Frank Clark, Sid Jordan and others.

Tex Roberts arrives in the frontier town of Tascosa looking for excitement. He takes a job on Clint Wadley's ranch. Tex has a row with Wadley's good-for-nothing son, Ford, and Tex leaves the ranch. Later Ford is murdered. Tex suspects a Mexican and old Wadley suspects Tex. The Mexican tells a pretty straight story and one that leads Tex to believe that the town's bad man, Dinsmore, is the guilty one.

A lynching party sets out to get Tex but he keeps them off by throwing dynamite at them and finally squeals on Dinsmore, who makes his get-a-way, taking Ramona Wadley with him. The remainder of the picture is a fight in which Tex has all of Dinsmore's gang to beat up before he rescues Ramona and they live happy ever after.

Should Go Big Where Star and Western Pictures Are Liked

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who are in the habit of showing the Fox cowboy's picture and satisfying their audiences will be sure to give them one they'll like if they book "Hands Up." It will appeal strongly to all "western" fans and you can go the limit on your promises of thrills. It might be well to enumerate a few of them to get folks interested. Tell them Mix will show them some new tricks in "Hands Up."

This is a pretty wild and woolly one, so if your folks aren't over keen on gun-play and real wild west atmosphere, they perhaps won't fancy this one. However, there are enough in favor of Tom Mix and his pictures to give the picture a good percentage of bookings. Direct your announcements mainly to the male portion of your patrons. It will be sure to please men and boys.
Bebe Daniels' Latest Is Thoroughly Amusing

Bebe Daniels in
"Ducks and Drakes"

it, and the comedy does

ous situation; has staged production very well

DETAIL ...............All right

CHARACTER OF STORY.....Series of tricks by which man cures his sweetheart of flirting

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,876 feet

"Ducks and Drakes" is another step up the ladder for Bebe Daniels. Not that it gives her anything particularly new to do, but it establishes her more firmly as a first class purveyor of light and frolicsome entertainment. The whole thing is almost entirely Bebe Daniels, and she contrives to make herself wholly enjoyable from start to finish. She wears as many diff erent beautiful gowns as the scenes in which she appears, and her ever changing wardrobe will doubtless be vastly interesting to the feminine portion of the audience. She at all times looks the pretty, piquant and flirtatos "Teddy" that she is supposed to be.

The story itself is not new, nor is it particularly well defined, nor does it amount to much. But it really is unimportant, for a very well staged production, coupled with capable direction by Maurice Campbell, who has not let an opportunity for comedy slip by him, makes the whole thing a successful piece of entertainment. There isn't a drag in it anywhere, for the star and the director have kept things on the move right from the start.

The whole cast is well chosen, and each one of them gives a smooth and well rounded performance. Jack Holt doesn't need an introduction as a leading man, and his work is of the same caliber as his past performances. Wade Boteler also contributes much to the humor by his characterization.

It may be that some people will consider bits of the comedy a trifle suggestive, but those parts are done so spontaneously, and in such an evident spirit of pure fun, that it would take a pretty straight faced individual to criticize them very harshly. From about the middle of the picture, the sub titles begin to play an important part in putting the comedy over, and there are some very cleverly written ones that usually secure the desired effect—a big laugh.

Teddy Simpson is a wealthy young orphan girl, who, instead of wanting to marry Rob Winslow, whom her aunt has selected for her, is bent on getting in trouble through flirtations instincts and a desire for excitement. Rob's friends, victims of her telephone flirtations, offer to help him cure her. Part of the cure takes her for a motor ride with Hazzard, who takes her alone to an exclusive gun club. Here the other conspirators make things so warm for her that Teddy is cured for all time, and when next Rob calls he finds her through with all desire for excitement and flirtations, and ready to consent to a speedy weddin.

Anyone With A Sense Of Humor Will Enjoy It

ox Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can depend upon showing a picture that will prove highly amusing and entertaining, and one whose comedy cannot fail to register with most people, in giving them Bebe Daniels' latest. You can talk about the star as much as you want, for she is always the center of the action and is always equal to the occasion. Be sure to let your women patrons know about the extensive display of feminine ammaret they will see.

You won't need to talk about the story unless you want to, for it is unimportant, but if you do, mention the situation where the heroine's sweetheart finds that she has been telephoning all his friends, who have all been flirting with her. You can talk about a good cast, and tell them that Jack Holt is leading man. It's good fun, and you can safely promise your patrons an hour's amusement.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Based on idea that your fate is pre-destined and no matter what you do, you cannot escape it
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,955 feet

Somehow after viewing Pauline Frederick's latest Goldwyn production, which is Channing Pollock's adaptation suggested by an O. Henry story, one seems inclined to give a sigh of relief and offer a word of thanksgiving that it's all over. It's not so much that "Roads of Destiny" contains an unpleasant atmosphere, as the fact that you know just how it's going to end, and in view of that fact you're apt to renege at having to sit through the reels in which the hero dreams three different ways of trying to escape "fate," when all the time you know he'll do the most logical thing—marry the heroine.

Miss Frederick's acting is the best thing in the picture and if it goes over it will be because of her performance. She isn't on the screen all the time and when she isn't her absence is felt. In the Northern episode of the story she is at her best in a part that provides her with a sort of "Madame X" make-up. And again when she sacrifices herself for the man she loves she does good work. The other members of the cast are suitable and give adequate performances.

The story is based on an idea that is often the basis of heated discussions and there are arguments both pro and con. The question is whether or not a man can overcome fate. Those interested in the subject should find the picture interesting. The story consists of really three parts, woven together rather well, preceded by a form of prologue, and concluded with the epilogue.

David Marsh, a young inventor, is in love with Ann Hardy, who in turn is loved by David's brother, Lewis. Lewis Marsh has betrayed Rose Merritt (Miss Frederick) and cast her off. When he sees the success of his brother's love for Ann, he reproaches him and threatens to end his life unless he (Lewis) can marry Ann. David, overcome by the sudden flood of events, sinks in an armchair and falls asleep. In his dreams, the figure of Fate appears and warns him that no matter which road he takes, it is decreed that he shall find happiness with Ann. Then follow the dreams, the first taking place in the North, the second in the East and the third in his home town. David awakens and finds that Lewis has been visited by the same apparition and has decided to marry Rose, while David marries Ann.

Will Satisfy Them If You Think They're Interested In Theme

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With the name of Pauline Frederick and a story dealing with a subject in which many folks are interested, it's likely that "Roads of Destiny" will satisfy them although it will be largely the star's work which will appeal to them.

You can say: "Do you believe what you do makes any difference either in your life or in your final fate? Rose Merritt, in 'Roads of Destiny,' coming to this theater (mention date), found that no matter what she did or where she went the same fate was in store for her. The photoplay was made from Channing Pollock's dramatization of O. Henry's story of the same name. It is a Goldwyn picture, starring Pauline Frederick." If you want exploitation suggestions, the Goldwyn press sheet contains a fine assortment.

"THE GREAT DAY"
Hugh Ford Prod.—Paramount

DIRECTOR ........................................................ Hugh Ford AUTHORS........ George R. Sims and Louis N. Parker
SCENARIO BY ................................. Eve Unsell
CAMERAMAN ......................... Hal Young
AS A WHOLE...... Fair entertainment; dramatic moments not properly worked up

STORY......Drury Lane melodrama stage play adaptation; screen version doesn't hit any high spots

DIRECTION...... Hasn't developed situations with any force; attention to technicalities good

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... All right
LIGHTINGS .................. Usually good CAMERA WORK ............... Satisfactory

PLAYERS......English players put little force into their work and the story here requires it

EXTERIORS .................. Very pretty
INTERIORS ................. Good

DETAIL .................... Correct

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Daughter of English Lord marries man whose first wife makes her appearance after he thought her dead

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 3,827 feet

This is the second Hugh Ford production released by Paramount, but the first of the British-made Famous Players-Lasky productions. "The Great Day" falls way short of being a great picture, and the adaptation of the Drury Lane melodrama is just barely fair entertainment. The story development is logical and well enough done, but there is no dramatic force. The various situations are introduced and concluded in the same tone. There is no variation and even the climax is reached without any tensity of action.

The spectator is treated to a new atmosphere in the exterior settings found in “The Great Day.” There are a number of picturesque bits of English country, furnishing backgrounds for the action, and a short sequence taking place in the Alps looks realistic. The director has given good attention to technical matters, but the picture lacks “punch,” or the sort of thing that puts a picture over—makes an impression. The players, too, are at fault for not making the bigger scenes stand out. They don’t vary their emotions or actions in accord with the moment.

Arthur Bourchier is not an impressive Sir John Borstwick, nor does Bertram Burleigh make the most of the inventor who marries Borstwick’s daughter against the latter’s wishes. May Palfrey’s appearance as the daughter is limited to few scenes. The others aren’t important. “The Great Day” isn’t likely to bore anyone to any extent for it has already been cut to less than four reels.

Frank Beresford and Clara Borstwick are married against the wishes of her father, Sir John. Immediately following the marriage, Lillian Leeson, to whom Frank had formerly been married, appears on the scene with intent to blackmail. Frank had told Clara of the former marriage, but really believed Lillian dead. Frank is called to Paris to identify a former pal whom he believed dead and who was formerly the husband of Lillian. Frank recognizes Dave Leeson and they return to England. Dave frustrates the plans of Lillian to spoil Frank’s happiness, and there follows a reconciliation.

There is more to the story, but it isn’t definite enough to include. A sequence has something to do with some Bolshevik-looking characters and with names to match, who try to entangle Frank in some sort of “phony” business.

Stick To Name Announcements. Promises Won’t Do

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Except that folks may be interested to see what an American director can do with producing in a foreign country, “The Great Day” doesn’t hold forth much for the exhibitor to work with. Its most perceptible laxity is “punch.” Its action runs along in a monotonous sort of vein with little variation in which might be called its “tempo.” The big, or nearly big, moments, arrive and depart leaving little to impress you.

You can announce it as Hugh Ford’s second Paramount production, recalling his first, “The Call of Youth.” It wouldn’t be well to make promises for this, other than that it contains real English atmosphere, and is an adaptation of the English stage play. Announce it as a Drury Lane melodrama, and catchlines relating to or giving an idea of the story will not be out of the way.
William Fox announces his forthcoming production

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS
A production, gigantic in scope, portraying the life of Mary Stuart, one of the most remarkable and romantic figures in history.

For two years William Fox has been quietly working on this production, tapping all the vast resources of his powerful organization to make the photoplay presentation the greatest ever screened.

J. Gordon Edwards, who directed the Fox magnificent production, "Queen of Sheba," is directing "Mary Queen of Scots." He, and a company of Fox players, are embarking immediately for Europe; the concluding scenes of this gigantic historical drama will be made in France, Scotland and England, where the ill-fated queen lived her romance, made her fight and enjoyed her brief triumph.

No single historical work has been followed in writing this scenario; no published romance or drama has been used as the basis for this story. The Fox production of "Mary Queen of Scots" is founded on material of unchallengeable authenticity, a corps of literary experts, under the direction of Mr. Fox, having spent two full years in sifting from the archives of history the great dramatic romance of the woman whose beauty swayed the destinies of nations.

Bill Hart Has Somewhat Different Role In His Latest

William S. Hart in
"THE WHISTLE"
Wm. S. Hart Prod.—Paramount

DIRECTOR ....................... Lambert Hillyer
AUTHORS ...................... May Wilmot and Olin Lyman
SCENARIO BY ................... Lambert Hillyer
CAMERAMAN .................... Joe August

DIRECTION .................... All right
PHOTOGRAPHY .................... Fair
LIGHTINGS .................... Sometimes very poor
CAMERA WORK ...................... Average
STAR.............. Gives his usual pleasing performance SUPPORT............ Frank Brownlee makes too many

EXTERIORS ....................... Satisfactory
INTERIORS ....................... Suffice
DETAIL ..................... Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY....... Factory worker seeks revenge upon employer by rescuing latter's son and bringing him up as his own
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 5,359 feet

After all Bill Hart is the cowboy star, and he's just suited to that kind of story. However, it's rather a limited forte and probably Bill realizes this, and that's why he wants to retire. This is not to say that "The Whistle" isn't a good picture. It is, and the star acquires himself capably as the factory hand who sought revenge for the death of his son. But it doesn't give him the opportunities which suit him best. For instance, in the usual western there's plenty of chances for some good fight scenes. In "The Whistle" in order to give the hero a place to show how he can fight, they invent a rather weak excuse for a scrap by having Bill resent a fellow worker's rough language.

Hart's present release has been given a satisfactory production and has been well directed.

The cowboy hero acquires himself capably in the part of the factory worker and his emotional work is good, except that one or two close-ups are held a bit too long. Myrtle Stedman is satisfactory as the mother, and Georgie Stone is good as the son, and Will Jim Hatton plays another son.

Robert Evans swears revenge upon Henry Chapple when his son is killed, while at work in Chapple's factory. Evans gets his chance when Chapple's machine, in which his young son is riding with the chauffeur, goes off an open bridge. Evans rescues the boy and brings him up as his own, making him work as his son had done. Evans quarrels with another worker on a construction job and is shot. It happens that Chapple is the owner, and comes along just as Evans is shot. He recognizes his former employee and sends Evans to be cared for. During the illness Chapple's wife keeps the boy, who calls Evans his uncle, in her home, and grows to love him. Later Evans confesses that the boy is her own, and offers to go to prison but Chapple refuses.
Star's Name Will Be All You'll Need
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

William S. Hart in
"THE WHISTLE"
Wm. S. Hart Prod.—Paramount

Bill Hart's pictures are always certain to give satisfaction, and while perhaps they liked "O'Malley of the Mounted" better, "The Whistle" is different, and gives the star a role unlike any he has had recently. Announce Hart's name. That should be sufficient to interest them, but if you want catchlines for pre-showing announcements you could use: "Is revenge a compensation? Evans thought it would satisfy him for the death of his son, but did it? See his latest Paramount picture, 'The Whistle.'"

Perhaps the title doesn't suggest the story, so if you want to use teaser lines in connection with it that might attract attention, or if you think they'd like to know why it's called "The Whistle" say: "His life was governed by the factory whistle." You might refer to the capital versus labor question, which the story touches upon, also.

Excellent Mystery If You Don’t Mind Some Improbabilities

"THE OTHER WOMAN"
J. L. Frothingham Prod.—Hodkinson

DIRECTOR .................. Edward Sloman
AUTHOR ..................... Norah Davis
SCENARIO BY ................ Not credited
CAMERAMAN ................ Tony Gaudio

AS A WHOLE..... Good mystery picture but they’ve lost sight of logic in making it mysterious STORY..... Has fine element of suspense and keeps you guessing until the end DIRECTION..... Mystery business gets beyond his control; things left unexplained and ending is unsatisfying
PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Very good
LIGHTINGS .................. All right
CAMERA WORK ................ Good
PLAYERS..... Jerome Patrick really of stellar prominence; Wm. Conklin, Jane Novak, Helen Jerome Eddy and Jos. Dowling good
EXTERIORS .................. Satisfactory
INTERIORS ................... Good
DETAIL ..................... Not always looked after CHARACTER OF STORY..... Man with two minds marries one woman under one name and another under a second name

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 5,800 feet

Much mystery is the outstanding feature of “The Other Woman,” despite the fact that the title may lead you to expect otherwise. And there’s so much mystery that they’ve lost sight of plausibility more than once, although perhaps those who like this sort of entertainment aren’t going to be annoyed by the fact that certain angles of the story are never explained.

Not being familiar enough with medical science it’s impossible to say whether or not the author has taken liberties with the functions of the brain in writing his story, but whether or not such a thing as one person having two distinct minds, is possible, “The Other Woman” is based on just such a proposition. But the picture would be a whole lot more believable if the person with the two minds didn’t undergo so many changes. He’s introduced as John Gorham, then becomes Langdon Kirven, returns to the Gorham person, and finally remains Kirven. The condition of loss of memory is an actual thing, and commonly called amnesia, but the case of Gorham-Kirven must be something much worse. A title explains that Kirven’s predicament was brought about by a severe shock. Another caption refers to his being in prison. Further explanations of these references would clear matters considerably.

Jerome Patrick deserves stellar prominence in this picture, for he gives an excellent performance. In fact the whole picture depends almost entirely on his work and he proves himself quite capable.

Spencer Ellis is attacked by an unknown man, but a ragged stranger comes to his rescue. Ellis recognizes him as Kirven, his business partner missing five years and husband of Avery Kirven. But the man insists he is John Gorham. Ellis gives him a chance to become a man, and two years later Gorham is an influential figure in the South, and engaged to Ellis’ cousin, Naomi Joyce. While searching for the real Kirven, Ellis learns that Gorham is an escaped convict and forces Gorham to disappear. Then the real Kirven returns to his home and cannot explain where he has been for five years. Later, a second change overtakes him and he returns to Naomi as Gorham, and they are married. When a child is born, Gorham again becomes Kirven and returns to Avery, who has learned of his apparent “double life” and sends him back to Naomi.

Will More Than Satisfy Those Who Like This Sort
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Aside from the mystery element of “The Other Woman” folks may find it interesting because of the medical angle in connection with the disease known as amnesia, even though it is perhaps a bit too extreme to be comprehensive. Nevertheless the director has tried to make his case very clear, even going so far as to show a cross-section indicating the workings of the man’s mind. Announce it as a Frothingham production and give Jerome Patrick a share of prominence. He deserves it.

In order that folks will not be misled by the title you could use explanatory lines such as: “He was married to Avery Kirven but who was ‘The Other Woman’ whose picture he carried? He didn’t know.” Or, “If you suddenly found yourself married to two women and couldn’t explain how you acquired wife No. 2, what would you do? See this most unusual case of amnesia in the latest Frothingham production ‘The Other Woman,’ released by Hodkinson.”

Some Short Reels

“The Spell of The Homebrew”—Universal
Type of production ............................................. I reel comedy

A burlesque of the regulation Western thriller, with all the accepted thrills overdone in a way that makes for pretty good amusement. Eddy Boland is the featured comedian, and as a diminutive cowboy hero, he is really funny. The titles are in verse, parodying “The Shooting of Dan McGrew” and these couplets add in some cases to the amusement. Fletcher has a villain playing opposite, about seven feet tall, and the big fight at the climax is a big laugh. Eddy hangs by his knees in one place, to pick the girl off the villain’s horse in true western style. He misses horse and all and falls on his head. A pretty girl is in the heroine’s part, and altogether, the number should make a good comedy offering for any audience.

“The Love Lesson”—Pathe
Type of production ............................................. I reel comedy

Eddie Boland is the star of this one, and he is aided and abetted by several of the Vanity Fair Girls. Some of the stuff goes over well and some of it flops, so that the thing as a whole is just about an average comedy reel. Boland gets the laughs when there are any to be had, but a number of the gags are not overly humorous. The idea is a pretty good one. Boland is a young millionaire who uses a book on love making to help his wooing. He tries all the tactics suggested by the book, but he always picks the wrong kind of girl, and gets it in the neck. There’s about one good laugh for every time he tries it, and there’s a big laugh at the finish.

“The Big Secret”—Sunshine-Fox
Type of production ............................................. 2 reel comedy

This Sunshine is one of the best of their offerings so far reviewed. At St. John is the featured comedian and his reputation as a fun producer should make the picture a good drawing card. Also Al puts over a lot of very funny stuff in this one. There are a bunch of good gags which St. John gets away with in great shape, and he makes every possible use of his acrobatic ability, which also results in many laughs. Trick photography is one of the main features in the fun of the thing, and the way the villain is made to appear and disappear and be in several places at the same time is pretty sure to get laughs from anyone. It’s all foolishness of the most ridiculous sort, but it’s the kind of stuff that’s nearly sure-fire. It should be a very satisfactory offering.

“Dande-Lions”—Century-Universal
Type of production ............................................. 2 reel comedy

This one has the Century trained lions as its feature. The animals, with the aid of two negroes and a couple of fair comedians, make up a mighty lively picture and one that will afford a greatly amount of amusement and a number of thrills. It is the kind of stuff that will be enjoyed by almost any audience, which makes it a very satisfactory offering. There aren’t any connected plot to the thing. It is made up of a series of incidents in which the lions chase and almost catch every one in the cast. They wrestle with the comedians, tear the clothes off them, and make for a safe exit by a gutter running through the whole picture. There is some comedy business supplied by the two comedians that also is funny stuff.

“Moonshine”—Educational
Type of production ............................................. 2 reel comedy

This is a Mermaid comedy, featuring “Ham” Hamilton. It’s a good one not only in a clever idea, but in the offering of better and far more new gags and pieces of funny business than the majority of comedy numbers. There are so many laugh-making stunts in it that it is impossible to begin to enumerate them, but suffice it to say that it will make everybody laugh at some time or other, and most of it will prove hugely amusing to almost any whole audience. The way it was received at the Rivoli is proof of that. “Ham” puts his comedy over better in this one than in any picture he has been seen in, and besides the stuff that is funny in itself gets a lot of laughs on his own personal account. It is a first rate comedy offering for any kind of theater.

“The Outlaw”—Universal
Type of production ............................................. 2 reel western

Jack Perrin is starred in this short feature, which is a pretty good offering of the type. It contains several real thrills and has a very fair element of excitement running through a more or less regulation plot. Perrin is the bad bandit at the beginning, the leader of a gang. He rescues the heroine from death twice, and then saves her from his own band. He falls in love with her then, and reforms. Perrin rides well and puts up a good scrap with his fists and gives a generally good cowboy performance, even though he appears too neat and well groomed for the part. It will be a satisfactory number where they like westerns of the standard type.

“Rush Orders”—Pathe
Type of production ............................................. 1 reel comedy

This one has Snub Pollard for its star performer, and he is still assisted and backed up by Marie Mosquini and Sunshine Bambo, while Hughe Mack is also very much in evidence. The comedy in this one is pretty good in some places. There are several sure laughs and most of it is fairly funny. There’s one good time to start it off when Snub, after being advertised in a sub-title as traveling in his private car, comes riding into the picture on a flat car propelled by Sammy. Then there is a lot of business in a quick lunch restaurant owned by Miss Mosquini. Snub gets hold of some cakes stuffed with gunpowder. Eventually he wins a home by steering all the customers into Marie’s cafe. It’s a fairly satisfactory comedy reel.

“Dead Easy”—Educational
Type of production ............................................. 1 reel comedy

This is one of the Vanity brand. While there are a few laughs in it and some parts are mildly amusing, the greater part of the business fails to register. It has a fairly funny idea for a basis, but stalls along without developing it much for half the reel. Earl Rodney and Irene Dalton have the principal parts. Rodney tries too hard to be sure that the gags register in most cases. The story of it is about a young artist and his sweetheart, both starving to death. He decides to end it all by jumping in the river, but is rescued by a couple of body-buyers, who give him fifty dollars for his. The rest of it is made up of his efforts to elude the gloomy two. It’s only a mediocre reel.
Some Short Reels

"Roman Roméo"—Universal
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy

This is the latest offering from Lyons and Moran. It's a sure fire idea, and while not new, the boys have injected a lot of new stuff into it, and they put it over in great shape. It starts off rather tame, with a scene in a country barn party, with Eddie and Lee as a couple of hicks in love with the farmer's daughter. There's some fair comedy in this part but not much. Then the heroine goes home and reads about Rome. The scene changes to the days of Rome, with Eddie and Lee fighting for the Princess' hand. It's a very clever burlesque. There are a lot of laughs provided by such things as the lady telephoning to the Coliseum, and all sorts of mixtures of ancient and modern times. Sub-titles blending old English and modern slang add a lot to the fun. It's a good bet for any kind of theater.

Pathe Review No. 98
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy

Eddie Barry is starred in this reel, which has a fair comedy idea, and which registers a good deal of amusement on that score, even though the players are not particularly funny comedians. Barry does a great deal of mugging, which is funny for a time but which loses its punch before the end. In this one, his friend is expecting a rich aunt from Zululand, and to make her feel at home, the friend fixes up the house like a Zulul home, and makes Barry doll up as a Zulul chief. Auntie brings home a Zulul lady, and the latter falls violently in love with Eddie. Her efforts to win him in Zulul style are good for a number of laughs, but aside from this, there are not many gags or much business that registers. It should go over fairly well, however, on what it has.

"A Forest Sampson"—Pathé
Type of production........................................1 reel western

This is one of the Holman Day series, produced by Edgar Jones, who also plays the title role. It has a fairly interesting story, and is well enough done, except that Jones is not a universally popular type of hero. If you have used any of the preceding numbers of this series and they have been popular, this one should be satisfactory, as its theme has more interest in it than most of the foregoing ones. It's about a rough, untamed man of the wilds, who rules everyone with whom he comes in contact by brute force. His sweetheart is falling in love with a smooth villain when he comes along and ends it with a knockout. The villain then robs the lumber camp and by pretending friendship for the girl, shows her how she can tame her wild man by tying him up until he learns his lesson. When this is done the villain is about to make away with both money and the girl, but is prevented by the man of the wilds, who breaks his bonds and captures the crook.

"Screen Snapshots" No. 22—C. B. C. Film Sales
Type of production........................................1 reel fan magazine

This issue starts off with a few shots of Barbara Castleton "waiting at the church"—but only for a picture. Then come a number of close-ups of Tom Mix, Buck Jones and other cowboys, performing on horseback, at a round-up. An Indian also performs some difficult feats on a horse in this part. Then there is a short bit featuring Matty Roubart, the boy actor, in a full sized drunkard's part, which he manages very creditably. Following that is a shot of a horse and a lion performing together under the guidance of Paul Bourgeois of Universal. Charles Ray is next "shot" delivering one of his pictures by airplane, and the reel ends with a view of the reception tendered the picture stars upon their arrival at San Francisco to attend the moving picture fair. This part includes close-ups of Clara Kimball Young, Bebe Daniels, Bryant Washburn, Mary Miles Minter and Mary Thurman. Fans will find this number up to the standard of the series.

"Pirates of the West"—C. B. C. Film Sales
Type of production........................................2 reel western

This is the first of a series of short western features, starring C. Edward Hatton, and with Frances Parks playing the feminine lead. It should be a good bet where they like thrillers, for a good western story has been provided containing quite a strong element of excitement and a lot of suspense. Both principal players handle the parts in very satisfactory style. Hatton looks the part, rides well and puts up a good scrap with his fists, which are the three principal requisites of a western hero. It's nearly all exterior scenes, and they are all good western locations. The story is not new, but it has the kind they like. Old Hank Lewis has been digging for years for gold, without success. The heroine's father is about to foreclose a mortgage on the old man, having discovered that there is gold on his land. Jack Kelly discovers the plot and saves Lewis' property for him, and after being put in all wrong with his girl, through the schemes of the villain, finally clears himself and wins her.

HOW I PRESENTED 'A TALE OF TWO WORLDS'
Br. S. L. ROTHAfel

'TALE OF TWO WORLDS' did remarkable business at the Capitol Theatre. There is a short episode in the early part of the picture laid in Pekin during the Boxer Rebellion. As soon as this was finished and before the title announced that the action had been switched to America, I "faded out" the screen, revealing a stage setting of a balcony in Chinatown. A girl singer, costumed like Leatrice Joy as "Sui Sen" in the picture, then sang the Chinese lullaby from "East is West." The setting was in the centre of the stage, masked by a scrim decorated with long Chinese banners, and the singer was flooded by mellow lights. The interlude was applauded at each showing.

Action for $100,000 and Attachment Against Associated Producers

Ed B. Warren, formerly general manager of Associated Producers, filed a suit for $100,000 against the corporation on Saturday.

also filed an attachment in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, City of New York, against the corporation, in the name of B. Warren, plaintiff, and B. Clifton, assistant treasurer, and upon whom the papers were served, defendants.

attachment held was heard before Justice Joseph E. Newburger, and he dismissed the suit, stating that the corporation, as the agent in the hands of the corporation, had no right to intervening in the transaction.

The new attorney, Arthur Butler, is acting for B. Warren.

The suit is one of the few that have been brought against the corporation in recent months.

The corporation has been very reticent in regard to the case.

The suit is an attempt to recover some $500,000 that was invested in the manufacture of motion pictures.

The corporation is represented by a large number of attorneys, including A. Price, president of A. P., and E. Clifton, assistant treasurer.

The corporation has filed a counterclaim against the corporation, and it is expected that a settlement will be reached within a few weeks.

The suit is expected to be heard in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, City of New York, on Thursday, and it is expected that the corporation will be represented by a large number of attorneys.

Reported in Philadelphia Famous Players Are Negotiating Outright Purchase of Stanley Co. (By Long Distance Phone)

Philadelphia—It is reported here that after extensive negotiations Famous Players-Lasky are on the verge of an outright purchase of the Stanley Co. of America. This cannot be confirmed here at this hour (9 A.M., Saturday morning).

Ezek. Ludvig, counsel of Famous Players, when asked relative to this report, said: “Mr. Zukor is in Europe. Mr. Lasky is in Los Angeles. Mr. Consueco in Montreal. I assume that if there were any such negotiations on that I would know of them. I think one of these gentlemen would have told me something. In my opinion there is nothing to it.”

It is known that Famous Players and the Stanley Co. of America, are on very close terms. Famous owns a large block of stock in the Stanley Co., and is otherwise financially interested in that concern.

Exhibitors and Exchanges Leave for Rochester—Some to Stop Over at Albany
Three cars full of exhibitors and exchanges in as many special cars left Grand Central for Rochester at 4:30 yesterday afternoon to attend the joint meetings of the New York State Exhibitors' League and six exchanges' organizations which operate out of New York. Buffalo, Albany, Boston, New Haven and Philadelphia.

All told there were about 90 in the party, divided about equally between members of the Theater Owners' Chamber of Commerce and the New York F. I. L. M. Bradlina's Plan—Ernest Shipman to Be Interested in Distribution Latter Sells Film Doraldina will form her own producing company, as indicated in these columns some time ago. She will take a picture a year and these will be made either in New York or California.

Ernest Shipman, who sailed for Europe on Saturday, will be identified with the Doraldina company and will actively interested in the distribution of the product.

It developed yesterday that before shipman left for Europe he closed a deal with Associated First National for the distribution of "Cameran of Royal Mounted," a Ralph Connor story filmed by Winnipeg Prod.

It was expected that First National would handle this production as well as other Connor stories made in India.

Doraldina has been released from Metro contract.

Back from Montreal
The group of Famous Players stars and officials returned yesterday morning from Montreal, where they attended the opening of the Capitol Theatre on Saturday evening.

The Director
Sunday, November 24, 1928, Wid said:

"The opportunity for the independent producer who is making special films directed by a truly capable producer is brighter at this time than ever before."

"The coming of these specials is not going to in any way interfere with the success of our really capable stars, but it is certainly going to put a beautiful crimp into scores of almost stardom and to get away with murder and foolish salaries because someone spent money announcing them as a star and then forced their product upon the exhibitor by means of a program-releasing contract system."

Beaverbrook Says Prices Are Too High—Foreign Managers Not Disturbed
London—Lord Beaverbrook exploded a bombshell here in the form of a letter to the Daily Express, announcing that his circuit of theatres, the Provincial Cinematograph, would book no more American pictures for the first quarter of the year on account of high rental prices and the congested state of the market.

However, British manufacturers are dead against any reduction in rentals and it seems to be the opinion of well-informed quarters that nothing will come of the move.

The Provincial Cinematograph Theatre controls 35 theatres, according to the latest Kinematograph Year Book. This unit, another of those controlled by Sir Oswald Stoll, are two of the most important cinema circuits in England.

Foreign managers of some of the larger American distributing companies were not particularly disturbed by the report coming from London.

Neelan Film for Capitol
It was reported yesterday that the Capitol theater is trying to secure Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton's Placard" for a showing at the theater. The production is for Associated First National release.

In granting Neilan's personal representative, when reached yesterday refused to comment on the report.

New Censor Moves

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Washington—A number of recommendations have just been made to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Corporation Counsel Stephens which are designed to supplement existing regulations governing the exhibition in Washington of motion pictures.

These recommendations were submitted at the request of the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners, Mr. Rudolph, following a conference between the Commissioners, Harry M. Cran dall and A. Brylawski, representing the exhibitors and representatives of those seeking the censorship of films.

The recommendations, generally speaking, follow those outlined by the National Association at its recent New York meeting.

Censor Peril in Nebraska

Lincoln, Neb.—Unless the Senate votes opposite to the House, or the governor vetoes the bill, or a statewide referendum revokes the action of the legislature and the governor, censorship in its most acute form will have entwined itself about the industry in Nebraska. The House has passed a censorship bill putting into the hands of three censors the authority to say what pictures shall and shall not be shown in Nebraska.

Three candidates for mayor of Grand Island appeared at a mass meeting and declared they would enforce Sunday closing if the people voted in favor of the question, decided against Sunday theaters.

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Ouah—Manager Harry Watts, of the Strand, has started a campaign to get late afternoon crowds to attend its matinees. The Strand matinees with matinee prices, formerly closed at 5 o’clock, and the evening shows, with the 30, 40 and 50 cent admission, began at that time. Manager Watts found there were many people getting off from work at 5 and 6 o’clock that would like to attend matinees at once before dining downtown. Accordingly he has postponed his matinees to 6:15 o’clock, with the admission price 25 cents to any part of the house. He announced the change in newspaper advertisements and distributed 10,000 blotters about the office buildings, telling the downtown public about his plan. The change has been very successful, he reports, filling his house for those empty hours between 2 and 7.

Morris Kohn, Realart’s president, has returned from an extended tour of the country. Discussing conditions as he found them, Kohn said: “On the west coast, in San Francisco and Los Angeles, particularly, the conditions are very favorable. Things are booming right along and business seems excellent.” In the northern section, around Seattle, and in the Northwest and Middle West States business seems to be about twenty-five per cent below normal. This, I believe, is due to the fact that the motion picture business is going through the regarding Beaverbrook’s ban on American pictures.

J. H. Hoffberg, at Goldwyn, stated:
“I don’t see how the film men in England can get along without American pictures. English producers turn out about 5 films of the current needs of the country. Sentiment is against German-made pictures and of course American pictures are the greater drawing cards as compared with pictures of foreign countries.
“Besides a number of English theaters hold contracts for pictures as far as two years ahead. I don’t see how they can possibly get around that.”
At Universal, George E. Kann stated he preferred to communicate with the company’s English distributors, the Film Booking Offices (1920) Ltd., before making any statement.
Arthur E. Roomean of Pathé had no comment to make. It is understood, however, that interests identified with Lord Beaverbrook are interested in Pathé Freres Cinema Enterprises, Inc., under an English ally of Pathé Exchange, Inc.
Sydney Abel at Fox said:
“Over in England they need American product.”
Emile E. Shauer, in charge of foreign activities of Famous Players-Lasky, made an interesting observation. He said he had heard from a London publication of the Beaverbrook statement in the Daily Express and said that Beaverbrook on the next day had published a retraction.

Brady was of the opinion, that in order to improve the class of pictures now being shown, and to eliminate objectionable ones, it was not necessary to form a state board of censors, and that the object could be attained in other ways.
It was impossible to learn from either Governor Miller or Brady what plans are being considered, however, it is understood, that the main purpose is to avoid in some manner the enactment of a state censorship law, and at the same time overcome Governor Miller’s objections to the character of some of the pictures now being shown to the public. It is expected that the matter will be thoroughly discussed at the public hearing on the Clayton-Lusk bill to be held tomorrow, before the joint committees of the Senate and Assembly.

Felix Feist will attend the Rochester convention as representative for Joseph M. Schenck and his various producing interests. From Rochester Feist will visit some of the exchange centers in the East. At a later date he plans a three months’ trip through the Middle and Far West.

averbrook Advises English Exhibitors—Some Think He's After Trade Corner (Special Cable to WID'S DAILY)

A very serious situation has developed here in which averbrook figures most prominently.

averbrook has carried his agitation against American films a step farther and is advising British exhibitors to cancel all bookings for American pictures. Under certain circumstances it is claimed that averbrook is launching a move to reclaim the English film trade. Just what ramifications the move has is not directly clear.

Beaverbrook, owner of a number of British newspapers and periodicals, is heavily involved in the film industry and is said to be interested in the Famous Players Canadian Corp. Besides being deeply concerned in the affairs of provincial Cinematograph Theatres, the largest theater chains in the country, he is interested in Fores Films, Ltd., the distributing company of Pathe. It is said in WID'S DAILY that Beaverbrook has decided not to show American pictures in his theaters. Some of the managers, with headquarters in New York, stated in this connection that they didn't see how the English films could get along without an American product.

A Prediction

Wednesday, November 23, 1919, said:

Next year there will be more than thirty capable creative directors and stars selling product individually, which means that about one hundred new films will be released. There are some special features to be looked forward to, which mean that the market will be richer than it has been in the past.

After Novelties

Ben Blumenthal of Export and Import Film Co., Inc., leaves on the Adriatic today for Berlin, where he will look over new German and Central European productions.

His company is after whatever novelties it can secure in the manner of films to fill what it thinks is a need in this country for something new to amuse picture patrons. There is a great deal of enthusiasm in the Export and Import offices over the reception accorded "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which is playing at the Capitol. The Monday record at the theater was almost reached by the picture, having been passed by only one picture, "Passion," which, unusually enough, was also made in Germany. The evening attendance on Sunday night was also overloading.

It is an open secret to some film men in town that the "Caligari" film has been in this country for some time and that nothing was done regarding it because no one could be persuaded to handle the picture.

Exhibitors Oppose Showing of Six Pictures—Names Not Divulged—Adopt Other Resolutions

(By Long Distance 'Phone)

Rochester, N. Y.—An important resolution was adopted at the exhibitor convention here yesterday, providing that the producers of six pictures withdraw those films from distribution. The resolution was offered by Rudy Saunders, of the Marathon theater, Brooklyn, on the ground that they were not fit to be shown on the screens of the country. The names of the pictures were withheld for the present.

Other resolutions adopted at yesterday's session included one calling upon the National Association to clean house, but not at the expense of the exhibitors and the public, but by the application of a higher and more elevating standard at the studios. Salacious pictures were condemned and a resolution was offered to expel any member of the league who favored censorship. A resolution against censorship was also passed.

The blue laws were condemned and a clean-up campaign endorsed for the week of April 12.

Another resolution opposed the renting of films to churches, schools and similar institutions when such showings interfered with the theaters.

Another called for meetings of the state league to be held four times a year for general discussions. Sunday closing was opposed and a resolution passed asking other states to oppose advance deposits. Forty-three (Continued on Page 2)

Cyrus J. Williams, who is producing a series of Tom Santschi two reelers and "The Adventures of Bob and Bill" for Pathe release, is in town from the coast.

Pessimists! Note!

The local exchange of Famous Players-Lasky reports it did the biggest week's business in its history in the seven days ending Saturday, April 2. The gross for the week was greater than that reached by the exchange during Paramount Week last September, and at that time Albany was included in the drive.

Exact figures are not available, but the $100,000 mark was reached—and passed.

TRIBUNE— The Passion Flower has a quality of screen beauty perhaps not before equaled in this star's productions.

TELEGRAM— Jaccinto Beneventano's remarkable drama of provincial Spanish life, The Passion Flower, which was so vividly presented by Miss Nance O'Neill on the stage, is revealed with equally vivid qualities on the screen.

POST—The Passion Flower is one of the most interesting pictures of the season. Miss Talbott has had her litest the hands of most of our screen impresarios, but a person of turbulent depth.

TRIBUNE—The Passion Flower is a more powerful thing as presented on the screen than it was in its stage version. Miss Talbott's performance is quite startling in its portrayal of the Passion Flower. She gives a performance full of fire, color and life.

GLOBEivor— If you like Miss Talmadge an excellent opportunity for the screen this month, as all the superlatives in this picture, for it is a real miracle from top to bottom. Miss Talmadge supplies them all. The film is one that Miss Talmadge has done in months.

In Sympathy With Producers of Clean Screen Fight—Realart Circular Arouses Interest

(Rochester, N. Y.—The exhibitor, in convention here yesterday went on record as approving the attitude taken by the producers against the attempt on the part of the Realart Corp. to open its branch office here on Tuesday for the elimination of undesirable elements in screen production. William A. Brady, in Albany, asked that the industry be given a year to cut out undesirable features in producing films.

Loo Brecher, of New York, warned exhibitors not to attempt to "put any thing over" in this connection, and advised against showing any films which might be subjected to criticism. A resolution, however, was adopted regarding the elimination of advance deposits and in opposition to percentage booking. Weinberg, of New York, advanced a resolution condemning the Ford Weekly, but it never reached the body of the convention.

Considerable interest was aroused over the statement made by Charles O'Reilly regarding a form which is being sent broadcast by Realart. It is being sent to requesting exhibitors information as to their age, hobbies, size of theater, type of service used, etc. O'Reilly stated that this circular was issued in order to provide for the studio to find conditions very satisfactory at the exchanges.

When John S. Woody, of Realart, who happened to be here was asked regarding it, he said:
"I cannot understand how any man of intelligence can possibly misunderstand Realart's purpose in sending out these forms. It is being done merely to reach small town exhibitors who cannot always be reached by traveling representatives. We want to find out how old exhibitors are, whether they are old men or young men, so that we will know how to write them and get in closer touch with their activities. I cannot understand how a man of O'Reilly's intelligence can misinterpret our motive. Only a drunken man might misunderstand; no one else could."
The election of officers will be held this morning. It is probable that Charles O'Reilly will be elected president, since Sydney S. Cohen, in his address, indicated very plainly that pressure of business of the national organization was too great for him to devote time to the state league.
It was evident from the beginning of Cohen's address yesterday morning that censorship was to be the chief topic of the session. Cohen's speech, which was in the nature of an annual report, stated that 42 states had been organized and affiliated with the national M. P. T. O., and that the six surrounding states would be organized shortly. He added that there were 12,000 theaters members of the M. P. T. O., and that he expected an equitable form of contract between exhibitor and distributor before the start of the new season in September.
Cohen took occasion to characterize the efforts of Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, published in the morning papers, as unjust and unfair. Crafts charged Cohen with attempting to intimidate legislators and threatening them with failure when it came to re-election, unless they came into line on the censorship question. Crafts stated that he would ask for a Congressional investigation into the industry, unless this was stopped, in order to keep the screen out of politics. Cohen, coming back to censorship, stated that if the bill passed it would cost the exhibitors from $10 to $40 per week.
Billy Brandt, of Brooklyn, followed Cohen, suggesting that Cohen's report be adopted by a standing vote. This was done amid cheers. E. M. Fay, of Rhode Island, and Sam Bolock, of Cleveland, were then escorted to the platform.
John Mannheimer, of New York, was the next speaker. He reported on the Albany situation, stating that everything there was satisfactory and that one senator had switched from the support of the bill to its opposition. He added that the league should not allow William A. Brady to pass the burden for the showing of bad and salacious films to the exhibitor. Leo Brecher, of New York, followed Mannheimer, declaring that he wished he could be as optimistic over the Albany situation as the others were. He suggested that the league sponsor the formation of a board of review, to pass on all films and advertising matter before sent out for general release. Charles O'Reilly, speak-

Albany, N. Y.—If the Clayton-Lusk bill is defeated, according to well-informed individuals here, credit for the act should go to the state league and not to the National Association.

It was pointed out that in less than two weeks, the league circulated over 4,000,000 petitions. Brooklyn senators, who are backing the bill, have received over 90,000 signed protests, and on Tuesday morning, are known to have asked that no more be sent in because their regular mail was clogged. The protests are still coming in, however.

It is stated in certain quarters that arguments put forward by producers here were not particularly impressive to legislators because similar arguments were advanced before and many never observed. It is also said here that certain of the law-makers have a good sized respect for the screen and its powers, but that Governor Milbc, by virtue of his position can force any legislator to support whatever measures he wants to become laws.

All of which is markedly interesting today when Beaverbrook's action of cancelling American pictures in his circuit, and suggesting to other Englishmen to do likewise, is the talk of the trade.

Beaverbrook is interested financially in the Famous Players-Canadian Corp. and it might be interesting to know what Adolph Zukor thinks of his move.

It is said that this picture has been two years in the making and presents the entire of Italian picture-making art. Co-operative Scheme
Believed Lord Beaverbrook's Plan—Seeking to Abolish Block Booking System
(Special able to WID'S DAILY)
London—Well informed quarters have it that Lord Beaverbrook is attempting to launch some sort of a co-operative scheme for Great Britain and it is for that reason that he is endeavoring to induce exhibitors to either cut rental prices or stop the showing of American pictures altogether.

A belief is held that because Beaverbrook is desirous of doing away with the block booking system that he is urging the cancellation of American product which in a number of cases is booked as far as two years ahead. If the plan for a co-operative scheme should develop, it appears that it could not be carried out immediately if present contracts were to be observed. This may be Beaverbrook's thought in urging the breaking of existing contracts.

Co-operative Scheme
It is stated here that independent exhibitors would be hard hit by Beaverbrook's plan. There have developed considerable exhibitor opposition in Scotland and in some of the northern counties.

In speaking of the change, a company announcement says: "We have realized that the war has brought about a raise in some instances of 400 per cent. in the prices of films, and can understand why we have not been inclined to reduce prices of admission inasmuch as the public is called upon to pay every excess charge, and that patrons are so appreciative of everything we have done in their behalf and will continue to do that we must extend them every consideration. Miss Lake plays a young wife who must choose between faithful loyalty and unfaithful freedom. It is not the usual story, nor has it the usual outcome.
She must never know

And yet how hard it was sometimes to restrain his arms from going out—to touch and caress this beautiful girl—who must never know the truth.

In order that he might be near her he served as butler in her home, where he watched her hungrily and wistfully, and cursed the derelict life which he had led—the life which barred him forever from even her careless thoughts.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 6,755 feet

After an absence of about six months Norma Talmadge is appearing in her latest production, "The Passion Flower," at the Strand this week. It is an adaptation of Jacinto Benavente's stage play of the same name, and the dramatic force of the original has been injected into the screen interpretation with renewed zeal. The production is splendid from every angle and it brings the name of Herbert Brenon before the picture public again, "The Passion Flower" being the first picture which he has directed in this country for some time.

Mr. Brenon's efforts have obtained an excellent replica of the stage play and in every detail of production the picture evidences his capabilities as a director of merit. He has done splendid work with a rather unusual story and one which needed careful handling to make its presentation effective and at the same time keep it from becoming too daring. Its atmosphere is Spanish and with the title which it bears it's easy to guess why judicious manipulation was necessary, and the more reason why director Brenon's results are the more effective.

Miss Talmadge gives a delightful performance as Acacia, the Passion Flower. Her power of repression and manner of expressing emotions registers definitely at each turn as she intends it. Several close-ups of her arc quite beautiful. Eulalie Jensen, as the mother, does good work in the role which Nance O'Neill had in the stage play. Courtney Foote gives a splendid performance as Esteban, the step-father, hated by Acacia.

Esteban's jealousy of his step-daughter Acacia causes his servant, Rubio, to tell Acacia's sweetheart, Norbert, that the girl loves another. The betrothal is broken and later Acacia accepts Faustino. This time Rubio kills Faustino and Norbert is tried for the murder but acquitted. Then it becomes known that Esteban is the direct cause of the murder, and he flees into the mountains but later returns to give himself up. Raimunda, Acacia's mother and Esteban's wife, pleads with Acacia to forgive the step-father whom she hates. In the long embrace which follows between Acacia and Esteban, Raimunda learns that Esteban loves her daughter and her own love for him is turned to hate. She calls for help and Esteban, in his desire to leave with Acacia, shoots her and then is arrested. Raimunda dies in Acacia's arms.

Star's Admirers Will Like Her In This

The fact that it is the first Norma Talmadge picture released since last September should be a good reason for booking it. Folks have probably begun to wonder why they haven't seen her pictures of late, and then too, you have the name of the director to use. This combination together with your announcements, which will give them an idea of the story, should be sufficient reason for their wanting to see "The Passion Flower."

You can make promises justifiably and tell them they'll see some excellent performances. If you think your folks will recall the stage play you might mention this also. Tell them about the appearance of the star in a Spanish role and use catchlines such as: "She insisted that she hated Esteban, her step-father, but they told her she loved him. See this most unusual situation and its outcome in Norma Talmadge's latest production 'The Passion Flower,' directed by Herbert Brenon."

CHARACTER OF STORY ............. Mysterious murders committed by sleep-walker whose actions are controlled by fiend

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 5,500 feet

Judging from the crowds that tried to gain admission to the Capitol Theater on the hottest Spring Sunday night so far this season, it's evident that the novelty foreign production which is having its initial American presentation at that theater this week is destined to be something of a curiosity. Perhaps the trailers which have been shown have gotten them interested, and the fact that it is something entirely new in the line of picture endeavor. And certainly "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" is the first and only picture of its kind yet attempted, and judging from the names of those mentioned in connection with its production, its origin is apparent and comes as a direct contrast to "Passion," another of German make, which met with such universal approval not so long ago.

The foremost feature which makes "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" differ from the usual motion picture is its settings. They're unlike anything you've ever seen, but an idea can be gleaned from the fact that they resemble the futuristic or cubist designs which have gained rather extensive prominence in art circles of late. And here's where the difference of opinion is likely to be expressed. The work of Herman Warm, Walter Reimand and Walter Rohrig, who have designed the settings, will be accepted as distinctly novel, and perhaps if one knows enough about cubist art, excellent examples of that work. But on the other hand, perhaps the casual picture goer will be inclined to feel the way one man did who remarked, "H——, the scenery's making me dizzy," though they won't probably put it so strongly.

The story of "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" is interesting of itself and told in a way that doesn't make any effort to conceal the uncanny manoeuvres of Dr. Caligari and his gruesome looking cabinet containing Cesare, the somnambulist, who is under the hypnotic power of the Doctor. It is easy enough to follow for the most part. Toward the close things happen a trifle too rapidly for satisfaction. Katherine Hilliker has written the sub-titles for the picture's American presentation. Werner Krauss' acting is excellent and his impersonation of Dr. Caligari might be compared with Barrymore's "Mr. Hyde." Conrad Veidt has the tense role of the sleep-walker. There's plenty in the way of thrills and hair-raising situations, and the director hasn't made any effort to use shock absorbers in presenting them.

Showmanship Will Have A Lot To Do With Putting Over This Film

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It's quite likely that as a picture, unusual and really novel, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" will be rather successful, commercially. That is, it will probably make money for exhibitors who know how to put it over. Trailers prior to the showing will certainly get them interested and the various angles which make it unique should be employed to arouse the public's curiosity regarding it.

Announce it as another foreign production, recalling the success of "Passion" and then tell them about the settings, cubist designs, and you can go the limit in your promises regarding its distinct novelty value. From a medical standpoint you can use the theory of Dr. Caligari and his study of somnambulism which drove him insane. Those who will be interested from a purely artistic viewpoint will be obliged to overlook some gruesome departures.

Thomas Meighan's latest production is well above the average for more reasons than one. In the first place a splendid continuity has been prepared for John Moroso's story, originally called "The Quarry." Then Tom Forman is to be given due credit for the way he has handled the script prepared for him. He wastes no time in getting into his story, and events follow in coherent and comprehensive succession with no dragging between sequences. All are carefully dove-tailed.

You Can Make Promises For "The City Of Silent Men"
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Because it is really human and because of the terrrible reality of it, "The City of Silent Men" is bound to be well received. Not only because of the story but because it is an excellent picture from every angle, it will be well worth while booking. You can make promises in connection with the production and feel sure that it will back you up in what you say. Tell them about the star's splendid work and mention the fact that the story is an adaptation of John Moroso's novel "The Quarry."

Another fact which is certain to attract attention is that the scenes were actually taken at Sing Sing. The box office results should prove worthy of any effort you may expend on exploitation. Catchlines might prove effective. "What is 'The City of Silent Men'?"
See how the inmates of such a city live. Thomas Meighan's latest picture will show you how easy it is

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Circus performer falls in love with son of aristocrats who fail to prove she's not a fit wife for their son
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,031 feet

Mary Miles Minter has a story a good deal out of the usual run of vehicles which she is accustomed to being given. In "The Little Clown" she plays the part of a circus performer, and in one instance she is even required to paint up like a clown. The star is thoroughly pleasing in the role and she makes the most of her opportunities.

The story itself, which has been adapted from Avery Hopwood's stage play, is not altogether new in the main—the idea of the wealthy young fellow whose parents object to his marrying "beneath" him and their efforts to break up the match. But in its new dress and interesting circus atmosphere "The Little Clown" provides a satisfying piece of light entertainment which should be well received.

Director Heffron has been successful in his handling of the story and it is unfolded in a logical, smooth fashion that is easily understood. In matters of detail he shows good judgment, and his handling of the cast is first rate. The photography is quite satisfactory and all told "The Little Clown" is a thoroughly good piece of entertainment. Jack Mulhall does good work as the hero, and others who add to the entertainment are Winter Hall, Helen Dunbar, Cameron Coffey, Neely Edwards, Wilton Taylor and Lucien Littlefield.

Pat (Mary Miles Minter) has been born and raised in circus environment, and when her parents die she adopts Toto, the clown, as her father. Toto's love for Pat grows as fast as she does and he hopes to marry her someday, although he is twenty years older. One day Pat meets Dick Beverley, a rich young fellow who has had a row with his father. He likes Pat and decides to join the circus. Eventually the circus plays in Dick's home town, and his folks persuade him to come home, which he agrees to do on condition that Pat come with him because he loves her. The parents object because they believe Pat beneath them. However, they consent and then proceed in their scheme to show Dick how unsuitable a wife Pat would be.

Finally Pat believes that Dick has arrived at his parents' way of thinking and she returns to the circus. Toto asks her to marry him, but Dick comes to claim Pat, telling her he really loves her and that she is to come home with him. Toto sacrifices his own love that Pat may be happy with Dick.

You Can Promise Them Something Different And Entertaining

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can be sure of showing a pleasing, wholesome bit of entertainment if you secure Mary Miles Minter's latest production for Realart. It's the kind that you can show to the entire family. It's clean all the way through, and it is entertaining. Tell them about the little girl reared in the atmosphere of the circus and of her romance with a fellow whose folks thought him too good for her.

In your lobby use stills of the star in her ringside regalia. Plenty of exploitation stunts are possible in connection with a picture of this type. You might secure a street organ and have a girl in a clown suit and also a monkey to advertise the showing. This should get them interested. There are numerous other ways in which you can make "The Little Clown" go over in a manner that satisfies the B. O.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Wife's loyalty to

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,581 feet

For her latest picture, Selznick has given Elaine Hammerstein an adaptation of Kathleen Norris' quite extensively popular “Poor Dear Margaret Kirby.” By far the best thing that can be said about it as screen material, is that it gives the star a role in which she is at her best. It is rather a strong story in its original form, but seemingly with the sort of dramatic moments which lend themselves more readily to the printed page than to the screen. However, capable direction in handling the players, so as to make the most of sequences where the action is slow, has done much to keep the interest unflagging, and this, coupled with the certain appeal and charm of the star's work, will without doubt make it an entertaining picture to the biggest part of the average audience.

The star's performance is uniformly appealing all the way through. She plays with just the right dignity and repress, and in the emotional scenes especially, there is a sincerity and earnestness about her work that will win the approval of every critical spectator.
The supporting cast is a capable one, with the work of William Davidson in the lead, and Ellen Cassity as the catty friend of the heroine, standing out.

One of the best touches that the director has given to the story, is in the scenes where Margaret turns her home into a boarding house. The would-be swells who come to board with her, with their false airs of refinement and their petty squabbling, form a cleverly humorous element in the picture. While the denoument is pretty evident all along, it is never clear how the happy ending is to be accomplished, until the very finish of the picture, so that it will surely hold their attention all the way.

Margaret Kirby's husband, a Wall Street Broker, arrives late at a party she is giving. He needs money, and asks her to borrow from Rutheriord Pell an admirer of hers. She refuses, and that night Kirby takes poison, believing Margaret in love with Pell. He recovers but the poison leaves him helpless. Margaret sells everything she can, and takes in boarders to care for Kirby whom she sends to a sanitarium.

Lucille Yardly, in love with Kirby, wires him that his wife is coming to arrange a divorce. Miserderstandings pile up, until the one friend who has stuck to Margaret, informs her of the deception. A reconcilation is affected with Kirby when he learns of his wife's sacrifices.

Play Up The Star And Talk About The Book
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can be fairly certain of pleasing a majority of your patrons with Elaine Hammerstein's latest. At any rate you can be certain that the star will please them, so do most of your talking about her, and her performance in the picture. If you have used her pictures before, recall her work in such features as “The Daughter Pays,” and “Pleasure Seekers.” and if the star is popular with your patrons, you can safely promise them a picture in which she is at her best.

You can make use of the fact that the picture is an adaptation of Kathleen Norris' novel, which was a widely read story, and the fact that the title remains unchanged will further impress this fact. Here's a catchline you can use, “See what happened to a girl who was accustomed to every luxury, when everything was suddenly taken from her, in “Poor Dear Margaret Kirby.”
This is a society melodrama with a truly tremendous punch; with a story of love and loyalty of great heart appeal and with a central situation as unusual as it is dramatically powerful. The exploitation possibilities of the story are unlimited.

"I Am Guilty!" has all of J. Parker Read, Jr's. richness of production, lavishness of appearance, color and spectacular appeal. It is released everywhere May 1.

CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Stranger, who comes to town to build gambling hall, builds school instead
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 4,436 feet

The story selected for Harry Carey’s latest isn’t all that could be wished for to make the kind of a western picture that western fans expect and want. It hasn’t enough of the thrills and excitement and all around speed that make westerns popular. There is not at any time any great suspense, except in the one scene in the climax, when the hero and villain draw cards for the loaded gun, and this scene is too short to create much excitement. Taken as a whole, it hasn’t enough punch anywhere along the line to hold the attention very well, and while there is a surprise at the point where the supposed gambling hall being built by the hero turns out to be a school room and library, it is a very mild surprise and falls short in its effect.

Carey does as much as possible with a part that doesn’t call for a great deal of action. He is as pleasing as in the past, and makes the most of everything given him to do, making interest where the movement of the story is slow. He puts over a good bit of quiet humor in a lot of the scenes, and his performance is a generally creditable one. There is some more fair comedy furnished by J. Farrell McDonald, as the constantly drunk “Bobtail.” Helen Ferguson, the leading lady, gives a realistic interpretation of the little innocent girl trying to combat the evils of a western town, and she registers sincerity all the way through.

The picture is slow in getting started. Nothing much happens in the first reel and a half, but this is probably due to the lack of incident in the story itself, rather than the direction. It is to the director’s credit that a fair climax has been reached, built around material that doesn’t afford much possibility.

The Stranger (Harry Carey) comes to the town of Broken Buckle to start a gambling hall. The one that exists there is crooked, and the Stranger is starting a straight one.

He meets Zoe Whipple, a young girl, who is trying to reform the town, and who teaches the school in her home. Misunderstandings arise between the stranger and Zoe, brought about by Denver Red, proprietor of the Headlight. Finally, after pleading in vain with the stranger not to open the den, the stranger opens it to the public, only it turns out to be a school room and library. After which the stranger runs Denver out of town and wins the girl.

Let The Star Get Them In
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"The Freeze Out" falls short of the speed and interest of many of his previous pictures, but at the same time Harry Carey is thoroughly pleasing in his work and his name in the star part will doubtless be sufficient to attract the large following which he has in most places where westerns are popular.

You can boost the star as much as you like and promise that his work is fully up to standard, and you can also talk about the good performance of Helen Ferguson in the leading feminine part. The best points of the story to bring out are the horsewhipping of the hero by the heroine, and the cutting of cards for the loaded gun, between the hero and the villain.

Here’s a catchline: “See how Harry Carey started a gambling hall, and then turned it into a library, in ‘The Freeze Out.””

The Star Will Attract And The Story Will Please Many

Shirley Mason in
"THE LAMPLIGHTER"
Fox

CAMERAMAN .................................. Glen McWilliams
AS A WHOLE ... Moderately entertaining adaptation, mostly due to star

GRADE OF PRODUCTION 5,450 feet

Maria Cummins' story "The Lamplighter" was to many people a beautiful and altogether enjoyable tale, and to the people who liked the book, and in fact to all who appreciate a quiet, fanciful little romance, the screen adaptation will afford a pleasant piece of entertainment. For the people who demand a heap of action and dramatic incident, it will probably lack the necessary speed, for it never reaches any great climax. It runs along smoothly and evenly, and will have to be content to please those who enjoy the beauty of the theme. Considered in the light of probability, the development will be regarded as next to impossible. For the gathering together of all the characters necessary to the denouement, so many years after they have played their first part in the story, is surely extremely improbable. It is not in the spirit of the tale, however, to regard it as fact, so the improbabilities won't matter with those who are held by the theme.

Then there is Shirley Mason, bringing enough personality and individuality to her part to hold almost any audience. The little star has a part that just suits her, and she is really fascinating all the way through the picture. She looks equally attractive in the garb of the slavey taking the beatings of a cruel mistress, and in the silks and furs provided by her adopted mother. In the scene where her foster father the kind old lamplighter, dies, she has her one chance for an emotional bit and she carries it off in a creditable manner. The lamplighter is very ably played by Albert Knott.

The love element isn't stressed at all; in fact it is given very little consideration, although it runs almost unnoticed all the way through. Some parts of the story are reminiscent of Dickens in their quaint pathos. Particularly is this true of the part where the heroine is the down-trodden slave.

A baby girl is born to Emily Graham, who has secretly married Philip Amory, the son of her father's lifelong enemy. Philip, in trying to restore his wife who has fainted, blinds her through an accident. He is driven from the house by Graham, who takes Emily's baby away, giving it to Ben Grant, a sailor, to take to sea. Grant takes the child to his wife. Eleven years later the child, Gertie, is driven from Nan Grant's home, and is adopted by Trueman, the lamplighter. Trueman works for Graham, who has moved to the town with Emily, and through him (Trueman) Gertie is finally restored to her parents.

Star Is At Her Best In Fanciful Romance

Besides those who have read the story and enjoyed it, there will be a large number of people who would have enjoyed it had they read it, and who will be delighted with the picture form of "The Lamplighter." It is to these, necessarily, that you will have to appeal, by telling them enough of the story to acquaint them with its nature.

Then, if Shirley Mason is known to your people, and is popular, you can tell them that she is cast in a part perfectly suited to her in the picture, and that she does probably the best work of her career thus far. You can make extensive promises for the star, as her performance is certain to please almost anybody. Talk about the book from which the picture is adapted, as it was quite extensively read.

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Daughter of counterfeiter in love with Mounted Police officer who is trailing her father

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 6,000 feet

Here again is a case of a fairly good story not being used to good advantage. In the first place the continuity is choppy, and neither the director nor the one who wrote the titles has used any skill of his own to relieve the situation. The director especially has shown no adeptness in his development of the story, and the introduction of the numerous characters only serve to make things generally more incomprehensible. There are so many of them, and their relations to each other and their connection with the story so vague, that the spectator is bound to be confused.

And here too the fault is shared by the title writer.

There are an over-abundance of titles anyway, and they don’t read like the work of one trained in the art of caption writing. In one instance he uses the word “unsuspcioned” when he probably means “unsuspected.” And again, at times the titles are contrary in tone to the scene which they are supposed to fit. For instance the officer is talking to the man he is trying to get evidence on, and the title reads to the effect that “so-and-so may be innocent but justice must be done”—or something to that effect—and the officer is seen enjoying a hearty laugh. The reading matter doesn’t fit the action. Some matters of detail haven’t been properly looked after. A girl wears two different hats in one scene.

Bernard Durning is the Mounted Police officer and he gives a satisfactory performance for the most part. Evelyn Greetley is adequate as the heroine. Among others who appear are George Majeroni, Albert Hart, Sonia Marcelle, Fuller Mellish, Charles Mackey.

Diane’s father, Allesandro Orsini, is the master mind of a band of counterfeiters, which Sergeant Pat Scott of the Mounted Police is trying to round up and bring to justice. He is forced to work against an obstacle in the person of Diane, whom he loves and who loves him, but refuses to admit it because of his persistence in trying to get evidence on her father.

Bob Hascum, one of Orsini’s watchers, is double-crossed by Orsini when he allows his niece Carlotta to marry Crispi, another of the gang. Orsini had promised Carlotta to Hascum. Hascum writes a confession and tells Pat where he will find it in case he meets with foul play at the hand of Orsini. Hascum is killed by one of Orsini’s men, and in the fight which follows all of Orsini’s band but himself are killed. Later Pat finds Diane living apparently alone. While they plan to marry, Orsini, kills himself in an adjoining room.

Some New Titles Will Give It A Better Chance To Go Over
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“Diane of Star Hollow” will be much the better with a new set of titles and some careful cutting which will make it a much more satisfying and understandable offering. In its present form folks are going to wonder what it’s all about, especially in the early reels. At least some more comprehensive introductory titles will help considerably. You can talk about the story and mention the Mounted Police angle, and the fact that the officer loved the daughter of the man he was after.

There are many pretty backgrounds in the picture. In fact the exterior settings are all very pretty and the photography is good. You can use Evelyn Greetley’s name. Folks will probably remember her in World pictures. Bernard Durning’s name also may attract attention. Catchlines might be used if you find they usually interest your patrons.

CAMERAMAN ................ Walter Arthur
AS A WHOLE......Satisfactory mystery picture; has good suspense but logic isn’t always adhered to

STORY......Good of its kind; creates effective mysterious atmosphere DIRECTION......Doesn’t establish a satisfactory premise and might have made development more comprehensive; climax good
PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS .................. All right
CAMERA WORK ................ Average
STAR......Fulfills requirements of the role but others have just as much to do SUPPORT......Joseph Burke does very well in important part; others satisfactory; Florence Billings has the only feminine role

EXTERIORS .................. All right
INTERIORS .................. Good
DETAIL ........................ Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY......Mystery story in which man tracing jewels falls in love with girl he believes to be crook

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 6,000 feet

As mystery pictures go, "The Wakefield Case" seems to hit the average mark pretty squarely. There is excellent suspense and the action is swift and smooth enough for the most part. The director hasn’t made his story foundation clear in the early reels, so folks are apt to be somewhat confused and at sea as to what it’s all about for a while, but after a time a title accidentally makes matters clear and everything is quite comprehensive thereafter.

Of course this isn’t such a serious fault, since it’s a mystery picture and the director is at liberty to do certain things which may not seem logical, for the purpose of suspense. The characters are introduced too rapidly and their relations are not clearly defined in the sub-titles. Herbert Rawlinson is starred, but Joseph Burke handles an equally prominent role and gives a splendid performance. Florence Billings is adequate as the heroine, and others are J. P. Wade, H. J. Gilmore, Charles Dalton, Jerry Austin, W. W. Black and H. L. Dewey.

William Wakefield, son of detective William Wakefield, Sr., vows to "get" the crook that killed his father. He learns that a band of crooks, known as the "Breezes," is sailing for America, and that they have in their possession the famous rubies which his father had been trying to recover for years. Wakefield, Sr., had met his death while shadowing Richard and James Krogan, crooks who had the rubies in their possession before the "Breezes" got hold of them.

Aboard the ship, Wakefield meets Ruth Cregg, who is travelling accompanied by an army officer who is taking her to her father in America. Wakefield falls in love with Ruth, a fact which is secretly observed and enjoyed by James Krogan, also a passenger, but not known to Wakefield as one of the crooks who killed his father. In America Wakefield is told that Ruth is one of the Breezes, although he refuses to believe it. In the meantime Krogan, who also believes Ruth and her companion members of the Breen gang, has secured an invitation to her home, where he hopes to recover the jewels. Later developments show that Ruth and her father are secret service people and Krogan is caught.

Star’s Name And Catchlines Will Attract

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"The Wakefield Case" is another satisfactory mystery picture for the state rights market, and will undoubtedly satisfy those who like this sort of picture. If you are in the habit of pleasing them with mystery pictures generally, you would do well to show them this one. It will give them something to keep them guessing for a while, and that’s what admirers of this type of entertainment want.

Herbert Rawlinson has a good many followers so you might use his name to good advantage and recall some of his recent pictures which you have shown. Catchlines used in connection with the title should interest them. Say: “Who stole the Randall rubies? See ‘The Wakefield Case,’ playing at the blank theater with Herbert Rawlinson starring. It’s the kind of mystery picture that keeps you guessing until the end.
Do you feel like this?

Production Is Good And It Contains Some Good Acting

"FORBIDDEN LOVE"
Wistaria Prod., Inc.—State Rights
DIRECTOR ................. Philip Van Loan
AUTHOR ...................... Not credited ADAPTED BY ................... Edward Russell CAMERAMEN ......Louis Geland and Richard Fryer
AS A WHOLE ......Good production; some real thrills and good acting, best features STORY ......Somewhat familiar theme but makes good screen material; drags badly at times
DIRECTION ......Might have used his own judgment to improve continuity; otherwise first rate
PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Very good
LIGHTINGS .................. All right
CAMERA WORK .............. Satisfactory
PLAYERS ......Marguerite Clayton does thoroughly good work; George MacQuarrie and Creighton Hale efficient EXTERIORS .................. Splendid
INTERIORS .................. Some obviously studio "sets"
DETAIL ..................... Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY ......One brother double-crosses the other to win the girl who later learns of his duplicity
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......About 6,000 feet

Regardless of the fact that the situations in the main are not new to the screen, "Forbidden Love" contains the sort of material that still goes "big" with a fairly large percentage of movie "fans." There's plenty of incident and it is well combined and easy to follow. There is but one thing which might have been improved upon, and it's probably the fault of the one who wrote the continuity, although the director might have used his own ingenuity and improved upon the script. And that is the fact that the action is allowed to flag several times, following various anti-climatic sequences. This is especially obvious during the part where the one brother returns to the home of the brother who deceived him. It takes too long for things to happen.

Otherwise the production is thoroughly satisfactory. There are some good thrills and a degree of suspense. The final climax is excellant, and the scenes in and around the lighthouse, very effective. The photography is very good and the fog effects splendid.

Good acting by a capable and well suited cast is another feature in favor of "Forbidden Love." Marguerite Clayton shows what she can do in a rather emotional role, and acquits herself capably. George MacQuarrie is forceful as the deceitful brother, and Creighton Hale is pleasing as the hero. An unnamed player makes a good deal of the small part of the Chink laundryman. The exterior locations are excellent, and most of the interiors satisfactory, except that when they use painted drops outside of studio set windows, they shouldn't pose a player in front of them for close-ups.

Peter is the elder and Harold the younger son of John Van Zandt, owner of several fishing vessels. Harold loves Eileen, the village belle, but is so hashful that Peter agrees to present Harold's case to Eileen. Instead, Peter loves Eileen and wants her for himself, so turns her against Harold. Years pass and Harold, who has left the town, returns to take charge of a construction job on the lighthouse. He stays in the home of Peter, married to Eileen. Peter observes that Eileen still loves Harold. Peter goes to the lighthouse on a stormy night to fight it out with Harold. In the meantime Eileen has learned of her husband's deception, and follows him to the lighthouse. She arrives in time to see Peter fall from the tower to his death, leaving her free to marry the man she loves.

You Can Probably Please A Good Majority With It
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Forbidden Love" is quite likely to appeal to small town audiences more strongly than metropolitan folks, because it is a small town story, and contains the sort of material that would make an unusual hit at the "Main St." theater. The locale of the New England fishing village and the general trend of the story can be used in exploiting the picture. The title may be a trifle misleading so you might use catchlines so they won't think it a sex story.

You can promise them a capable cast and some good performances. Use the name of Marguerite Clayton, and recall her appearance in the Paramount picture "The Inside of the Cup." You can use George MacQuarrie's name, and that of Creighton Hale. To interest them in the story say: "All is fair in love and war so he double-crossed his brother to win the girl for himself. But did it pay? See for yourself in 'Forbidden Love' at the blank theater."
A Bit Improbable But Makes Good Entertainment

Carmel Myers in
"THE DANGEROUS MOMENT"
Universal

DIRECTOR .................. Marcel de Sano

AS A WHOLE .... Development is amusing and pleasing; an adequate production and action doesn't drag

DIRECTION ...... Makes improbable sequences appear probable; doesn't get much of a climax;
generally all right

CAMERA WORK ............ Average
STAR ...... Pretty and altogether pleasing and amusing in the part
SUPPORT ...... Herbert Heyes in lead is adequate;

EXTERIORS .................. All right
INTERIORS .... Good atmosphere in cafe and studio scenes
DETAIL .................. Suffices
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Artist falls in love with a fleeting waitress, whom he hides from the police
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 4,850 feet

Carmel Myers' latest picture for Universal makes a pleasant and enjoyable hour's entertainment, in spite of the fact that the story doesn't amount to much. It's highly improbable, and the cause and effect are not usually plausible, but it provides a great little part for the star, and she makes the whole thing cheerful and amusing. As the spunky, hot headed little Italian girl, who takes nothing seriously, she looks and acts the part charmingly all the way through. She puts so much pep into the part that most people will find her a refreshing treat to watch.

Then too, although the story isn't so much, there is quite an element of mystery and suspense running through the last three reels, for the audience doesn't know right up to the finish whether or not the heroine has killed a man. The story is told in such a light spirit that even the man's murder fails to be serious.
It's just a frothy entertainment, but it will entertain, because the audience just has to sit and watch the plot unroll, without keeping track of any complications, and without thinking much about it.

And the director has done a lot to make the development very smooth and steady. It keeps on the move all the time, so that there isn't any part that drags, and does it ever reach any great speed of action. It runs evenly up to the climax, and is over before the spectator realizes it. This climax doesn't reach a very high point of action, either, but the nature of the story doesn't admit of any stronger one, and it forms a satisfactory finish.

The locale of the whole thing is Greenwich Village, and in the Bohemian cafe and the studio sets the director has secured a really accurate atmosphere.
These scenes aren't overdone, as is frequently the case, and they form a correct and realistic background for the greater part of the action. Some well chosen types in the supporting cast contribute to the color of these scenes.

Sylvia Palprini, is a waitress in the Greenwich Village cafe of Madame Tarkides. Madame's son, Movros, a dissolute idler, is in love with her, but she repulses all his advances, for she is in love with George Duray, an artist, although he has never even noticed her.

One night Movros attacks her. She strikes him with a chair and flies, thinking she has killed him. Duray hides her in his studio, where she acts as his model, and finally, when his fiancee throws him over, he realizes that he loves Sylvia. It is then that a notorious thug confesses that he is the murderer of Movros, and Duray's wealthy aunt begins preparations for her nephew's wedding with his model.

The Star's Admirers Will Like It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

While there isn't much to talk about or much to promise in regard to the story of this one, you can talk about the star, and promise her admirers that they will like her, and promise any of your patrons a pleasant little entertainment. She is clever and amusing in the part, and you can be reasonably sure of satisfying a majority with the picture.

There is a drawing power in the fact that it is a story of Greenwich Village, so be sure and let this be known. If you want to talk about the story at all, tell about the mystery surrounding the murder of the young villain. The title offers possibilities for arousing interest, but that kind of interest won't be particularly well backed up by the story. It will be best to just promise an amusing and entertaining picture, with the star at her best.
Some Short Reels

"Along The Riviera"—Burton Holmes-Paramount

Type of production.........................1 reel travelogue

There is more of the scenic about this reel than the travel picture, and some beautiful scenery it is. The trip is made partly by rail and partly by motor, all the way along the Mediterranean coast of southern France. There are beautiful shots of the Alps, of the quaint mountain villages of the region, and of the Mediterranean itself. La Turbie, an ancient town, where some of the ruins of buildings built by the Lomans are still standing, forms one of the particularly interesting portions. Then there are views of Monte Carlo, and Monaco, and of many small towns along the coast. This reel has been made up of the most beautiful parts of the Riviera. It is a first rate number.

"The Sagebrush Musketeers"—Pathé

Type of production.........................2 reel western

This is one of the series starring Tom Santschi, and like the foregoing numbers of the series, it possesses several noticeably good points, which make these highly desirable offerings of this type. The production as a whole shows an unusually finished appearance for a short feature. The locations are admirably chosen, the piece is very well acted, and the photography, at most times, is exceptionally good. Santschi has one of his accustomed parts, and besides the star there are two characters in this one that make for a good deal of amusement. The story is pretty much a regulation western, but there are enough original points to make it seem different. It should be a very attractive offering where they like Westerns, and if you use short features, it will pay you to consider this series.

"The Worst Was True"—Chester-Educational

Type of production.........................1 reel scenic

This reel takes the audience on a jaunt around the city of Hong-Kong, and visits, in the course of the trip, a number of quietly interesting places. It starts off with a view of the harbor of the big Chinese port, showing ships of every nation being loaded with merchandise of every description. Interesting here is the way in which hogs are packed alive in bamboo baskets and loaded for shipment. Then there are some street scenes, with shots of the street merchants and the peculiar outdoor restaurants which abound in the city. It is certainly unusual to watch a Chinese gentleman stop for a bite to eat, and find in the following close-up, that his meal consists of beetles, snakes and snails, which he eats with evident enjoyment in front of the camera. There are some shots of Chinese kids at play; views of some of the larger homes, and the reel concludes with a pretty shot of a lake at sunset. A reel of better than the average interest.

"The Whitewing Monkey"—Universal

Type of production.........................2 reel comedy

This one has Joe Martin, the ape, for its star, and the monkey is assisted by numerous other animals, namely; a whole bunch of trained lions, an elephant, a couple of dogs and two other ones. It isn't an all animal cast, however, there being several human comedians to help out the fun. If you played Joe Martin comedies, you know how he performs. He does a lot of very human stunts in this one too, although the substitution of a dwarf in some of the difficult tricks is very noticeable. It should be a big hit with children, and the performance of so many animals in one picture will doubtless make it entertaining to a great many grown-ups as well. The human comedians manage to get one or two good laughs, but are not consistently funny.

Pathé Review No. 99

Type of production.........................1 reel magazine

There isn't anything in the subject matter of this issue to lift it above the average. Some of it is fairly interesting, but nothing is unusual. It starts off with a Hy Mayer Travelogue entitled, "Such is Life in Ramblersville." This is a combination of drawings and moving pictures, showing activities in "The American Venice" only 25 minutes from Broadway. Then comes a demonstration of swimming strokes in slow motion, and this is followed by some views of a spaghetti factory, showing the whole process of manufacture. This part is quite interesting and there is a big laugh at the finish with a close-up of two of the workmen eating spaghetti in an original style. The last subject is a series of views in and around Fez, the capital of Morocco. These are also rather interesting.

"A Dollar's Worth"—Century-Universal

Type of production.........................2 reel comedy

This is the latest Century offering in which Harry Sweet brings into play his unquestionably effective style of comedy. The gags in this one aren't all as funny as in some of his past numbers, but most of them are pretty sure fire at that, and the way Sweet puts them over they are bound to register. If you haven't used any of these two-reelers featuring this comedian, you are missing a good bet in the comedy line. In this one Harry gets into an extremely tough neighborhood, without a dime, and finally gets a dollar away from one of the toughest birds in the street. Then he has an awful time keeping it away from the rest of the hard-boiled members of the district. It's all rough and tumble slap-stick, but it's funny and it will go over with almost any audience.
Short Reels

"In Modern Jerusalem"—Burton Holmes-Paramount
Type of production ......................... 1 reel travelogue
This is one of the most interesting Burton Holmes pictures seen in some time. It is made up of views of the city of Jerusalem, with the biggest part of the footage devoted to a reception held at a club founded in the city by an American woman. At this reception the spectator sees practically all of the notable personages representing all nations in the Holy Land. There is a review of troops by the English and French officers, scenes showing the little children of the city receiving the benefits of a real American education, and some views of the city and types of inhabitants that are truly interesting. A first rate reel.

"Harem-Scarem"—Century-Universal
Type of production ......................... 2 reel comedy
The Century Lions are featured in this number, and the animals, with the aid of several very black Negroes, provide a goodly amount of amusement and some thrills. It's mostly chasing in and out of rooms and through windows, and without any connection between the incidents, but it is good fun nevertheless, and will appeal to nearly every kind of an audience. The lions—at least some of them—are very well trained, and perform with their trainer in a highly entertaining manner. It should be a good comedy offering for any theater.

"The Janitors"—Sunshine-Fox
Type of production ......................... 2 reel comedy
This latest Sunshine offering doesn't develop much fun until the second reel, but that one makes it average up to a pretty good comedy. It starts off with a lot of old stuff, the only clever part of which is some trick photography, which provides several thrills when one of the janitors seems threatened with instant death as he dangles from the end of a plank out of a seventh story window. There is a semblance of plot running through it, in which the two janitors get hold of a letter stating that $50,000 is coming to the bearer. The rest of the stuff happens in their efforts to collect, but the plot gets lost in the shuffle until the last, when it bobs up and provides a whale of a laugh at the finish. In the second reel the janitors get put in a "bug-house" by mistake, and there is a lot of very funny business all through this reel. It is strong enough to make up for the weak first one, and the impression will likely be, at the finish, that it is a very good comedy.

"The Pulpit Punch"—Universal
Type of production ......................... 2 reel western Jack Perrin is the star of this one. He is not in his accustomed role of cowboy, however, although the scene is a western town, and everybody else is in regulation parts. This is sort of a "Sky Pilot" theme, with Perrin playing the part of a two-fisted parson, who is trying to reform a tough town. He plays the part convincingly, too, looks it and acts it, and puts up a great fight. The story is a good one for a short feature. The punch of the thing lies in the scene where the parson makes a bargain with the proprietor of the dance hall. He offers to lick the best man in the place, and if he does the whole gang is to go to church; if he doesn't he is to clear out of town. Of course he licks the proprietor after a big fight. Then he wins the girl. Louise Lorraine is the leading lady. It's pretty well put on and should go well with the folks who like westerns.

"Movie Chats" No. 46—Kineto Co.
Type of production ......................... 1 reel magazine
This number of Charles Urban's Movie Chats contains some subjects of real interest and some that are not so interesting, but it averages up pretty well as a satisfactory reel. First there are several views of the River Dart, at Dartmoor, England. Then comes a short series of views of a pigeon farm in the United States, where carrier pigeons are bred and trained for use by the army. The next is a unique bit. It is a short piece of film taken some years ago, showing Lord Kitchener reviewing troops in Egypt. The same troops are then shown passing in review before the Khedive of Egypt. There follow views of General Allenby, the conqueror of Palestine, arriving in Cairo, Egypt, some shots of dogs, horses and cats, and the reel ends with some magnified views of a millipede, a scorpion and a centipede. A fight between the two latter insects is quite interesting.

PIONEER FILM CORPORATION, ever since it became a factor in the industry, has done everything in its power to improve the conditions further the interests of the independent producer. It is not a production company; it purchases pictures when they are completed. It has always enjoyed the distinction of being the only concern to give honest encouragement to individual directors, film stars and playwrights to enter into business for himself, assuring him of a ready market for his worth-while product.

TODAY, Pioneer Film Corporation is in the market to purchase several feature film productions. This may sound strange in view of the pre-impression that distributing concerns are over-loaded with pictures. The position we have exercised in the past year has placed us in our present position to negotiate for product of inherent quality on any basis satisfactory to the owner. Naturally, we, as distributors must be the sole judge of what the public wishes in photoplay productions, for you must agree that it is but nature for each producer to feel that he has, individually, the greatest possible product in the world.
FCOURT, President
Pioneer Film Corporation

The distributing facilities of Pioneer Film Corporation are tremendous—in theory, but in reality. Our growth has been rapid and, perhaps, not on paper but in physical tangibility and our resources are almost red. The film productions we are in the market for must have genuine and be of real quality. Pioneer wishes no photoplays that are relics of just-passed era, when anything that had 5,000 feet would suffice, and Quality—think of them as ONE!

The independent producer, can count upon Pioneer to co-operate with to the fullest extent. If this message is not an incentive to you it least be an invitation—an invitation to success. The gateway is open—there is room for all of you to enter. Which of you will? confidence will govern all communications.

Theatrical Booking A Gain?
Development of Peerless Booking Corp Under Observation—Keith-casserale Mentioned

Local exchange managers and other film men who have been watching the local situation closely are very much interested in the plans of the Peerless Booking Corp, which has its offices on the fourth floor of the Palace Theater Bldg. These same men are mentioning almost in the same breath that the National Booking Corp, idea is in for a revival on a scale not so ambitious perhaps as the original one.

The plan, as it is being talked of in film circles, is as follows: The Peerless Booking Corp, which is a $100,000 corporation formed in Albany around Feb. 15, is to act as the booking office through which distributors are to relay their product. At the present it is planned to devote the energies of the organization to the local field only, with the intention, so these men say, of spreading out nationally at the proper time.

B. S. Moss is to be in active charge of the booking organization, while his picture company, the B. S. Moss Theater Corp, a $1,500,000 company formed in Albany in January, is to make pictures for the organization. It has already signed prisoners to Keith theaters and those of its allied circuits, the Orpheum, Moss, Poli, Proctor and Wilmer and Vincent circuits. When the Keith interests have shown the pictures, they are to be released generally through United Artists.

Arliss Features

It was reported yesterday George Arliss would resume picture making about the 15th of April, that he would work in the Biograph studio in the Bronx and that the productions would be released by Associated Exhibitors, Inc., who made and distributed "The Devil."

Arthur S. Kane, speaking for Associated Exhibitors, Inc., stated yesterday that he hadn't heard a thing about it.

Court Wants Bond Increased

Justice Newburger in the Supreme Court has ordered that F. B. Warren put up a bond of $25,000 in connection with his suit for $100,000 damages against Associated Producers, Inc.

George Edwin Joseph, attorney for Warren stated yesterday he intended appealing Justice Newburger's decision.

future developments.

"The designation of 'good invest¬ ment' does not apply, in our opinion, to D.
Griffith, Inc., class 'A' preferential stock.

It is too speculative and unseasoned for that.

"The management estimates that this year's earnings will be more than $1,500,000, or more than 10 times the preferential divi¬ end requirements, but of course, estimates usually are pretty intangible things. The company declared an initial dividend of $1 per share on the class 'A' stock from earn¬ ings for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1920 and states that in the future semi-annual divi¬ dends of 75 cents a share will be paid. The stock is being offered at $15 per share and appears to have fair possibilities, though it is not listed.''

"The Queen of Sheba"—Fox

Lyric

HERALD—* * * Spectacular, progressively interesting, highly colored and highly protracted, the closing feature of the day, the splendor has a keenly stirring chariot race. * * * Particularly it is a magnificent treatment for J. Gordon Edwards, the director, for there are impressive vistas of carnivals and parades, with horses galloping along the desert, and a royal and splendid entry of the Queen into Solomon's court.

TIMES—The picture is another effort to win by astonishment. It is ornate, elaborate and spectacular. * * * For although Roman chariots and elephants have been borrowed new to Solomon, a stirring one is staged before him. * * *

DAILY NEWS—The film is in two parts and presents so many moving, gracefully told, splendidly written story, I can think of several places where it might have ended with much more telling effect than with the rather dragged out finale it now boasts. But the illusion of the picture is no small wonder as to story told and the panoply of an ancient oriental pageantry. The blend of busy extras darting about with spears adds the thrill of mystery. * * *

EVENING WORLD—Great credit is due J. Gordon Edwards, who directed the production. * * * * * * The chariot race * * was the most exciting of the film. GLOBE—It is just another "super movie" smothered in properties, built out of the glory that was Hollywood, and the grandeur that was a moving picture studio. * * *

TELEGRAM—The marathon that even the most elaborate productions of the past had not achieved.

JOURNAL—"The Queen of Sheba" in for leaving the presentation pure and simple, speaks its own story of exquisitely beautiful romance and adventure.

R. A. Walsh, who produced and directed one of the most masterly and artistic of screen dramas, "The Oath," adapted from the novel "Idols," by William J. Locke and featuring Miriam Cooper. It is a First National production and a "Big 5 Production," presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corp.—Advt.

"The Oath"—First National

STRAIN TRIBUNE—The first part of the picture is fascinating for the way it is presented and for the way it is acted. Miriam Cooper is an arresting actress. The picture is not perfect but it is worth seeing. * * *

AMERICAN—* * * R. A. Walsh, the director, in this he has some challenging and graphic "shots" and attractive handling of his characters. The picture is barren of intelligence as to its scenario and its subtitles are no help.

HERALD—R. A. Walsh, the producer, has provided some striking scenes and handled the underlying theme of prejudice without offense, but this adaptation is rather a disappointment. The entire production seems to have been handled very gently with William J. Locke's novel.

TIMES—The photoplay, "The Oath," is one of those productions that leave the spectator feeling that he could have been a great deal better. He might have been; but, as it is, Mr. Walsh has made many striking moving scenes, but his effort to solve satisfactorily the story has been weakly by a lack of justice to the characters.

TELEGRAM—* * * A thrilling film, * * * delightful dramatic entertainment.

R. A. Walsh, the producer, deserves credit for some lovely backgrounds and a clever handling of his characters. The faults of the scenario and subtitles are many and often laughable.

RIVOLI—It is not often that a picture which is illogical and unconvincing at times can yet be classed as a strong and extremely interesting film, but "The Oath" achieves this

SUN—* * * The theme is illogically developed.

POST—The girl becomes, through the hysterical, uncontrolled acting of Miss Coomer, merely a suspicious, jealous and petulant wife. The titles of "The Oath," by the way, make up as rare a collection of "Friso" writing metaphors as any film has ever achieved this long while.

Daily News, World, Globe and Evening World made no comment.

"A Small Town Idol"—A. F. Inc., Rialto

WORLD—For six reels the audience should have laughed as it hasn't laughed for a long time. * * * * * * The funniest thing that has been seen on a screen for many weeks.

AMERICAN—Sennett, comedic, on film-making is a classic. "Small Town Idol" rich in sartorial and entertainment for screen folk and producers. Turner is no longer comedial, but an artist.

HERALD—Mack Sennett is such a master of the film that his film in "A Small Town Idol" can he made comedians of even of owls and foxes. This " uses up every possible variety of the burlesque on the rural melodrama in its wildest form, so that it becomes a film cartoon that all but shatters the spirit of the Rialto with laughter.

GLOBE—A few more pictures of this type and we may laugh this sort of rubbish off the screen. Meanwhile, his productions are a triumph of hilarity, music and real comedy. This one is a huge ironic masterpiece.

TELEGRAM—The new film is much more public and every hit as funny as this producer's earlier screen plays.

JOURNAL—* * * The cleverest play of his kind seen in many a month, and the most original.

MAIL—"A Small Town Idol" is quite the most fascinating thing Mack Sennett has attempted.

SUN—* * * Goes far to make the photoplay a continuous series of chuckles punctuated prosaically with hearty laughs.

Daily News, Tribune, Times, Evening and Post made no comment.

"Proxies"—F. P. L.

DAILY NEWS—There is enough action in the story for a three-act melodrama, and enough mystery, too, I should have, preferred a less stereotyped ending.

TRIBUNE—* * * You may be amused by this story of a handsome but who is a reformed crook.

AMERICAN—"Proxies" gets away from ordinary, gaudiness of Cosmopolitan productions its chief charm.

HERALD—Kerry and Miss Keefe capture the attention, and with mystery and double betrayed love story, the picture proves once that picture, romance and blend very well on the screen.

TELEGRAM—This photo-play may be described as a comedy drama with an admirable melange of gayety and dramatic suspense.

JOURNAL—* * * One of the fastest moving comedy dramas ever screened. This picture is a good example of what the motion picture at its best should be. * * *

SUN—* * * Plenty of thrills tempered by comedy.

World, Times, Globe, Mail, Evening World and Post made no comment.

"What Happened to Rosa"—Goidwyn Capitol

TRIBUNE—Mabel Normand, one of the most charming little comedians on the screen, plays the heroine, but it is a sad affair.

WORLD—* * * All right in its way. * * * They could and ought to do better.

AMERICAN—Mabel Normand is everything in this film, for which the public should be grateful.

HERALD—" * * * Piquant and vivacious Mabel. * * * It is at times quite amusing.

TELEGRAM—This amusing film plays brightly, brings back to Broadway the regained Miss Mabel Normand. The star has been dubiously cast.

JOURNAL—Film full of humorous adventure sets off Mabel Normand's talents.

SUN—* * * One of the most entertaining vehicles that have ever been fitted to Mabel Normand's eyes.

Daily News, Times, Globe, Mail, Evening World and Post made no comment.

Now on the Market

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Louis B. Mayer has announced his intention of filming "The Wandering Jew." The story is now being whipped into shape for filming and it is expected work on it will be started shortly. The director's name is being kept a secret at present.

If, as above report states Mayer makes "The Wandering Jew," it will mean the second film on the same story subject in the market. Last week Leo M. Fox and Charles Penzer stated that they had ready for bookings a version of "The Wandering Jew" produced in Europe, with Rudolf Sklinskra in the title role. The picture was said to have thousands of people appearing in it and besides narrating the story proper contains scenes of the Zionist movement on the Continent and of the Dreyfus trial in Paris.

"The Queen of Sheba"—Fox

WORLD.—"The Queen of Sheba" is a motion picture of quantity, not of quality. Therefore, it is not a good motion picture, as compared with a number of the large productions that have come into existence within the last year.  There is one genuinely fine effect, at least, that should not fail to impress. This is the chariot scene. The photography here is excellent. Cameramen mapped the long streets from every angle and distance views of the arraying vehicles as they tore around the track brought rounds of applause.

AMERICAN.—"Queen of Sheba" fast-moving spectacle. Film full of flashes of gorgeous scenes of historical accuracy. Hetty Kyle has beauty and is always handsomely costumed.

TRIBUNE.—It is a gorgeous, funny and thrilling production directed by J. Gordon Edwards. **

"A Small Town Idol"—A. P. Inc. Rialto

TRIBUNE.—This is a six-reel Mack Sennett, which means that it is six times as long and six times as funny as the usual slapstick comedy.

EVENING WORLD.—"A Small Town Idol" funny and thrilling at Rialto theater.

POST.—This is not to say that "A Small Town Idol" is not funny. It is, but it has, if one may make so bold, no serious relief.

"Proxies"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

MAIL.— One of those pictures which has nothing particular to distinguish it and yet is unusually interesting from start to finish.

EVENING WORLD.—The picture is well done and acted; especially entertaining are the caption decorations.

POST.—Too long by a third and not interesting enough by half is, mathematically speaking, the answer to the latest film from the Cosmopolitan shops.

"The Oath"—1st Nat'l Strand

EVENING WORLD.—Miriam Cooper plays emotional role in "The Oath" at the Strand.

What Happened to Rosa?—Goldwyn

CAPITOL

MAIL.—It is funny enough in its way, but it is so absurd and illogical that it finally succeeds in almost smothering Mabel's bubbling personality.

POST.—Though it is not masterly characterization, it is the desirable spirit briefly illustrated, and these are the days when one's gratitude must seek out small things or go begging.

The fourth, the importation of all equipment free of duty. St. Louis Exhibitors To See Producers About Plan—Sydney S. Cohen Refuses to Talk
(Special to WID’S DAILY)
St. Louis—President Joseph Mogler of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League, states that a committee representing the league, has gone to New York very shortly to confer with the important producers and to present the zone plan of selling pictures which now prevails in St. Louis and vicinity. Mogler says that the plan is not equitable and works undue hardship on the smaller exhibitor. Under this plan, we are forced to face the exchanges any price, they ask pictures,” Mogler says. “Today we are paying from $25 to $500 for that former cost us $10 to $15. We will endeavor to adjust the situation so the exhibitors will have a chance of making some money. Delegates will give the producers the desired tips on the manner in which the book is handled. (Continued on Page 2)

Six Years Old

Thursday, March 11, 1915, WID said:

“It is much better to pay a salary to a capable director, who you are sure is going to make a fine film which will please the crowds, it pulls, than to pay a great price for a book or play which is possibly going to be for purposes, and then slump on the director’s salary, with the result that you get a mediocre film, which will pull the business down.” This was a vital question in the film business today, and the men who hold the reins must regard it seriously. The public wants well-known books and plays when they are well done, but if the production is to be shaded in the matter of expense, because too much has been paid for the rights to the production, then some other method is being used. The wise thing is to make known your directors. It is always the director who can make or break any film.

“The Last of the Mohicans,” Maurice Tourneur’s motion picture elaboration of James Fenimore Cooper’s immortal story, is making motion picture history. It broke all records at the Strand Theatre, San Francisco, and played a week each to standing room only at the New York and Brooklyn Strands. An Associated Producers’ special. —Adv.

Designed for Non-Theatrical Field—Deal Expected to Be Closed in Two Weeks

An important deal involving the establishment of a new system of exchanges is expected to be closed in about two weeks. The proposed distributing system will serve the non-theatrical field exclusively.

The plan calls for the opening of at least 25 branches in the key cities of the country to serve schools, churches, community houses and institutions of like character. A deal is under way with a number of prominent distributors and certain short subjects to take over these pictures for the non-theatrical field. The films are of the kind that have outlived their usefulness in the theatrical field but which are said to be excellent for non-theatrical exhibition.

F. B. Warren, who recently resigned as general manager of distribution of Associated Producers, Inc., yesterday announced the formation of the F. B. Warren Corp., a new distributing organization which will operate exchange in 20 or more important cities throughout the United States.

Director and producer affiliations after have been made or are now being consummated which, it is stated, will guarantee the release of at least 30 productions, and perhaps more, for the 1921 season beginning Sunday, Sept. 4. READ THIS CLIPPING!

"The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which was at the Capitol last week, has probably more individuality than any photo-play yet made. Its modern expressionistic settings place it apart, of course, but these might simply mark it as unique. It bears significant relation to the photo-dramatic art because in it, more than in any other production, space is vivified, made an active, an assertive, part of the story told. Here is cinematography brought further, in a certain direction, than it has ever gone before. Here is an embodiment of the idea that in the developed moving picture, setting, scenery, must be endowed with life, with dimensions and meanings that are inseparable from the action of the players. And there is also finished acting in this most stimulating work of the German producers.

In The Courts

Justice Delahanty in the Supreme Court reserved decision on the application by stockholders in Loew's, Inc., and the Orpheum Circuit to restrain them from paying receipts estimated at $25,000 and $25,000 respectively to the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., on the ground that it is a social organization of which officers of the two corporations are members and that the donation of the receipts is waste of funds which the courts should not permit. Former Justice McCull defended the action and said that the payment is justified because the organization is a benefit association. He said that each plaintiff owns only one share of stock out of $90,000 in Loew's, and 1,000,000 in the Orpheum, and that the harm coming to each of the plaintiffs has been estimated at $2 cents apiece.

Lyman S. Abbot has sued the National Gravure Circuit, the Gravure Service Corp. and the Alco Gravure for $10,000 damages and an account Printing Co. in the Supreme Court. He says he agreed with the National Gravure Circuit to have the "Motion Picture Magazine" inserted in a number of newspapers as a supplement and the Alco Gravure Co. has to print the magazine and lend credit for the work. He says the latter refused to give further credit in January and organized the Gravure Service Corp. to print and publish the magazine, taking it away from the newspapers with which the plaintiff had contracted. He wants $5 on all the money received in addition to the $100,000.

Victor O. Freeburg has filed suit in the Supreme Court against Frances T. Patterson as the writer and Harcourt, Brace & Howe, Inc., as publishers of a book, "Cinema Craftsmanship," for $3,000 damages and an injunction restraining the sale of the book. He alleges that the defendant Patterson attended a series of lectures he gave at Columbia in 1917 on photoplay composition and that in the book a chapter on "Adaptation" has been taken from the manuscript of his lecture which he lent Patterson.

William M. Aydelotte, a lawyer of 33 West 42rd St., was sued in the Supreme Court by Vera McCord for $50,000 damages. She alleges that Aydelotte agreed in 1917 that if she would write a photoplay for Clara Louise Burnham's book, "Instead of the Thorn," he would finance it and they would share the profits. She alleges that she has been ready to carry out the agreement, but he refused to contribute enough to complete the film.

A judgment for $1,341 has been filed in the City Court against the P. W. Pictures, Inc., in a suit of Baumann & Co. to recover for goods sold and leased. The defendant filed an answer stating that it agreed to pay as soon as the returns from the picture were in, and that they are not in, but the defendant consented that the judgment be entered.

Theater Chain to Show Educational

Films Only, Planned for Various Cities

The establishment of theaters for the exclusive display of industrial and educational pictures is already under way in New York, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Indianapolis and Chicago, according to Harry Levey, who has recently completed a tour of the Middle West, where he has spoken before large audiences of commercial men.

According to Levey, the establishment of theaters where industrial and educational pictures are shown exclusively, is soon to be realized. The use of moving pictures by national advertisers is assuming large proportions, says Levey, on account of the possibilities of localizing advertising campaigns; and it is not uncommon for national advertisers to devote a good amount of their advertising appropriation for moving picture publicity.

The institutions which are to be opened in the various cities to show industrial and educational films will be charged the public 10 cents admission, according to the proposed plan. These institutions will be endowed by philanthropists and bankers and will not be conducted for the purpose of making money.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Making a complete change of scenery by merely turning an electric switch is the newest mail in stage investiture which Hugo Riesenberg will present soon at the Rivoli, Rialto, and Criterion. The change is made instantly—by a mere change of the color of lighting which floods the stage. The change from a Moorish interior into an old English garden is based upon the newest art evolved by Nicolai de Lipsky, the young Russian artist, who has been commissioned by Mr. Riesenberg to paint a series of settings for his theaters.

DeLipsky's method—while it is nothing new—is based upon the one of the oldest principles—that color is affected by different lights, that, in fact, a light thrown upon a color may make it invisible or bring it out more powerfully.

Managing Director Edw. L. Hyman, of the Brooklyn Strand, got a pair of Spanish dancing girls and a soloist and featured them in a court scene of a new opera. "The Passion Flower." Extras idled in the background until Fernando Garazzi, hardass, in sad and cape, came on singing "La Paloma" (Yradier). Then came the dance number. He called on the subject of "Old Madrid." The Brooklyn Mark Strand recently presented the light arias of Suppe's "Poet and Peasant," "Verdi," "Giovanotto," and Leoncavalo's "Pagliacci." The soloists, Kitty McLaughlin, soprano, Ralph R. Soule, tenor, and Asa White, baritone, were in costume. Alois Reiser conducted the orchestra without special lighting or scenic in the "Poet and Peasant" number.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—F. R. Smith, manager of the Bijou, created no end of comment in that town with an unusual pageant which was worked in exploiting "Outside the Law."

During the last year the police of that place have enforced a strict parking ordinance. When they find a car-owner breaking the ordinance, they "tag" the car with a red tag and give the owner to call at the police station.

Smith had a bunch of red tags made up the same size and color of the police tags. On these tags he printed the following ad:

"You haven't been pinched. But you ought to be, if you pass up the chance to see the greatest American melodrama ever shown on the screen, 'Outside the Law.'

For the third time in his Fox directorial career, J.
Gordon Edwards has made an historical pageant, this time going back to the days of Solomon and Sheba.
In 1917 he made “Cleopatra” with Theda Bara and, in 1918 “Salome” with the same star. But “The Queen of Sheba” is the best and the biggest of the three for two reasons. The first is that the present production has real dramatic value, a quality that was lacking in the others and, again, it contains genuine thrills.

Every Exhibitor Should Get It And “Clean Up”
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

First and last “The Queen of Sheba” is one of the year’s big pictures and perhaps a particularly big one because of its historical background. It has been some time since picturegoers have been presented with a spectacle such as this. The production’s visual appeal seems unlimited. Exhibitors throughout the country will do well to secure it for an extended run and after the Broadway presentation the title should be sufficient to insure regular Santa Claus B. O. receipts.

The musical score prepared by Erno Rapp should be secured because for a feature of this kind the proper accompaniment is not only a benefit but an essential.
If it should be possible that folks will not be properly advised by the mere mention of “The Queen of Sheba” tell them it is another J. Gordon Edwards spectacle and recall his “Cleopatra” and “Salome” with promises of much better things in this one.
Artistic And Well Acted Production. Story Suffers From Elaboration

D. W. Griffith presents "DREAM STREET"
United Artists

DIRECTOR .......................... D. W. Griffith
AUTHOR .......................... Thomas Burke
SCENARIO BY ......................... Roy Sinclair
CAMERAMAN ........................ Henrik Sartov
AS A WHOLE . . . The usual Griffith artistry and excellence of production but "Dream Street" is somewhat removed from perfection mark

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 10,100 feet

Perhaps Mr. Griffith wasn’t satisfied with what he had done, and that may be the reason for the program foreword which says "we do not make any promises one way or the other: we have done the best we could." or was it modesty which prompted the lines? At any rate "Dream Street" doesn’t quite measure up to what folks have come to expect of the man who made such productions as "The Birth of a Nation" and "Way Down East."

The story is based on two of Thomas Burke’s stories, "Gina of Chinatown" and "The Sign of the Lamp," and to allay all criticism of the absence of plausibility, the title gives away the nature of the play. It is a tale of "dream people who look from wistful windows, or walk with visions on the street of dreams." It is developed with a moral viewpoint, and an allegorical atmosphere is injected to bring out the influence of good and evil. Tyrone Power is the Sayer of Truths, or the good influence, while Morgan Wallace is a "trickster of the streets," whose violin melodies have an evil influence. The mask which he wears adds to his sinister aspect.

Throughout the picture the spectator is aware of how the theme that occur when they are least expected, and happens surprisingly that it takes a few moments to regain your bearings and catch up with the new proceeding. The story of "Dream Street" is not smoothly told, and the gap between sequences slacken the interest each time they occur. The usual Griffith artistic embellishments have all been employed to make "Dream Street" appeal to the eye. The settings and effects generally are splendid, and the photography quite beautiful. The lightings throughout are effective and notably fine in several instances. Once or twice when painted drops are used the lighting is a bit too bright. The camera work would have been better had the operator varied the angle occasionally. Several scenes are used many times and each time they are shown from the same position.

"Dream Street" as seen at the premiere showing is much too long. The sequences—there are three distinct sequences—are each elongated. Gypsy takes too long to decide that she loves "Spike," the situation of the two brothers is a little slow, with Gypsy is overdrawn, and the savage Sway Wan, who may be likened to the villain, and incidentally, personifying the evil influence, carries his role to the end, inconsistent with the theory that evil should be punished, the picture closes with Sway Wan as healthy as ever. "Good" is rewarded in the ultimate happiness of Gypsy and "Spike."

Clark Mack, a new Griffith find, handles the part of the weakling brother very well. His emotional work is well done. Ralph Graves does probably the best work of his career as "Spike" McFadden, a joy to the girls and a terror to the men of his district. As the dapper Beau Brummel of the Limehouse district, Graves seems to thoroughly enjoy the part in spite of the fact that he is inclined to overact a little. Carol Dempster as Gypsy Fair is a bit too refined for the type you would expect to portray in the music hall girl, but her beauty and manner make you forget what you think she should be. Close-ups of Miss Dempster are too frequent. Edward Peil is Sway Wan, the Chinese villain, who intrigue nearly sends Gypsy’s sweetheart to his death. He makes a good deal of the part, but unfortunately doesn’t reap his deserved punishment at the end.

The conclusion of the story is altogether too abrupt and doesn’t seem the logical ending. Gypsy is in the courtroom where her sweetheart is being tried for murder when Billie, "Spike's" brother, rushes in and admits that he committed the murder in self defense. This would appear to be a thoroughly logical ending, but it is cut off abruptly and a title announces the success of the trio and the following shots show them enjoying prosperity, and a youngest, the child of Gypsy and "Spike," add to the glad atmosphere.

Is Too Long For General Distribution. Don’t Bill As Super Special

In announcing the release of "Dream Street" Mr. Griffith has made it clear that the picture is not a super production, but will be put out for regular release by United Artists on April 25th. Regardless of what critics may think of "Dream Street," and arguments for and against it, one fact is certain, and that is it will draw patronage wherever the producer’s name is shown in connection with the title. In view of the previous announcements and the tone of the program foreword, you might make it clear that the producer is not offering "Dream Street" as a special. In this way you will not lure them with "great expectations."

"Dream Street" may be too long for the average house but possibly may be cut before it is given out for general release. On the other hand if it comes to you in its present 10,000 feet it would be well to follow the manner of presentation which is being used at the Central Theater, showing it in two parts with an intermission. By all means secure the musical accompaniment which has been arranged by Louis Silvers, with Thanhouser’s "Thou Shalt Not Steal," "The Evening Star" used prominently throughout the run. Talk about the Griffith artistic touches and you can promise them things from the Griffith players who portray the characters suggested by Thomas Richards in his "House of Usher," which is in connection with "Broken Blossoms," it might be well to use his name, explaining how Roy Sinclair has written the scenario for "Dream Street," based on Burke’s "Gina of Chinatown," and "The Sign of the Lamp." Stills and general lobby display should be given careful attention.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Jewess secretly married to Gentile extracts an oath of silence because of parental objection

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 7,806 feet

R. A. Walsh has taken a story bearing a rather delicate subject for his latest production, "The Oath," and he is to be given due credit for the manner in which he has handled the situation in the main. Producers have obviously steered clear of stories dealing with religious differences, and, in "The Oath" the entire theme is based on the objections of a Jew to the marriage of his daughter with a Gentile. The story contains strong dramatic moments and director Walsh has worked up his action to a proper pitch, but he wasn't satisfied, and in an effort to make the most of the opportunities, he has overdone it considerably and the result at times is disappointing.

The most prominent over-dramatic sequence is that of the court room and trial scene, in which Miriam Cooper plays a strong emotional part, but there is too much of this and it is too exaggerated for plausibility. It is unfortunate that this part of the picture is marred by drama laid on too thick, for otherwise it is the best thing in the picture. Detail in the English Court with the wigged gentleman, is excellent and somewhat of a novelty. The work of Miss Cooper, other than a bit of over-acting, is splendid, and her performance is well worth seeing. Conway Tearle satisfied the role of the Gentile, but he refuses to display much emotion. Anna Q. Nilsson and Henry Clive are adequate in minor parts.

The picture suffers generally from a poor continuity although on close observation it is more likely that the cutter is to blame, especially in view of such a prominent error as that showing Miss Cooper going out of one room clad in a velvet gown and a following shot showing her in another room, still accompanied by the gentleman she left the former room with, and wearing a totally different dress, and having her hair fixed entirely different. No title indicates reason for the change, or the fact that any time has elapsed allowing for the change.

Minna Hart, a Jewess, extracts an oath of silence from her husband, Hugh Coleman, a Gentile, regarding their secret marriage, and swears never to see him again because she believes him a coward. When Minna's father is murdered and Coleman accused of the act, the oath prevents him from saving himself, because he cannot say he was with his wife at the time of the murder. There are numerous complications including Minna's jealousy of Irene Lansing, a former friend of her husband's and Irene's sacrifice to save Hugh from conviction. Eventually Hugh and Minna are reconciled and start life over again, while Irene's husband forgives her perjury which saved Hugh's life.

Catchlines Based On Theme Should Attract Attention

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

In view of other big pictures made by R. A. Walsh, there should be a good majority who will want to see this production. Its main appeal is through the situation upon which the story is based and because of the frequency with which society faces just this problem is sufficient reason for arousing interest in the photoplay. Therefore make the fundamental theme the basis of your appeal and use lines that will let them know what "The Oath" is about. The following would be appropriate: "Should religious differences be a barrier to love? See the result of a secret marriage of a Jewess and a Gentile in R. A. Walsh's adaptation of Wm. J. Locke's novel 'Idols.'"

You can promise your patrons nothing offensive and can assure them that a rather delicate situation is carefully handled and contains strong dramatic moments. Mention Miss Cooper's name and refer to her good work in a different role.

By this time picture patrons have come to expect good entertainment from the pictures of the Japanese star and he is to be thought of in connection with stars who don't "disappoint," such as Charlie Ray, Bill Hart and a few others. And it isn't at all unlikely that many of the star's admirers have come to the conclusion that Hayakawa is not given the prominence which his splendid work deserves.

"Black Roses" is an entertaining picture, above the average program release. First of all they had a really good story to work with and a continuity which is without a break. Then the director has gone right to it, introduced his characters and gotten right into the plot without delay. The action follows in rapid sequence and there is no lagging between times and no tedious detail to hold up the interest, no long, unnecessary sub-titles because they aren't required. The action doesn't require explanation.

Of course the Japanese star is undoubtedly responsible for a good share of the picture's success and his acting is excellent, as usual, and he is supported by a capable, well-cast company of players, including his wife, Tsuru Aoki, Myrtle Stedman, Henry Hebert and Toyo Fujita. But Director Campbell's efforts also are to be taken into account when dividing the "glory." His numerous "touches" register every time. And the manner in which he develops his story and keeps building the suspense toward the grand climax is notably fine. The photography in the Hayakawa pictures is always splendid and in "Black Roses" there are many fine bits, among them some lighting effects that are artistic.

"Monocle" Harry with his co-workers, Blanche and Wong Fu, kill Benson Burleigh. They "frame" the murder on Yoda, the gardener, who is convicted. The crooks take Blossom, Yoda's bride, and hide her in Chinatown. A fellow inmate tells Yoda how he was "framed." Yoda makes a daring escape and later as a prince of the Orient becomes acquainted with Blanche and her associates. This time Blanche and Harry try to work the "badger" game on the prince, but he pretends to be one of their kind and through a clever series of tricks and intrigue Yoda not only recovers his wife but also brings about the arrest and conviction of Blanche, Harry and the Japanese partner, Wong Fu.

Well Worth Booking If You Want To Show Good Pictures

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Closely following the success of Hayakawa's recent production, "The First Born," Robertson-Cole are showing "Black Roses," incidentally a good title which should have a good drawing power properly written up with catchlines. There is little about "Black Roses" that requires analysis. It is a truly entertaining offering which exhibitors will do well to book, and where the star is a favorite you can make promises that you know the picture will fulfill.

Exhibitors who are not showing the Japanese star's pictures should lose no further time in acquainting themselves with his work and securing a booking of "Black Roses" to introduce him to their patrons. Those who usually show Hayakawa productions will be sure to please them with this. You might also mention that he is supported by his wife in this one.

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Wife striving to reform evil husband, finally abandons him for man who first loved her

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... 5,803 feet

Much snow and ice and husbandly villainy are the outstanding features of Alice Lake’s latest starring vehicle. It is only fair entertainment. The story is the familiar triangle, with a bad husband and a good “other man” in the woman’s life. It is old material, and it has been treated in the regulation way, without the touches of originality which would lift it above the commonplace. The development takes many improbable twists and turns. The situations are started off with the prospect of dramatic incident to come, and then most of them are abandoned just before the high point of the action, and the next thing the spectator sees the result of the action, and not the thing itself. This is true when the wife saves her husband from the opium den, and in several of the incidents taking place in the far North.

Throughout the whole piece there runs the idea of spiritual strength and “soul union.” The punch in the biggest moments falls short of its purpose through the story’s improbabilities and its failure to arouse a great deal of sympathy.

Alice Lake plays the part of the mistreated and long suffering wife, impressively, and if the story backed her up more strongly in its appeal, her performance would stand out much more clearly. She displays just about the right amount of emotion during the time she is struggling to make a man of her husband, and her big scene in the far north is a good piece of acting, although the scene itself leaves the spectator unconvinced. Rudolph Valentino gives the best performance in the supporting cast.

One or two errors in detail appear. The hero is clean shaven after wandering for days in the arctic, but suddenly appears with a stubble of beard on his face. In the next shot he has not changed his position, but the beard is gone. In another scene there is a blizzard raging, yet the dog team casts a perfect shadow on the snow.

The story is of a wife who does everything in her power to reform her straying husband, even going to the arctic with him in search of gold. There he shows his cowardice by turning back, and she abandons him for her former sweetheart, and together they brave the wilds of the north.

The Star May Attract, But Don’t Make Too Many Promises

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Except for the star, there isn’t a whole lot to work with in advertising “Uncharted Seas.” That is, there are not many unqualified promises you can make for it without running the chance of disappointing. The best thing to do is to stick pretty closely to regular announcements, using the star’s name if she is popular, and making a promise of a good performance on her part. The nature of the story has more or less drawing power, so that it will be all right to give a hint as to what it is all about. Stills of the scenes in the north, particularly of where the ice crushes the boat, will attract attention. Catchlines relating to the theme will help, and you can also tell them that the story is an adaptation of John Fleming Wilson’s story which appeared in Munsey’s Magazine.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 6,283 feet

Cosmopolitan's latest production is from the story by Frank Adams, and directed by George Baker with Zena Keefe and Norman Kerry as featured players.
On the whole "Proxies" is mildly interesting and perhaps it’s the fault of no one individually that it fails to measure up as exceeding the average mark; but it doesn’t. The story contains little strong screen material. It isn’t weighty and there are no big moments or surprises in the film.

There is too much footage allotted to its telling and the ending is put off too long. Careful cutting would improve “Proxies” considerably and many of the sub-titles could be omitted entirely. They are too numerous and often poorly written. For the most part director Baker has managed things satisfactorily.
Raye Dean, who plays the part of the society girl who flirts with her father’s butler, does some peculiar manoeuvering in an empty ballroom where the butler is trying to arrange some chairs. It would seem that she decided to “play” a bit. Miss Dean has done much better work and it’s to be hoped her habit of pointing her finger isn’t a permanent mannerism.
Norman Kerry and Zeena Keefe do satisfactory work, but have limited opportunities in the featured roles.

A satisfactory premise isn’t established in the early reels, and the spectator is confused by the love affair of the girl, the none-too-specific financial difficulties of her father, and the actions of the butler and the maid.
A title here and there, properly worded, would help to make things more comprehensive.

Carlotta Darley is engaged to Homer Carleton, but she regrets that Homer isn’t as tall and handsome as Peter, the butler. Mr. Darley is aware that Peter is an ex-crook but believing that he has reformed, retains him in his employ. Clare Conway, a maid in the household is in love with Pete, and jealous of Carlotta’s admiration of him. A reception is in progress in the Darley home at the time John Stover arrives with a certain paper that will bring about Darley’s financial ruin. Peter manoeuvres to have Stover invited into the reception room, and having overheard Stover’s conversation, holds up the guests at the point of a pistol, in order to secure the paper and save his employer. He does, and later escapes with Clare and marries her.

Not Strong Enough For A Run
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This isn't big enough to hold over if you are in the habit of playing Cosmopolitan productions for an extended run. Zena Keefe should be well enough known to warrant using her name as an attraction, and perhaps Norman Kerry’s name is familiar, although he is not of stellar prominence. You might mention George Baker’s name and tell them of his recent Cosmopolitan picture "Buried Treasure," starring Marion Davies. If you have already played the latter, so much the better.

Rather than making promises you might rely upon catchlines to get them interested, using some along the following: "Peter, the butler, admitted he was a crook though reformed. His employer believed him but why did he hold up the guests at the reception?
See for yourself in ‘Proxies.’" Use sufficient catch-lines to give them an idea of the story.

Heart Interest In This That Doesn’t Always Register

“WHAT’S A WIFE WORTH?”
Robertson-Cole

DIRECTOR .......... William Christy Cabanne
AUTHOR .......... William Christy Cabanne
SCENARIO BY .... William Christy Cabanne
CAMERAMAN ....... Georges Benoit
AS A WHOLE ...... Quite expensively staged but too long drawn out; not convincing STORY ...... Attempts heart appeal in several ways, which fall short of their aim DIRECTION ...... Good in staging, and in securing atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Good
LIGHTINGS .......... All right
CAMERA WORK ...... Up to standard
PLAYERS ...... Casson Ferguson offers nothing unusual; Alex Francis, Cora Drew and Ruth Renick, good in some scenes EXTERIORS ........... Good night shots
INTERIORS .......... Some quite elaborate ones
DETAIL ........................ Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Husband, tricked by false friends into believing his wife has deserted him, divorces her and marries again, only to learn the truth later
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,600 feet

The outstanding feature of “What’s A Wife Worth?” is its continuous striving to appeal to the heart, and to play on the sympathies, through various standard forms of heart appeal. Among the chief of these is mother love. Perhaps it is because it is so evident that they are trying for all they are worth to get the audience’s sympathy, or perhaps it is just because there is too much of it; at any rate something causes much of the desired effect to be partially lost.

There isn’t enough material to the story to make so long a picture. If it were cut down, so that it wouldn’t be necessary to devote sequence after sequence to a comparison of the daily life of the heroine with that of the husband from whom she is separated, the entire middle part of the picture would be vastly improved. As it is constant repetition of the same sort of events loses through over work.

There is a good thought behind the story. There are numbers of flowery sub-titles, so long as to completely fill the frame of the picture, and these, too, detract from rather than add to the progress of the production.

The hero of the story is not a likable character, at least through most of the action. He is certainly not much of a man, when he shows himself afraid to introduce his wife to his father, and hides her in the house, while he plays around with the girl of his father’s choice. Casson Ferguson does everything that the part calls for, but there isn’t anything unusual or superior about his performance. The best bit in the picture is done by Cora Drew as the heroine’s old aunt. Alex Francis also displays his usual ability, but his part calls for nothing big.

Bruce Morrison, son of a wealthy man, after quarreling with his father, marries Rose Kendall, a village belle. He returns home with his wife, and hides her from his father, while Jane Penfield, the girl of his father’s choice, is introduced to Bruce. Jane’s brother, discovering Rose, fills her head with lies, so that she runs away and is lost to Bruce. Abandoning hope of finding her, Bruce, to please his father, secures a divorce and marries Jane. The marriage is unhappy.

Meantime Rose has gone to work, and later a child is born to her. She cannot care for it, and fate leads her to place it in Bruce’s home. Bruce and Rose are finally brought face to face, and after many complications, a reconciliation is effected.

Title Should Draw, But Don’t Promise Too Much
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The fact that “What’s A Wife Worth?” is likely to prove somewhat tiresome, makes it advisable to go rather slow on the kind of promises you make for it, unless you operate a transient house, where you don’t have to keep them coming. It has a good idea, and without doubt many people will like it. The title has a lot of drawing power, and will certainly attract attention, so that much use of it is about your best advertising bet.

You can tell them that Casson Ferguson has the leading part, and refer to his work in “Madame X.” Also tell them that Alex Francis is in the cast, as he is well liked by most picturegoers. Use the line, “Is a Wife worth fame, fortune, honor, everything? See ‘What’s a Wife Worth’ at the blank theater and judge.”

DETAIL .................. Nothing wrong

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . Boy runs away from cruel father and finds good home with lawyer's sister

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION . . . 4,589 feet

Reeves Eason, Jr., known as "Breezy" Eason, has been seen before in support of various Universal stars, but in "The Big Adventure" he is a star in his own right and deserves it. "Breezy" is a likable little chap with considerable personality for one so young, and he displays promise of becoming well known among juvenile players. Of course his father's direction is responsible perhaps for his good work, but even at that he seems much at home, and shows no signs of being camera-shy.

The story of "The Big Adventure" is unimportant and so it isn't probable that its lack of originality or the fact that it contains little action is going to matter very much. It affords the youthful star the sort of part which gives him good prominence. The story is really narrative in form and there are no high lights except a rather effective climax. There doesn't seem any good excuse for the romantic twist, because of the obvious difference in the ages of the man and the little girl. Reeves Eason has made a thoroughly comprehensible picture, and it isn't dragged out to unnecessary length. It may strike some that he has injected the brutality business a trifle too strongly, but there are no really long shots of it.

Patches, a waif whose name is no exaggeration, decides to run away from his brutal father, so with his dog Mickey, he becomes a passenger of a box car. The brakeman is kindly and Patches is allowed to ride to a near-by town where the boy insists he has relatives. He hasn't, of course, and eventually he meets some tramps, and while with them, all are arrested. A young lawyer, John Wellborn, asks for custody of the boy, and Patches finds a comfortable home on the farm of Wellborn's sister and her adopted daughter Sally.

The boy's father in the meantime has become a tramp, and comes to the farm begging food. When he finds Patches alone in the house, he robs the place then takes his son away. Sally, who is in love with Wellborn, is running away because she thinks he loves someone else. She sees Patches being taken into a deserted hut. She follows and is held a prisoner. Patches escapes and brings help. Sally learns that Wellborn does love her, and Patches returns to the farm.

Play Up Boy Star And Appeal To Children Especially

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is an enjoyable offering inasmuch as it presents an agreeable youngster in a part that gives him the right sort of opportunities and he takes advantage of them. Little "Breezy" Eason will undoubtedly gain many admirers through his first stellar appearance, and in billing the picture you may recall pictures in which he has supported various Universal stars. You might make an extra appeal for matinee attendance, and tell them about the youthful star of "The Big Adventure."

Children especially will like the picture, and they will probably want to see more pictures with "Breezy" starring, so you might give his initial one a good boost to get them interested. Catchlines should attract and you might say: "If your father was cruel, your mother was dead and you had no friend but a dog, what would you do? See how 'Breezy' solved the problem in 'The Big Adventure.'"

Some Good Comedy In a Weak Story

Mabel Normand in “WHAT HAPPENED TO ROSA” Goldwyn

DIRECTOR .................. Victor Schertzinger

SCENARIO BY .................. Gerald C. Duffy
CAMERAMAN .................. George Webber

AS A WHOLE ... Pretty good comedy; very well made, furnishing moments of light entertainment

STORY ...... Adapted from Pearl Curran’s “Rosa Alvaro, Entrante”

DIRECTION ...... Has taken advantage of every comedy possibility. Interest holds well without much plot

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Very good
LIGHTINGS ........................ Good
CAMERA WORK ................. Standard

STAR ...... Senses all opportunity for comedy, and puts it over in her usual way

SUPPORT ...... Hugh Thompson, Doris Pawn, and Tully Marshall all contribute a lot

EXTERIORS ....... Good ship and carnival scenes

INTERIORS .................... Adequate

DETAIL ............... Some well written sub-titles

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Department store clerk assumes character of Spanish vamp to win her hero

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 4,148 feet

The biggest thing and about the only thing to “What Happened to Rosa” is Mabel Normand. The story has been told, and the whole production directed, simply as a means of giving the star an opportunity to be funny with the tricks, and the business that she undeniably puts over in a highly amusing fashion.
The story itself hasn’t much body to it, nor is any attempt made to do more than amuse. In this it is pretty successful. There are a number of ridicuously funny situations, and in each of them the star gets full value out of the comedy.

Promise The Comedy They Will Expect From The Star

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“What Happened To Rosa” has enough of the sort of comedy that your patrons expect from Mabel Normund, to warrant a promise of some real amusement.
The story isn’t much, but it serves its purpose, and there will be few who will not find a good deal of enjoyment in the star’s performance, and the humor of the piece. The idea that stands out—that of the fake fortune teller guiding the girl on the right track—offers possibilities for amusing and attractive stunts.

She has sort of a female Bunker Bean part. As a meek and woebegone shop girl, who acts upon the advice of a mind reader, and assumes the character of a dashing Spanish beauty, Mabel has a large field of comedy to work with, and most of the time the laughs are forthcoming. The transformation from the shop girl to the fiery, coquettish Spaniard, with the attendant wonder and misgivings of her friend, who thinks she is having “fits,” all makes for a good deal of genuine amusement.

The director is responsible for holding up the interest pretty well between the moments of comedy, by well staged scenes, and by keeping the players on the move all the time. The scenes on board the carnival boat are particularly well done, and in spite of the fact that there is nothing to show that it is really a ship, the atmosphere is very realistic.

The cast is a highly satisfactory one. Tully Marshall adds his usual effective performance to the contribution of comedy, and Doris Pawn is quite equal to the part of Mayme Ladd’s shop-girl room mate.
Hugh Thompson isn’t called upon for very much in the hero part, but he does everything necessary in a satisfactory way. The titles are humorons, and nearly every one of them is good for a laugh.

Mayme Ladd, working at the stocking counter of Friedman’s store, dreams of a romantic life, and when she sees a picture of Dr. Maynard Drew, he becomes the hero of all her dreams. She consults Madame Yvette O’Donnell, an Egyptian seeress, who tells her she is the reincarnation of a beautiful Spaniard.
Mayme forwih assumes the character on all occasions, and in this guise she meets Drew on a river excursion.
Then she disappears, and the Doctor, who has fallen in love with her, searches everywhere for her, finally finding her in the person of a ragged young man who has contrived to get himself injured and brought to the doctor’s office. He tells her that he loves her just as well as Mayme, as though she were really Rosa.

Type of production........................................1 reel magazine
There is a shot in this number of about every point of interest in New York City. Or at least there are so many of them that it seems as though there could be no interesting places missed. New York City is always an interesting subject, particularly the farther away one gets, so that the reel should make a generally interesting one anywhere. It starts off with some views of Broadway at its busiest. Then follow shots of Madison Square, Columbus Circle, Central Park, Morningside Park, Riverside Drive, Columbia University, the College of the City of New York, Van Cortlandt Park and the Washington Bridge, connecting Manhattan and the Bronx. Moving down to the other end of the island, the spectator is shown a panorama of the East River, with Manhattan and Williamsburg Bridges, a close-up of Brooklyn Bridge, some docks in the East River and some old ferry boats which have been converted into schools for sickly children. The subjects are all interesting and there is a sub-title with information about each.

"The Naturalists"—Fox
Type of production.................................1 reel animated cartoon
After seeing this cartoon one would think that the idea must have originated after a large dose of home-brew (not slandering Mr. Bud Fisler). It is so ridiculous that it seems impossible that anyone could help laughing at it, and it is probable that everyone will laugh who sees it. Mutt and Jeff are putting on a moving picture talklogue in which they show their experiences studying animals, the first of which is the "Tail-chasing Cuss-Cuss." It isn't possible to explain what it's all about, but it's very funny and if a cartoon ever got a laugh this one will get several.

"Torchy's Night Hood"—Master Films-Educational
Type of production...................................2 reel comedy
One of a series of "Torchy" comedies, starring Johnny Hines, and with the stories based on Sewell Ford's red-headed office boy character. Hines is a good selection for the part, and he is really very funny in this number. The popularity of the "Torchy" stories should make the comedy a good drawing card, and there won't be many people disappointed in the picture. It's fun from start to finish, with a whole lot of laughs. At the start Torchy goes into Child's with one smooth dime in his pocket. He manages to corral three wheat cakes without the man in the window seeing him, and then hides them from the waitress while he orders a cup of coffee. Then there is a big laugh when a young lady enters with a small but mean dog, which instantly bites a hole in the dollar mark on Torchy's ticket. Torchy then attempts to help a friend elope with a rich man's daughter, and gets into all sorts of hot water as a result. It's all good stuff and quite an original style of comedy. It should go very well in any house.

"A Monkey Movie Star"—Universal
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy
This one has Joe Martin, the monkey, for its star. It will be a sure fire number with kids and will also prove amusing to grownups on the strength of the ridiculous story that has been built up around the ape. Joe sees a moving picture company taking a scene and a sub-title informs that he would like to be a "movie star." Joe straightway goes to sleep and dreams the rest of the picture, in which he becomes a high-salaried, temperamental star. Joe takes his breakfast in bed, dresses in his walking clothes and top hat, and performs very humanly through the whole performance. Some of his facial expressions while undergoing a full toilet at the hands of his barbers are screams. The utter disgust with which he receives the services of the barber who wants to shave him will get a howl out of most anyone. It is a good comedy for any type of audience.

"Bubbling Over"—Pathé
Type of production..................................1 reel comedy
Some of the stuff in this one is the best that Snub Pollard has had to work with for some time, although Snub doesn't have much more to do with putting it over than several other members of the cast. In fact the stuff goes over on its own strength more than anything else. Marie Mosquini and Sunshine Sambo are in support of Snub. There is a lot of business with soap bubbles that is good for a lot of laughs, although it doesn't sound particularly funny. Snub is a haggard husband, and when the cook quits with company coming, his wife makes Snub cook the dinner. He gets a cake of soap in the soup, and the result is disastrous but funny. The reel runs off pretty fast, and should be a satisfactory short comedy in a majority of houses.

"Alexandria"—Burton Holmes-Paramount
Type of production........................................1 reel travelogue

Making a complete tour of the city of Alexandria, Egypt, and giving a bit of interesting information about each one of the places visited, this reel forms an entertaining, and the only satisfactory travel picture. A great many of the unusual facts about the city's inhabitants and their life are brought out in the course of the reel. It starts out with a view of the harbor, with Alexandria as part of the city of the Pharaohs, and the ruins of ancient northern Africa. The water front, looking very modern and up to date is seen, with a modern lighthouse replacing the ancient Pharos, which was the first lighthouse on record, and one of the wonders of the world. Then there are shots of the principal hotels, the stock exchange, with a view of the traders in action, and a scene of the Place Mehemet Ali, which is the principal thoroughfare of the city. A panorama of the whole city convinces that the census, given out as 400,000 population, is not padded. The only relics of Alexandria's ancient glory are Pompey's Pillar, and two recently excavated sphinxes, of which good views have been obtained. There are some views of the surrounding rural districts, and the reel ends with shots of natives asleep in every conceivable position in the city streets.

"Edgar The Detective"—Goldwyn
Type of production.........................................2 reel comedy

One of the series of Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" stories. It is certain appeal to all intelligent people, and in particular to all those who enjoy and appreciate Booth Tarkington's "Boy" characters. The author's personality and individual style of humor is apparent all through this number, and is further emphasized in the titles. It's good clean, wholesome fun from start to finish, and should be an excellent comedy for high class houses. As may be imagined, Edgar conceives the dream of being a detective, and invests in a correspondence course in the art. When he and his country cousin go on a visit to their farmer-uncle, Edgar imagines that Ole, the hired man is bent on murdering the hired girl, and proceeds to "detect" him according to the teachings of the book. It is good stuff, with a big laugh at the finish, and some very humorous action introduced in the form of some of Edgar's day dreams about his future as a detective.

Type of production........................................1 reel magazine

There is interest or beauty in nearly every foot of this issue, which is composed of a good selection of subjects, with just about the right amount of space devoted to each. It's a first rate reel of its kind. The first subject is titled "Fins and Fun," and shows two men enjoying the thrills of trout fishing in a beautiful mountain stream. The fishing is very good, and the men have a very good time. Then there are some interesting views of the machine-process of making men's straw hats. It takes the spectator through the whole operation, from the time the straw comes into the factory until the finished product reposes on a young man's head. A slow motion bit is next, showing how complicated this roller skate is really when the different motions are analyzed. A few shots of animals in the Bronx zoo are next shown, and the reel concludes with some beautifully tinted shots of Glacier Park.

"The Law Of The Woods"—Pathe
Type of production........................................2 reel western

This is one of the series of short features adapted from Holman Day stories, and produced by Edgar Jones. Jones also plays the leading part. This one has a better story fundamentally than some of the foregoing numbers of the series, but the development of the theme isn't all that it might be. There isn't a lot of attention paid to detail, or to the general feeling of the production, so that spots it looks rather crude. Jones is a realistic type for the hero of this one, although he isn't exactly the popularly conceived type of hero. It will probably be a satisfactory offering for smaller theater audiences, but to the more discriminating persons it will be unbearable to the more discriminating. Jones plays the part of a confirmed groucher with a past, in a frontier logging camp. He meets the men who have come to cut timber to the woods to kill him. He is arrested for murder, but proves that he is innocent, is set free, and goes on his way, and is finally re-united with his wife and baby, whom the villain has stolen.

"In Bad Against"—C. B. C. Film Sales Corp.
Type of production........................................2 reel comedy

This is the eighth of the present series of Hallroom Boys comedies, and the last to be released through C. B. C. Film Sales Corp. Beginning with the ninth number, they will be released through Federation Film Exchanges. Sid Smith is the featured comedian, with Harry McCoy playing the part of the other flourisher. They are a number of good laughs scattered through it starting with a big one right from the bat and a good portion of the story is pretense and regisseur. They haven't made use of as much trick photography, which in some of the foregoing numbers has resulted in a lot of laughable things. Smith and McCoy work both the comedy and the action in an acceptable manner, and usually put all the punch possible into their business. They try out as automobile salesmen in one, and there is a lot of business built up around a Ford, which, while anything but a new subject, is still good for a laugh or two. A fairly satisfactory comedy offering.

"The Sweetest Story Ever Told"—Prizma
Type of production........................................1 reel colored novelty

A distinct novelty, in one-reelers is this Prizma offering. "The sweetest story" turns out to be a short review of the various forms of candy and confections of all kinds, used as an aid to cupid. It shows, in the very natural Prizma coloring, many different, and elaborate forms of candy, boxfulls of those artistic creations in the forms of flowers, hats, and baskets, all made of candy, take form before the camera in a miraculous way. The only thing of value about the reel is its novelty value, and a satisfactory offering on the program of the larger houses.

"One Per Cent Was Plenty"—Chester-Educational
Type of production........................................1 reel scenic

The cameraman who shot this took his tripod in some precarious positions to shoot some of these scenes in the Canadian Rockies. The scenes are taken among the high peaks in British Columbia, and they present some of the greatest mountain country in the world. The trains make stops at some of the more precipitous places. The scaling of some of the steep rocks provides a thrill or two. It's a first rate scenic offering.

Screen Snapshots No. 23—C. B. C. Film Sales Corp.
Type of production........................................1 reel Fan Magazine

The latest issue of the reel, that offers glimpses of the fans' favorites, when they are "out of character," is a good one. There are not only a number of stars caught off duty, but there is also a thrill provided by a novel airplane stunt. The reel starts off with the shooting of a scene in which Earle Metcalfe rescues Anna Q. Nilsson for a sinking ship, with Frank Borzage directing. Then there is the thriller, when Frank Clark flies from the roof of a skyscraper for the first time in the history of American aeronautics. This scene was made for a forthcoming Katherine McDonald picture, and makes an interesting bit of footage. Other subjects shown Jack Pickford inspecting the construction of some new sets; Marion Davies showing how easy it is to change from a blond to a brunette; Geraldine Farrar and her husband, Lou Tellegen, being welcomed home from a ride by Mrs. Tellegen's parents; and the final bit shows J. Stuart Blackton directing his two clever children in a scene. Most of the reel should prove very interesting to fans who enjoy a little touch of intimacy with their favorite stars.

Paramount Magazine—Famous Players
Type of production........................................1 reel magazine

This issue contains only two subjects, both of which are cartoons and the first the "Of Course" cartoon, a bit just why reason is not clear. It isn't particularly funny. The other is a Felix cartoon by Pat Sullivan, and is up to the standard of these pictures, which are nearly always good for a lot of good laughs. Felix's character is his usual one, and the scaling of the ridiculous predicaments he gets into are very amusing. It makes a good filler on the strength of the latter part.

Plans Specials Only—Will Work in the East

Henry M. Hobart, former general manager of the International Film Co., Inc., producers of Consolidated Prod., has formed a company in Albany known as Distinctive Prod.

It is Mr. Hobart's plan to make films, probably three or four a year. He has already turned no distributor plans as yet. He stated on Saturday that he will produce in the East, and that he didn't have a studio as a producer. Further, he has said the thing nothing of distribution plans, it will be recalled that shortly after the March left International, as stated in D'S DAILY at the time, plans were under way for an independent producing unit with Hobart as the central figure. Distribution was the only Associated First National deal, it can be stated authoritatively, by far as Hobart is concerned, definitely off.

Building Ban Ends

Theaters in England to Go Ahead—Move Is of Tremendous Importance—See Held Up.

(Special WID'S DAILY)

London—The legislation which has been in force in Army and is some time past against the concentration of new theaters has practically ended. The bill has been officially lifted. And the result is that a theater in London is to be opened. Dr. Addison has introduced a new Housing Bill in Commons, one of whose provisions which calls for the lifting of the ban on luxury buildings will have been fulfilled. And as to help do away with the depression in the building trades. It is the impression of film men here that the House will become a law speedily. Its passage is being looked for, for it has been in force for a considerable time. If it is passed, it will be desirable. That is, it is now conservatively estimated that a total of 100 theater projects will be started in the next year. Picture Playhouses Ltd., the Famous Players theater subsidiary for Great Britain, in which a number of coal barons are very much interested, it is expected, will start its activities on a rather extensive scale. The number of legitimate theaters which were intended for super-kinemas—there are several in those they are to go West End of London which are to be converted—is not definitely known.

Film men in close touch with the English situation were of the opinion that the lifting of building restrictions in England would be an

Let's see? How long ago was it that the theatrical people couldn't "see" the picture business? Or anyone in it?

"WHAT'S NEXT?"

Asks Jesse Hampton. "We've had factory made pictures. And then real productions. Now are we getting back to the routine made." H-e-y! Wait a minute. Don't rush so. You'll all be heard.

Talking of the coming season. Of course. Wants to make the kind of a picture the public wants. Thinks "Sentimental Tommy" great. He's right. Wants the clean kind. The kind you won't hear kicks about. And yet be human. All right JD go on and make 'em. There's a lot that should be made. That's certain.

GRIFF'S FIND

Charles Emmett Mack. Put that name down. It's going to last. A long time. Worked around the Griffith studio. DW dug him out. For a part in "Dream Street." Long way for a prop boy to go. To where he located in the picture. But he'll go further. Much. DW'll see it to.

By the by what became of Billy Bitzer's photography? Hendrik Sartov did Griff's latest. And the crowd at the first night wondered. Because Bitzer has been regarded as part of Griff.

BREAKING IN

"Schmoos" said Gould. "Whatcha trying to sell me now?"

FROM HERBIE MILES

Comes this. All the way from Italy. From a trade paper. Talking of some productions says this critic: "All the films mentioned above have the following faults in common——illogical, stupid or incomprehensible photo-play; forced mixing of tragic and dramatic with——farcical and comic situations; nonsensical details (abra-cadabra-maladies; doctors ignorant of the handling of their instruments; theapeutical hocus-pocus etc); tides and subtides too numerous (perhaps because they cost less to produce than the necessary explanatory scenes); too many princes, barons, counts, motor-cars, telephones, letters, revolvers, devilish schemes——just as though sensations, mad-queerades and receptions were the essence of life——and the ordinary humble working man were eternally on strike."

Which causes Miles to comment: "Some critique."

We'll say it is.

INTERESTING AND UNUSUAL

See a lot of companies advertising. To sell goods. But darn few using space to get product. It's moves like this that have Pioneer on the map. Doing the unexpected. And doing it well.

Wonder what I'll Arthur Tarshis had to do with it?

JUST BETWEEN FRIENDS

What is the producer of "Ben Hur" going to do? Just as easy as dribbling the ball in the can William Fox puts it over. Via J. Gordon Edwards. Who put a chariot race in "The Queen of Sheba." Nary a chariot in Jerusalem. In those days. But what's a little race between friends? And what sort of a thrill has he left the producer of "Ben Hur?"

Hearing Possible

Governor Miller May Grant One to Film Felik Before Finally Considering Censorship Bill

(By Long Distance Telephone)

Governor Miller may grant a hearing to motion picture interests before he takes up the Lusk-Clayton Censorship bill for definite action. Before leaving for New York Monday afternoon he said that he had been imported by many interests to give such a hearing and it was not unlikely that this might happen before he decided upon the personnel of the commission. If this happens it will occur within the next 30 days, as the Clayton bill is one of the measures upon which action must be taken by that time.

The Governor gave no indication that he did not anticipate signing the bill.

The possibility of censorship in the state was naturally the chief topic of discussion where film folk met yesterday in some quarters the belief was expressed that it was possible that the bill would not be signed, it was rather generally the attitude that the Governor intended putting the proposed bill into effect. This, as before noted, would bring censorship into active operation in New York on Aug. 1, 1921.

The crowd scenes roll by without effort; the story is without a single slip of irrelevancy, it is all extraordinarily real.

POST—In doing so the Germans are to be congratulated, for perhaps the best composed, most cogent and truly constructive dramatization of history that the screen of this country has yet seen.

MAIL—Because it is an exceedingly good western picture, one of the best that the screen has seen in some time. It only fails when it tries to mix the common with that of the scenarioists.

silence would be sweet. Your admiration for Miss Ferguson may help you bear the film.

POST—* * * The film works up to the several strong situations of the stage play. * * * It is the play screened, and still possesses of its act divisions. Elsie Ferguson beautifully powdered and what is more, looking it at the Carlin.

“Mother Eternal”—Abramson Prod.

WORLD—The picture generally is poorly conceived, poorly cast, poorly directed and poorly exhibited. There is an exception to this. For a time, Vivian Martin, a pretty and talented screen actress, does not lose her attractiveness even in these surroundings. AMERICAN—Vivian Abramson, who wrote the story and directed it, is to be congratulated. * * * And the picture, although blossoms with the album of none too plausible circumstances, * * * is nevertheless * * * sincere. SUN—But well balanced work by Thurston Hall, Earl Metcalfe and J. W. Johnston who effective bits of directing make “Mother Eternal” a rallying point on Broadway for maturity.

“The Non-Sense of Censorship”

Several well-known authors and playwrights are making appearances in “The Non-Sense of Censorship,” made for the National Association and now being shown in states where there is censorship agitation.

Douglas Fairbanks is the only screen actor in the picture. He shares star honors with Rupert Hughes, Edward Knioblock, Samuel Merwin, Thomas Buchanan, Rita Wray and Montague Glass, all of whom act like veterans and show no evidences of “camera fright.”

The Way Out

The Senate and the Assembly of the State of New York have passed the Lusk-Clayton Bill to you, Governor Miller.

The question of what is best for the people of this great Empire State, so far as a part of their amusement is concerned, is now squarely facing you.

You are on record that all industry and business of this community is to be protected. In these days, with commerce beginning to recover from post-war conditions, the motion picture industry, with others, is struggling to meet its commitments and despite all handicaps, to move business interest along the lines of sanity, profit and development. Because of the millions of dollars involved and because of the important part that the moving picture plays in the economics, as well as the entertainment of the communities of this State, there can be no question but that your judgment will follow the lines of practicable, honest and sincere development.

It may be true, it undeniably is true, that a certain percentage, a trifling percentage, perhaps, of the actual number of moving pictures made might well be censored, and it is equally true that some of the advertising, including the lithographs pre-

Over $14,000,000
Pathé Exchange, Inc., Closes Biggest Year in Its History—Some Interesting Figures

According to statements just made public, the business of Pathé Exchange, Inc., for the year just closed was $14,700,000, as against $9,800,000 the previous year, and $6,275,000 two years ago.

This shows a gain of 135% over the receipts of two years ago, and 38% over those of one year ago.

In keeping with a policy of greater volume and smaller margin, the per cent profit on turnover was made well be over 6 great in 1920 as it was in 1919, but the total net profit showed a substantial increase over 1919, which held the previous record for profit.

Pathé officials take a very optimistic view of the future, their March collections this year having shown a healthy increase over those of March one year ago.

Will Brunet Retire?
Refuses to Comment Relative to His Future With Pathé

Various rumors are being heard concerning the future policy and management of Pathé Exchange, one of which is that the contract with President Paul Brunet will expire in the near future and may not be renewed.

It is intimated that the policy followed by Mr. Brunet does not entirely harmonize with the ideas of the French company.

When these reports were mentioned to Mr. Brunet he stated that he had no comment whatever to make regarding them.

Brunet sails for Europe on June 2 aboard the Imperial.

Ten to Start
So Warren Promises—First Picture Now in the Making—Ready by May 15

A statement from the F. B. Warren Corp, issued yesterday promised 10 completed productions by August, thus permitting exhibitors to arrange play dates for the early part of the fall. The first picture, it was said, is now in production on the coast and will be ready about May 15. No hinting was given as to who was making it. Production is also under way in the East.

In the meantime organization work is progressing. Mr. Warren is now engaged in the signing of leases for branch offices and in building the field force.
sent for the purpose of attracting people into the theaters, might well have been prepared along saner and even more decent lines. But it is a serious question whether or not the remedy suggested is not too drastic for the faults incurred and the mistakes made.

There has been much discussion during the past few months on the part of the various interests of this industry in an effort to meet the problem of meeting your desire for regulation of this industry. But only within the last week has there apparently been made a series of suggestions which seem worth while and deserving of your consideration.

This publication possesses certain information which indicates with certainty that a move along the right lines is well within your province.

It is to be hoped that you will follow your own dictates with regard to this. And there is every reason to believe that if you will, that the result will more than justify the patience which will be necessary.

You cannot, with a stroke of the pen, affect millions of dollars worth of productions and the possible entertainment of millions of people, without the possibility, at least, of working an injury definite, important and costly. And this no matter how sincerely the work you plan is carried out by others. On the other hand, you have no reason to believe but that promises made can be broken.

You have been swamped with petitions; you have been taxed to the utmost of your patience by men who have made pleas, who have offered suggestions. Some Assemblymen have been informed of certain possible movements which, after all, might well have been left unsaid.

It lies within your power to bring to the people of this community, to the motion picture industry, and indeed to the entire country as a whole, great good. Motion pictures have proven beyond question the greatest delight and entertainment for the tremendous masses of people who make up this country. To their development, perhaps, there has not been that stability, that careful reckoning along which lines other industries have developed. But just as this country responded without question of cost to the great problem of the World War, so this industry has made gigantic leaps in the effort to satisfy the millions of people who look to it for their only form of entertainment. And so mistakes have happened in this industry. Perhaps the wrong kind of men have at times operated in a manner very far from pleasing, including those producers who look to the dollar first and rarely think of consequences.

And so to the innumerable suggestions that have been offered we should like to add this:

Do not sign the Lusk-Clayton Bill.

Rather, appoint a commission of the highest type of individuals of this vast State. If you please, bar from this commission any individual, or representative of the motion picture industry. Let it be composed of educators, leading mentalities of commerce and finance. Exclude from it any and all reformers or fanatics.

Let this commission have ample time and funds to study the problem of the motion picture. Not as

M.H. Kohn Sues Nat'l

Wants $112,000 Damages Because He Charges Contracted Films Were Not Up to Standard
(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Milton H. Kohn of San Francisco has brought suit for $112,000 damages against the National Film Corp. of America, charging that the films he had contracted with National to produce for him were not up to standard.

In the complaint Kohn charges that he entered upon a contract with National whereby the latter company was to make 52 pictures during 1920; that after 10 had been delivered Kohn ordered the company to stop making any more of them on the ground that the product did not come up to the standard he expected them to reach. Kohn further claims that if the proper degree of quality had been reached he would have made a profit of $300,000. In its answer National Film asserts that a previous agreement had been made, before the filing of Kohn's damage suit.

Nazimova Through

Reaches Agreement With Metro—"Camille" the Last Film Future Plans Indefinite
(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Nazimova and Metro have come to an understanding regarding the unexpired term of the star's contract. Under the terms of the agreement, "Camille," which is now in the working, will be Nazimova's last production for Metro, although the original contract called for one more picture. The settlement is a mutual one, according to Joe England, treasurer of Metro, who supplied the above information.

When Nazimova was asked regarding her future plans, she stated there was nothing definite to say at present. She expects to leave for the East the latter part of this week for a short rest, and to join her husband, Charles Bryant, who is now in New York. After a short stay there, both will return to Hollywood to supervise the cutting and final editing of "Camille."

Nazimova was asked regarding her possible affiliation with United Artists, and in response stated that all such inquiries should be leveled at her husband in New York.

At United Artists, it was stated yesterday that nothing was known about Nazimova's joining that organization.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Omaha,—Harry Goldberg of the Sun and a leading booking "The Devil" recently, campaigned for a week. He had a man in scarlet tights and cloak walk the streets, climb buildings, sail in an aeroplane above the theater and do stunts in midair.

Goldberg made up a spectacular head of "The Devil" for one side of the lobby. It was outlined in green electric bulbs, and had eyes of red electric bulbs, which glanced about with a startling effect.

The prologue was played before a fancy drop hung in 1, with a centre door flanked by spears of fire rising from urns. A table held "The Devil's" record book as in the picture. Beside the chair back of the table appeared the Butler, as the footlights glowed red. The Devil—George Arliss in high hat, monocle and opera cloak over evening dress entered, was relieved of his hat, gloves and cloak by the butler, and introduced himself as "one that lurks in your home and in your brains, the first to whisper in your cars evil thoughts and evil deeds." As he writes in the book he continues in similar vein. A spotlight concentrates upon him. Finally, as he talks he is enveloped in flames. He disappears in the flames, saying: "My friends, I warn you again—look out for the Devil—for he may be here among you to-night."

This was the finishing touch of two weeks intensive preparation for the raising of the Sun on "The Devil." It picture. It found an immense audience in exactly the right spirit to enjoy the production. The week's business was enormous. Managing Director Goldberg and his staff certainly had made Omaha "sit up."

Montgomery, Ala.—For the showing this week, "The Devil," Jean Darnell, Goldberg's exploitation representative, obtained 12 window displays in prominent stores. She wrote the special cards and dressed four of the windows herself.

Here are two samples of the cards used with the window displays, which contained, in addition to the merchandising, stunts and enlargements of the photographic series of "Don't neglect your wife." Say it to her with flowers, then take her to see "Don't Neglect Your Wife," at the Strand Theatre.

"Don't neglect your wife."

Buy her a Domestic Science fireless cooker and then take her, etc.

A contest was made by connection with the window displays whereby the winner of the lucky seat number received $5 in gold toward the purchase of any article displayed in any of the windows. A number was selected from the batch of tickets that would be sold for the showing of "The Devil." The Lucky seat number, and placed in a sealed envelope which was pinned in the box office in plain view of those purchasing tickets. Printed on the large envelope was the following: "This contains the lucky number. Keep your seat coupons and win the five dollar prize on "Don't Neglect Your Wife.""

Indiana, Pa.—Something new in the exploitation line was pulled by Hal Oliver. Goldberg exploitation man for Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo, when "The Penalty" was booked by the Grand.

An extra four-page section of the Indiana Evening Gazette, forming Part I of the regular edition, was printed and distributed in the news edition of the paper. The circulation of the Gazette is 3,500 copies, so that practically every resident of the city saw the four exploitation pages. A two line ribbon, in 24-point type, was run across the top of page 1 of the section, reading: "Legless Gang Leader Catches Plans for Revolution." Under that was a three column head reading: "Lon Chaney, Al St. John, Ralph Blane, Sachel the Town." The story, "By special wire," prepared for the edition by Mr. Oliver, occupied a column and a half and was followed by short stories about "The Penalty," taken from the press book. A double-column cut, shown in the press book, was also carried on the first page, together with a two-column story about Pauline Frederick in "Madame X," the picture booked to follow "The Penalty" at the Grand.

In the Courts

Supreme Court Justice Delehanty has denied the application by William P. Coates, interested in the stock in the Orpheum Circuit, and Harry Mountford, holder of one share in Loew's, Inc., for an injunction restraining them from donating one afternoon's receipts to the National Vaudeville Artists. The court said that the only inference that can be drawn from the owners is that the two men bought their stock for the sole purpose of harassing the corporations. The court said that even if the stockholders could not have an injunction because the two corporations have a perfect right to donate to the sick benefit fund of the vaudeville artists.

Germany Gradually Permitting More Pictures to Go In—All Restrictions Off Later

Private advices received in New York in the past few days indicate that the present restrictions on the importation of foreign-made pictures into Germany are being gradually removed. The information has it that the German Government is not officially announcing the removal of the embargo, but that the measure now in force will not be observed to the letter.

It will be recalled that it was decided in Berlin to limit the number of foreign-made pictures imported into Germany to 15 per cent of the amount the country used in 1920. This percentage was to be divided into the three classes constituting the business: the distributor, the exhibitor and the producer. The limitation was considered necessary to foster home industry and enterprise.

One of the strongest reasons for permitting a laxity in enforcing the 15 per cent clause is said to be the impossibility of making an equitable division of the imported films among the various German film concerns. Large concerns like the U. F. A.

M. P. D. A. Opposes German Films

The M. P. D. A. in a lengthy statement issued yesterday afternoon officially announced its opposition to the "exploitation and exhibition of German made films in the United States for an indefinite period."

The statement went into details as to the character of the pictures and characterized "Passion" and "Deception" as insidious propaganda.

Metro Moves Next Week

The Metro executive offices will move next week from the present location in the Longacre Building to the 6th and 7th floors of the new building at Broadway and 45th St.

The Loew Enterprises will occupy part of the 7th floor with Metro and all of the 8th.

Still Free

Betty Blythe, who is now in New York from the coast, has not signed any contracts, it is learned. It is understood that several offers have been made, among them one to appear as Mary in "Mary, Queen of Scots," which J. Gordon Edwards will make in Europe.

In the interim Miss Blythe is doing some spring shopping.

ually would control the bulk of imported films because its activities embrace all three phases of the business.

The importation of outside productions will be permitted on a larger scale as time goes by, until the point is reached where any number of films will be allowed to enter the country without interference on the part of German authorities.

An interesting sidelight on the situation was divulged yesterday by a man who is well posted on foreign conditions. He stated that big German producing units were forced to abandon plans to take large troupes into Italy where scenes were to be shot for forthcoming productions, because the Italian consul general in Berlin refused to vise the passports. It was the impression in Germany, as described by this man, that the move was primarily aimed at the 15 per cent clause which barred out Italian films as well as those of other countries.

Chicago—Reform dictatorship will never be established in Illinois according to the exhibitors of this state, who have made an appeal to the public and to the press to "halt the attacks of Dr. Wilbur F. Craits and preserve the theaters of the state from the interference of those who seek through false assertions to intimidate themselves into control of motion pictures." The appeal was made through the M. F. T. O. of the state in convention. Other organizations in exhibitors are expected to follow.

National Association to Ask Governor For Year's Grace—Four Speakers to Be Selected

The National Association will again ask Governor Miller for a year's grace during which time the industry will promise to cleanse itself of undesirable pictures, at the public hearing to be given by the Governor on Tuesday.

This was decided upon yesterday at a meeting held in the Association's rooms. The president or the representative of every company attended the session, at which the program for Tuesday was mapped out. It was impossible to learn yesterday who would go to Albany on Tuesday. It was stated that as many executives would go as will be in town and that those that were away would be officially represented. Plans were made to have four speakers represent the industry. The individuals have not as yet been selected. There will be one familiar with the technical side of the business, a man who will be able to answer any question regarding pictures that may be asked. Another will represent the financial end of the business. He will explain just what censorship would mean to the industry. The third speaker will be from the Authors' League of America. The choice rests between Rex Beach, George Ade, Booth Tarkington and Augustus Thomas. The fourth will present the censorship angle from the viewpoint of the general public.

The Review Board Delegation

Dr. Everett Dean Martin will head the delegation of the National Board of Review which will go to Albany to meet the hearing. Others who will attend will be Dr. Arthur Shields of the Inter-Racial Council, Miss Mary Gray Peck, Mrs. C. R. Richards and William D. McQuire. A large delegation of members will also go, but will be observers only.

Mastbaum Denies

The article in "The Exhibitor" is as follows:

"Setting at rest all rumors that the Stanley Co. of America had been absorbed or was about to be absorbed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Co., emphatically denied that the producing company had taken over any of the holdings of the Philadelphia organization. When asked as the probable source or foundation for the rumor that has gotten considerable momentum and wide-spread publicity in this section, Mr. Mastbaum said that it was undoubtedly the outgrowth of negotiations that were entered into some few months ago whereby there was to be an exchange of large blocks of stocks of the Famous Players Co. and the Stanley Co. These negotiations, however, did not result in any definite deal, and so far as the absorption of the Stanley Co. by the Famous Players-Lasky Co. is concerned, it has been permanently discarded from the minds of the officers of the Philadelphia corporation."

WID'S DAILY on April 4 reported from Philadelphia that a deal was on between Famous and the Stanley Co. for the outright purchase of the latter company. At the time Elek J. L. Ludvig of Famous stated he had not heard about it. Later, an effort was made to trade Mr. Mastbaum in Philadelphia, but he was out of town and no one was authorized to make statements regarding the company's policy.

"Ill-Advised" Move

Is the Way Louis Auerbach Characterizes Agitation Against Foreign Pictures—By Bert.

Louis Auerbach, vice-president of the Export and Import Film Co., Inc., one of the largest importers in the business, yesterday characterized the importation of foreign pictures as "ill-advised." Auerbach is in close touch with developments in the foreign market and believes the importation is being hampered on new developments in the field.

He stated yesterday:

"The picture industry in America when making pictures expects his foreign sales to carry a great deal of the production cost, and if through some ill-advised action this source of revenue is reduced or taken away it will so reduce the income that many American companies will have a hard time existing. Those who are operating on a very small capital will fail."

"In the exportation of films we have time and again encountered restrictions in the markets of this and other countries who complain because their pictures are not being shown in the United States. Louis Auerbach is aggressive against our pictures. We have assured them over and over again that whenever their pictures come up to the high standards of the American industry we shall bring them before the American public. Although there are in this country today hundreds of pictures being exhibited in England, France, the Central Powers, etc., produced in the last four years, only three pictures are seen abroad; or, at best, hundreds have been of the quality demanded by patrons of American motion picture theaters.

"All countries have tried to refuse the importation of all commodities, including films, so as to keep their money at home. This applies to all parts of the world, and although the statement was made that Germany allows motion picture importations of only 2 per cent, this is not a fact. The German government has a definite policy, and that is to be increased considerably. There are today in Germany probably twenty American pictures to every foreign picture that is in the United States."

"The American exporter is making every effort to open up the big foreign market for American productions so as to keep the American producer of motion pictures busy and to give him again a new outlet for his product and increased income which for years, on account of the war, has been shut off. It is unfair and illogical to expect him to build an entirely new date with an agitation against foreign pictures.

"The greatest films ever produced were historic films based on facts and history. First among these was 'Quo Vadis,' based on the Christian era, then there was "Cleopatra," and most recently made "The Birth of a Nation," which deals with history, and so on down the line. Certainly no man can claim that 'The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari,' which lately closed at the Capitol theater, is a propaganda film. No one who has been forced to read Shakespeare, being anti-British because he wrote plays that were bitter attacks upon Henry VIII, Richard III and other characters of history."

Earl J. Hudson Explains the Baltimore-Chaplin Situation—Exhibit.

Earl J. Hudson, assistant to J. D. Williams of Associated First Natl., explained to WID'S DAILY yesterday his organization's stand on the Chaplin situation in Baltimore in connection with the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests, Chas. Whitehurst and Marcus Loew are seeking an injunction restraining the production of a new Chaplin theater, operated by Guly L. Wonders.

"Mr. Hudson said:

"'The Victoria, operated by Nixon-Nirdlinger, the Garden, operated by Charles Whitehurst, and the Hippo- drom's Loew house, held the contracts made in 1917 for the Chaplin series. The contracts called for day and date showings. We explained to these exhibitors why it was necessary for us to secure additional rentals for 'The Kid' and endeavored to show that we were right by citing the established box office value of the picture. They insisted, however, on adhering to the terms of their old contracts."

"The Rivoli theater is our substitute holder of the contract, and we offered Mr. Wonders a day and date showing on 'The Kid.' The three theaters objected, holding that their obstructions on a previous染 was included in their copies of the Chaplin contracts. Rider, they said, was the house in which day and date showings of the Chaplin pictures. The original contracts in the home office, however, contain no such riders and besides, all contracts are subject to the approval of the home office."

Close Foreign Contract by Phone

L. H. Allen of the Foreign Markets Dist. Corp. was at the local end of the telephone and Vicente Blanco of United Artists of Mexico, at the end at Los Angeles. The contract was started and closed with the making of a contract covering the Vitagraph output for the year, beginning April 1st over the telephone, too.

New List From Review Board

The National Board of Review has issued Bulletin No. 5 covering additional "Exceptional Photoplays." The list includes "The City of Silent Men," starring Thomas Meighan; "Deception," "The Passion Flower," starring Norma Talmadge, and "A Small Town Idol," with Ben Turpin. The first two are Paramount pictures, the third is a Vitagraph release and the last Associated Producers, Inc.

New Story for Edith Roberts

Several stories have been bought by Universal. Among them is "Harbor Road," a novel by Sara Ware Bassett, which it is expected will be used as a vehicle for Edith Roberts.

Watch for Plunkett

Joc Plunkett is a busy man these days. "I won't say if he's doing, but his connection with "Bob Hampton Placer" at the Strand, beg- ning May 1. That's a good stunt. Watch it.

Conditions 20% Off, Says K.

"I find business conditions in Manhattan's retail trade in the similar to those prevailing in the West, which means about off normal," said Morris Kohn, art's president, upon returning to York from a tour of key cities in Eastern States.

"While conditions now, as far as the exhibitors with whom I am concerned, are about 20% off what they have been, the prevalent impression seems to be that there will be a change in the general situation and most exhibitors looking to that time for improvement."

"I'm in Detroit I found that exhibitors can see some improvement in conditions and the same thing is true in Pittsburgh," he added.

Dear Mr. Woody:

We are very pleased to advise that we did a splendid business on "THE FURNACE" in spite of inclement weather and Holy Week.

"THE FURNACE" is one of the best all around pictures produced this year. Besides a very popular and talented cast, it has a story of unusual merit.

Personally, the engagement gave us a great deal of satisfaction, not only on account of the business, but upon the number of pleased patrons.

Another one of the year's big pictures comes from the foreign market and is another production made by Ernest Lubitsch, who made "Passion." Again Lubitsch has gone into history for his story, this time taken from the reign of King Henry VIII, of England and his notorious and infamous career. Those well acquainted with England's history may find errors, but to the casual observer who just remembers the main facts of the scalawag king, "Deception" appears to be correct; certainly it is interesting.

From first to last the picture holds the attention and the development keeps increasing the interest to the very end. And considering the length of the feature, this may seem surprising. Mingled sympathy for the exiled Queen and comedy touches provided through the scapegrace Henry, hold the attention until a more tragic atmosphere is reached, and then before you realize it, they have arrived at the conclusion.

The direction of "Deception" is really of a superior quality and from every angle it seems almost without error. His handling of the players, settings and especially the way in which the mob scenes have been conducted is excellent. It is a lavish production in every way. The settings are numerous and costly and in some cases actually took months to build, notably a replica of Westminster Abbey, of which they use both interior and exterior. The tournament scene and the water festival are also splendid. The costumes are gorgeous.

It doesn't seem exaggerating to say that "Deception" contains two of the best screen portrayals ever seen. Emil Jennings as Henry VIII is a finished performer, and from the time he appears with his jeweled fingers "digging" into a dish of food until the time that he ruthlessly condemns Queen Anne to death, his work holds the attention. He appears a trifle too Tontonic of stature for England's licentious king, but this is readily overlooked. Henry Porten as Anne Boleyn is absolutely convincing and her acting remarkable at times.

A brief synopsis will recall the story. Henry tires of Queen Katherine and when the Pope refuses to grant a divorce, the King accepts excommunication and establishes his own church at the same time making Anne Boleyn, Queen. The King soon tires of Anne and when a daughter is born instead of a son and heir, Henry finds cause to have Anne beheaded and this time Henry marries Lady Jane, one of the Queen's ladies-in-waiting. Henry certainly was a "devil" with the ladies and from his evident admiration of water nymphs and such, it seems a pity he didn't live in the age of Sennett bathing girls.

Should Make a Lot of Money and Good Showmanship Will Do It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you are to judge from the throngs who have tried to gain admission to the Rivoli for a view of "Deception," the picture promises to be a "clean up" as was its predecessor, "Passion." It is undoubtedly one of the big productions of the year and exhibitors who can obtain it for a run should consider themselves lucky. You can go the limit on promises and if it doesn't go over it's because of poor showmanship.

The title may not mean very much of itself so recall the licentious career of England's scapegrace king and tell them the story is enacted by a unusually talented company of players, making special comment upon the performances of Henny Porten and Emil Jennings. There are others who do good work but these are the most important. The box office results should compensate for any expense you go to to put the picture over. If they don't there's something wrong somewhere.

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Young “Sky Pilot” reforms whole western town and wins the belle of the place

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 6,305 feet

Ralph Connor’s well known novel “The Sky Pilot” has been given a first rate production by King Vidor, and judging from audible comment at the Strand where it was shown, the picture seemed to be well received. The male members of the audience, especially appeared to be thoroughly satisfied, and in the part dealing with the “green” minister’s attempt to hold services in a saloon, the comedy business went over big.

The director has gotten the most out of the story and has put in some fine thrills, particularly the stampede scene which is the best thing in “The Sky Pilot.”

John Bowers and Colleen Moore must certainly have taken out accident insurance before they agreed to take part in this. The photography in this spot is certainly excellent, close-ups of the girl showing the shadows of the stampeding animals, upon her prostrate form. This scene recalls to mind the stampede sequence in Universal’s “Lasca” but Vidor’s is equally well done and perhaps a trifle more thrilling.

“The Sky Pilot” is quite a bit too long and the ending is dragged. When the western town reforms to the extent of presenting the minister with a church, the ending seems at hand but it isn’t even close at hand. What follows contains some good action but there’s too much of it. John Bowers does well in a part somewhat out of the ordinary for him. David Butler is certain to make an impression as the terror of the town. Colleen Moore is a demure heroine.

A young minister comes into a western town and is hailed as “The Sky Pilot.” His first attempt to convert the cowboys is to hold services in the saloon. It ends in a fight in which the Pilot gives the town terror, Bill Hendricks, the beating of his life and wins Bill’s friendship as a result. After many adventures in the western town the Pilot finally converts the boys and they present him with a small church. Then just as you think things are about over, the action is only really getting started and there are a series of thrills in which the villain, known as “The Duke,” and his partner, The Old Timer, plot against the converted crowd. The church is fired and the minister nearly killed. Gwen, the Old Timer’s daughter, formerly saved from death by the minister but now a cripple, has her Indian servant drive her to the minister’s rescue. She arrives in time to save him from death in the burning church and at the same time recovers the use of her limbs. Following this all hands are converted and the Pilot wins the heart of Gwen.

Should Do Good Business if Properly Handled

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors ought to do pretty good business with “The Sky Pilot.” In case you think the title won’t mean very much to them you might even go into detail to tell them what it is about, and be sure to play up the thrill of the stampede. Also show stills of the scene in which the minister and his horse are hurled from a high bridge. Both incidents should get them interested. You can make promises for these two bits. Appeal strongly to your men patrons. Judging from the Strand audience, it will please them the best.

If you think the title of Ralph Connor’s novel is well enough known you can play up the title but be sure to use lines telling them what they can expect. Use King Vidor’s name and recall his “The Jackknife Man.” Among the names of the players John Bowers, Colleen Moore and David Butler are the best known.

CHARACTER OF STORY ..... Western "bad man" plans to kill his wife rather than leave her to her lover, when he himself is captured

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,000 feet

A good western atmosphere without probably as much action as might be expected, is what is being offered in "Sunset Jones." The opening reel might have been a little more precise in laying the story foundation, but as it progresses is comprehensive enough. There seems to be presented too much on the surface, that is, to the audience there isn't sufficient reason for the things that happen. For instance, David Rand is evidently a western "bad man" and the titles keep telling you of his deeds. Actual scenes of some of his adventures would lend reality to the picture and give you reason for believing that he recieved his just deserts when he is killed.

For those who like westerns minus the "shootin," "Sunset Jones" should fulfill all desire for it is really mild, in fact just a bit too mild for a western. A fairly good suspense is created toward the end when Rand plots to have his wife killed by "accident" rather than leave her to be happy with her lover who is the man assigned to capture Rand.

The direction is quite satisfactory on the whole, but more force injected into the dramatic sequences would have improved the picture greatly. It is inclined to run along in too much the same line. Charles Clary portrays the hero satisfactorily but has a peculiar manner of registering a variety of expressions by lifting his eyebrows. Irene Rich as Rand's wife does good work.

John Ballard, Division Superintendent of a western railroad, finally discharges David Rand because of his dishonesty. Rand'nd his band continue their marauding escapades. Marion, wife of Rand but separated from him, is visited one day by "Sunset" Jones. Previous to her marriage to Rand, Marion had been in love with Jones but Rand had poisoned her mind against him by telling her that Jones was a man-killer.

Rand learns that Jones is in town and is prepared for trouble. While in the town saloon Rand is about to be arrested when one of his band kills the sheriff and the "bad man" escapes. Before the sheriff dies he authorizes Jones to go after Rand and arrest him.
Rand sends for Marion to come to his hiding place.
She goes and when Jones hears it he follows. Jones arrives in time to save Marion and Rand is killed, leaving Marion free to marry her former sweetheart.

Should Satisfy On Average Program

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who know their patrons like mild western features will probably satisfy them with "Sunset Jones." You might use the name of Charles Clary in billing the picture and also that of Irene Rich. She will be remembered as appearing in some recent Will Rogers pictures. If you know this sort of western will please your folks you can make promises for "Sunset Jones."

Catchlines should attract and use them along this line: "She was married to a western 'bad man,' but in love with the man who was sent to arrest him. It was a case of love or duty. Which did she choose?
See the solution in 'Sunset Jones,' featuring Charles Clary and Irene Rich." Other lines can be worked up along the same idea to get them interested.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,200 feet

Why is it that producers insist upon filming, and authors continue to write stories dealing with that phase of life which is usually spoken of in an under-tone and which at its best, is not what you'd call "entertainment" material? Samuel R. Bradley's feature, formerly called "Dangerous Toys," and now being released by the Federated Film Exchanges under the new title "Don't Leave Your Husband," incidentally a more attractive one, contains nothing that is new to the screen, dealing as it does with the efforts of a husband to satisfy his wife's cravings for the luxuries he cannot afford and the subsequent lesson which they both learn. And at the same time touching upon the wealthy man designated by a title as "one of the men who maintain apartments other than their own" or something to that effect.

In view of the material he had to work with the director has managed it pretty well. The production is adequate. He hasn't wasted any money on something that wasn't worthy of an expensive production, and his results are in keeping with the general atmosphere of the offering. He is also to be commended for the manner in which he has handled the story. There are no objectionable scenes and on the whole there is nothing offensive although the titles, of which there are too many, are not always written in good taste.
They usually end with "and—" Sort of suspense effect.

William Desmond seems out of place in a role like this, but he does the best he can with it. Marerite Clayton is suited to the lead and Frank Losee is good as the rich man.

Louise Gray can't get along with her husband's salary so she becomes a model and meets Hugo Harman, her husband's employer, who offers to provide her with the luxuries of life for three weeks, at the end of which time she is to be free to stay or to leave.
Harman is trying to prove to Gray his theory that every woman has her price, and so when Gray still loves his wife and is willing to take her back after what he learns, Harman's ideas are shattered and he admits defeat. There is a reconciliation between Gray and Louise, and Harman welcomes home the wife who left him twenty years before, just as Louise left Gray.

Will Be Well Received Only By a Certain Class
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There are a good many houses catering to audiences that like "high life" flavoring in their screen entertainment so in these houses "Don't Leave Your Husband" will be well received. Played up with catchlines such as the following, it will attract attention. "If your husband's salary provided you with no luxury, and another man offered you the things you craved for, what would you do? See how Louise Gray solves the problem in 'Don't Leave Your Husband.'"

It isn't necessary to do any promising if you have a daily change program. You are not liable to hear any kicks on this one for a day showing although it will be less favorably received if you cater to "family" trade. Use William Desmond's name in your announcements, and if you think Marguerite Clayton is well enough known you might also use her name.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,964 feet

Those who saw Elsie Ferguson a few years ago in the stage play from Arnold Bennett’s novel, and who have been anticipating her appearance in the screen version are due for a disappointment in William D. Taylor’s production. The atmosphere of the film is heavy and there is little relief for your entertainment. During the run of the picture the audience is treated to one suicide by drowning, another by shooting, two apparently natural deaths and one near death when the Diaz, the once famous pianist, drinks poison after firing a shot at the woman he blames for his downfall. All this isn’t pleasant to say the least, even considering that two of the deaths are merely referred to in titles.

Miss Ferguson doesn’t seem to have been given the opportunities to show what she can do. Her performance seems to be a series of interruptions and she might almost be called a “travelling heroine.” Perhaps Arnold Bennett’s original heroine did equally as much wandering but it doesn’t fit in well for a screen adaptation. The star isn’t always photographed to the best advantage but otherwise no fault can be found with that phase of the production. There are several inconsistencies which they fail to give any reason for, namely, the heroine’s self acknowledgment that after all the years she really loves the Diaz, although when he attempts to make love to her she gently repulses him with “remember we are only friends.” Other incoherent bits are noticeable.

It doesn’t seem stretching a point to say that Conrad Nagel gives the best performance in the picture. As Diaz, the famous pianist, he is hardly recognized as the staid barrister of “What Every Woman Knows.” His make-up is excellent.

Carlotta Peel, brought up by a maiden Aunt with maiden ideas, unknown to her Aunt attends a musical given by Diaz. After the performance she meets the artist and later succumbs to the strains of “Sampson and Delilah,” played by Daiz. Carlotta spends the night with Diaz and returns the next morning to find her Aunt dead. She doesn’t see Diaz again, and in after years, Carlotta, now a well known novelist, is loved by her publisher, Ispanlove, whose wife commits suicide because of her husband’s affair with Carlotta. Ispanlove then kills himself. After another lapse of time and in a new locality, Carlotta encounters Diaz, a victim of absinthe. She nurses him back to health and his gift of playing is restored. Carlotta is now happy with her first love.

Use Names But Don’t Make Promises

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It probably won’t be difficult to get them in if you just announce the title and the name of the star, but it’s another thing whether or not they’ll be satisfied with Wm. Taylor’s production of “Sacred and Profane Love.” On the other hand folks who admire Miss Ferguson may accept the picture because of her work, but even they will perhaps admit that she hasn’t been given the opportunities which she requires to acquit herself properly. Apparently casual observers in the audience at the Rialto where the picture was shown, were heard to remark regarding the inconsistencies in the production. One or two explanatory titles would relieve this condition in the more prominent instances.

There are plenty of exploitation angles to work with but it would be well to use only the title and the star’s name and if they like it, all right; if they don’t, you won’t have to take back any promises.

DIRECTOR .................... Ivan Abramson
AUTHOR ..................... Ivan Abramson
SCENARIO BY ................ Ivan Abramson
CAMERAMAN ................ John S. Stumar
AS A WHOLE.................Mother love overworked for appeal; production is adequate but quite ordinary STORY.........................Told in two parts with the first the much better of the two DIRECTION.................. Fair; tells story smoothly but at times lacks judgment in handling players
PHOTOGRAPHY............... Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS .................... Some poor
CAMERA WORK ............... Average
STAR...........Does best work in first episode but is capable of much better performance SUPPORT ..................... Adequate; none distinguished EXTERIORS ................... Few
INTERIORS .................... All right
DETAIL ........................ Suffices
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Mother about to end her unfortunate life is saved by son she gave away in infancy
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 7,500 feet

With "mother love" as the basis of his theme, Ivan Abramson has written and produced "Mother Eternal," starring Vivian Martin, and perhaps because of the fact that it makes such a strong play upon the heart strings, it will be fairly well received. But on the other hand, no one will be greatly impressed and it isn't the sort of story that will cause any gulps in the throat. "Mother Eternal" is so obviously fictitious that it doesn't sink very deep.

There is nothing objectionable in the theme so there can be no complaint on this score and the story is told in a straightforward fashion. It is in two episodes, the first being the better of the two. The second half is weak, not only from a story standpoint, but poorly acted as well. Also the direction here could be much improved upon. The characters do some very peculiar things, and coincidence plays a prominent part in bringing the story to a conclusion.

Vivian Martin is suitable as the young mother who gives her infant away because she is too poor to care for it. But her appearance as the mother in the second episode, after a lapse of twenty years, will never gain her any laurels. Neither does she look nor act the part and her facial make-up is so poor that in close-ups she looks as if she were made up for a clown role. Later close-ups in the same episode show her with practically no old lady make-up. They had better eliminate close-ups entirely in this half of the picture.

Alice's spoiled daughter makes life so miserable for the old mother that she decides to leave her daughter's home. Intending to end it all, Alice tries to drown, but is saved by Edward Stevens, Jr., who turns out to be her son. When the child was born Alice, because of her poverty, consented to the physician's suggestion of allowing Mrs. Stevens to believe the child her own, though in reality her's had died. The elder Stevens is so shocked by the disclosure that he at first puts his "son" out of his home but later begs him to continue as his son and have his mother live with them.

Not Big But Theme May Carry It Through
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Vivian Martin in
"MOTHER ETERNAL"
Ivan Abramson Prod.—State Rights

"Mother Eternal" will go over well enough with audiences who are not particular about such qualities as artistry, technique and atmosphere, in their picture entertainment. The production is ordinary but the strong appeal through its mother love theme is likely to please neighborhood audiences. Women especially should be appealed to in your announcements. The picture can be cut considerably before sent out generally. The last half especially can stand cutting and the removal of close-ups will be an improvement.

You can use Vivian Martin's name. She should be popular enough to attract some attention. In newspaper and lobby announcements make the "mother love" idea the basis. You could use lines such as: "Is there any limit to a mother's love? See the sacrifice of one in 'Mother Eternal,'" or others along this order. Use the producer's name and recall any past productions of his which you have played successfully.

I represent many of our best-known producers and leading players, and have quite a number of ingénues and juvenile leads hitherto unknown, and I feel sure it would be to your advantage to get in touch with me when casting your next production.

TO ARTISTES
(Not already represented by me)

I can place you with almost every producing company of repute both in America and abroad. I have been successful in obtaining leading parts for many well-known artistes who had not previously thought of communicating with an artist representative.

You are cordially invited to write or phone for an appointment.

J. Parker Read, Jr.—Associated Producers
DIRECTOR ......................... Jack Nelson
AUTHOR ....................... Bradley King
SCENARIO BY .................. Not credited
CAMERAMAN .................. Charles J. Stumar
AS A WHOLE.....Of a type that appeals to a big majority but isn’t refined entertainment

The surprise has certain degree of dramatic force and a surprise finish that holds it up well; is not original

DIRECTION.....Keeps his audience in ignorance of ending in a way that is effective; overdoes some bits

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Very good
LIGHTINGS ........................... Good
CAMERA WORK .................. Satisfactory
STAR ......................... Makes good in unpleasant role

SUPPORT.....Mahlon Hamilton good; George Cooper and Claire DuBrey handle minor roles well

EXTERIORS......Only one or two unimportant ones

INTERIORS .......................... Some sets overdressed

DETAIL......Correct in the main; errors in court procedure

CHARACTER OF STORY......Wife of prominent lawyer innocent of crime which she herself believes she committed

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,500 feet

J. Parker Read, Jr.s’ latest offering for Associated Producers’ release contains the sort of story that still appeals to a good majority of picture patrons usually referred to as “fans.” It is typically “movie” in make-up. The offering starts out in promising fashion by marrying a chorus girl that is “different” to a prominent lawyer. Everything is lovely up to this point when the husband’s business causes him to neglect his wife, and while he is away she goes to a party, with some of her old friends.

From this point until the final reel, “I Am Guilty” assumes an unrefined aspect that is far from being the entertainment that educated picture patrons appreciate. There are wild all night revelries in which the director uses poor taste in allowing the women players to carry the “tipsy” business to extremes. Much of this should be cut, particularly one close-ups of a girl who has draped herself across the arms of a chair. A bit of mother love is injected through the scenes between the woman who believes herself guilty of murder and her young son, a most unusual child who begs his mother to show him the “butterfly” on her back, a scar whose evidence she believes will convict her. This is a bit farfetched, and a more appropriate way of having the husband discover his wife’s infidelity would be plausible.

The best thing in “I Am Guilty,” other than Miss Glaum’s performance which is convincing, is the manner in which the director works up to the surprise finish and the way in which it takes the spectator completely unawares. The cast as a whole is well chosen.

When Robert MacNair learns that his wife is guilty of the murder of Teddy Garrick, whose party she attended in MacNair’s absence, the lawyer refuses to act in defense of Dillon, a crook, being prosecuted by the state for the crime. Connie gives her husband the revolver which she claims she used and which was handed to her in Garrick’s apartment by someone she did not see, and which she used when Garrick attacked her. MacNair disappears and Dillon is convicted but at the moment Connie appears and tells the court she killed Garrick. Right on top of her confession, MacNair reappears with a confession signed by Trixie, an admirer of Garrick’s, who was hiding in the apartment and fired the shot. The husband explains that his clue was the revolver which had not been exploded. Follows a reconciliation.

Exhibitors Should Use Their Judgment in this Case

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“I Am Guilty” suggests something of a sensational character, and the picture in the main lives up to the suggestion so that exhibitors will know pretty well whether or not they want it, because they are the best judge of what pictures their patrons like best. It won’t be favorably received by the so-called “highbrow” clientele, but is the type that does a thriving business with “fan” folks and transient houses where you don’t have to cater to any particular class. There’ll always be some satisfied and some dissatisfied in this kind of an audience, no matter what picture you show, so it doesn’t matter.

It shouldn’t be difficult to get them in if you use the title in connection with the producer’s name and the star’s. Catchlines used in conjunction with the title can read as follows: “When a crook was convicted of a murder, a prominent lawyer’s wife appeared in the court room crying ‘I Am Guilty.’ See the astonishing outcome of this unusual case in Associated Producers’ latest release, starring Louise Glaum.”
The Path Ahead

Vast in accomplishment, superb as the newest art has developed, so the path ahead looms portentously for the director of moving pictures.

Brilliant as the future seems for all other forms of artistic endeavor, none possesses that great opportunity which awaits the genius of direction. For he will be aided with many inventions; assisted by many developments in which lighting, properties, even color, will be but a part.

Far, far from the roof studios in downtown New York, with their meagre, impossible appointments of yesterday are tremendous studios of to-day. And those that are to come will be as marked in their advancement and improvement as these of to-day loom over their predecessors.

For the art of the camera has but found its first development. What the future holds, what the path ahead leads to, no man knows; no one can foretell.

SEVEN MUTUAL (GRIFFITH-SUPERVISED) PRODUCTIONS

"The power of true realism lies in picturing the known in such a manner as to obtain and hold interest during the story to be told, in bringing strong situations out of the easily-recognizable affairs of our everyday lives: Therein lies the prime merit of Beranger's work. There is an unpreached sermon in every second of his contrasts, a sermon more deeply felt that it is not pronounced in words, one to make the spectators think twice."—Louis Reeves Harrison.

"A MANHATTAN KNIGHT" (Fox Feature)

"You are surprised time and again throughout the run of the picture by the novel twists and the clever manner in which they have been handled. Director Beranger wastes no footage and makes every incident count. As this picture is treated with the utmost skill, it should afford real pleasure to all audiences. The most successful direction the star has had."—Wid's.

"UNCLE SAM OF FREEDOM RIDGE" (League of Nations)

"The story breathes of a patriotism so pure and wholesome as to make all the other things in life seem of little consequence."—Woodrow Wilson.

"Considering that this feature was made in two weeks, it is a remarkable piece of work, and speaks commendably of the ability of its director, George A. Beranger, who has given to the industry a production that will fit any program and help the exhibitor build a hundred per cent. American patronage."—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

"NUMBER SEVENTEEN" (Louis Tracy-Fox Special)

"There are enough thrills in this picture to supply material for a goodly-sized serial, but in addition to its forceful qualities it possesses a well developed plot, exceedingly melodramatic and strong in human interest. The mystery element is so cunningly woven into the narrative that one never stops to cavil over the question of its probability, for here is the allurement of fast action with never-failing suspense to hold the spectators' attention, and better entertainment of the kind could not be desired. Highly melodramatic though it be, the picture is singularly free from seeming exaggeration, thanks to careful direction, and should prove a lucrative box-office attraction. The sinister figures of the crafty Celestials, on secret murder bent, lend an eerie atmosphere of realism to the proceedings, in fact the entire "Chinatown stuff" is staged with unusually effective art, without ever a hint of burlesque to spoil the outlook. There are unexpected trap-doors, sliding panels galore, all the shadowy crime atmosphere of the oriental underworld to fascinate the beholders. A lively scrap of truly dynamic brand hurtles matters along swiftly to a crashing climax. The Chinese types are convincing. Well filmed interiors predominate, the exterior shots are excellent and first-class lighting prevails. George Beranger's skillful direction results in good continuity and sustained fast action."—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

FOREWORD

1. Who can measure a mother's love,
The glorious gift of God above?
That love divine, so strong and kind,
The mighty power that rules our mind.

2. Upon our joys she pours her light,
Shares our sorrows by day and night;
A friend so true in every way,
Whose soul and heart will ne'er betray.

3. When life becomes an evil storm,
Who then can keep us safe from harm?
To soothe and heal, who knows the art?
Only a mother's throbbing heart.

4. When lost on land or wrecked at sea,
Who hears my call? Who comes to me?
In depths of Hell, on heights supernal,
She seeks me out—Mother Eternal.

The Importance of the Director

Six Years Old
Thursday, March 11, 1915,
WID said:
"It is much better to pay a proper salary to a capable director, who you are sure is going to make a fine film which will please the crowds it pulls, than to pay a great price for a book or play which is possibly unfit for film purposes, and then skimp on the director's salary, with the result that you get a mediocre film, which will pull the business on account of the name of the production, but send the patrons home dissatisfied. This is a big, vital question in the film business today, and the men who hold the reins must regard it seriously. The public wants well-known books and plays when they are well done, but if the production is to be shaded in the matter of expense, because too much has been paid for the rights to the production, then a fatal error is being made. The safe thing is to make known your directors. It is always the director who can make or break any film."

Get Away From Haste
Tuesday, March 16, 1915, WID said:
"It is surely a pity that the director is hurried as much as he is today in his directing, his assembling and the preparation of the final prints. It is thought to be 'good business,' but to my mind it would be much better business to make better pictures and have an arrangement with the directors that would insure their working as rapidly as possible through a personal interest in the success of the film without hurrying them to the point where they are going to sacrifice effects and artistic results just to 'get it through.' In many studios the word has gone out to 'get it done' in a certain number of days. That's all wrong. The better film will be the bigger money maker every time in the long run, and it is going to be the concerns that will put up the necessary finances to have their films done right at a little greater expense that are going to continue to live and have the support of the film fans. Let's get away from this 'haste.' It is not 'good business.' It is very, very 'bad business.'"

WID Was Right!
After fighting for director recognition for years, WID, on June 9, 1918, said:
"Way back in 1914 I began hammerin' on the importance of the DIRECTOR. In those days a salary of two or three hundred dollars was considered excessive for the man who had charge of the making (or breakin') of a production.

"I remember that in 1915 I printed a list of the first thirty or forty directors, listing them in order according to my guess.

"That sure started something but that was exactly what I had in mind. It made more people talk about directors than anything which had been written to date.

"The importance of the director is recognized as never before. One of the prominent manufacturers said to me this week that in the future he intended to pay all of his big salaries to directors, reversing the old situation of two hundred for the director and fifteen hundred for the star, by giving the director the big end and the star the little."

Need Director Protection
Sunday, November 24, 1918, WID said:
"It is true today that the star or the subject material which has name box office value is absolutely essential for the purpose of getting people into a theater, but the happenings of the past year or so have conclusively proven that the producer who expects to survive must protect his star or his money getting material by having his films directed by a capable director."

A Prediction
Sunday, November 23, 1919, WID said:
"Next year there will be more than thirty capable creators, directors and stars selling their product individually, which will mean about one hundred splendid special features to be sold strictly on their merits."

Director Is Insurance
That WID realized the importance of the director to the box office is clearly indicated by what he said on Sunday, November 24, 1918:
"The director is insurance. We have not yet reached the point where the director's name is of great value in bringing money to the box office, but we have definitely reached the point where a director's name is of great value in booking a picture with exhibitors. It is only a matter of a few months now, possibly a year, when the names of certain directors will bring money to the box office."
Pioneering

Back in 1918, WID urged exhibitors to acquaint their public with the names of directors. What he said on Sunday, August 18, 1918, is interesting:

"It seems to have been the tendency to look down upon the director, until it finally came to a point where he could no longer be denied.

"To every exhibitor I want to suggest that they begin immediately, if they have not done it in the past to acquaint their public with the directors who make the various productions, because stars are dependent upon direction to maintain their prestige. I want also to urge that each exhibitor do everything possible to bring about as rapidly as possible the inevitable condition which will place director and star in a position to rightfully secure just what they can earn by virtue of their merit, and nothing more or less."

Note the Date

Friday, March 5, 1915, WID said:

"What will be one of the biggest events in the film industry, for everyone concerned, is the day the director is not forced with his work to a speed that endangers the production. It seems a pity this practice exists, especially with big productions, because a man who is rushed is going to slip some day and then his haste is going to seriously affect the results secured on the expenditure of several thousand dollars. The sooner the men who control the money give their directors an incentive to do great work in a reasonable time instead of the best they can in a limited time, the sooner there will be more really great films and the sooner will all films be proclaimed 'worth while.'"

Almost six years ago, on Saturday, May 1, 1915, WID saw that the day was coming when the director would be recognized as a potent force in picture making. At that time he said:

"It is going to be a hard battle because of the fact that today no concern or group of producers has a monopoly on the brains of the business, and there are not enough big men in the producing end to give any one concern absolute supremacy. This means a keen bidding for the services of the big directors.

"Many new directors are going to come to the front within the next few months. The day of the student has arrived, and there are many directors, who have for many moons been going along in a rut, who are now burning the midnight Mazda getting their thoughts set along the new lines."

The Director

Sunday, November 24, 1915, WID said:

"The opportunity for the independent producer who is making special films directed by a truly capable producer is brighter at this time than ever before.

"The coming of these specials is not going to in any way interfere with the success of our really capable stars, but it is certainly going to put a beautiful crimp into scores of almost stars who have been getting away with murder and foolish salaries because someone spent money announcing them as a star and then forced their product upon the exhibitor by means of a program releasing contract system."

The Director's Battle

Back in 1918, on Sunday, August 18, to be exact, WID, then fighting for the recognition of the director and his work, said:

"The director has come into his own.

"I have always felt, and I am more positive now than ever, that the day will come when the public will go to pictures made by certain directors with a great deal more confidence than they now go to see certain personalities.

"A very important thing has developed in the past year, which at this time is of tremendous importance to the film industry. We find four of our greatest directors making special productions which will be distributed independently in the sense that each will be sold on its own merits.

"These four directors, who stand today in my mind as the four best directors in the world, following Mr. Griffith, who has in recent years not attempted to compete along the same lines, are George Loane Tucker, Lois Weber, Marshall Neilan and Maurice Tourneur."

To-day!

The Director

OF THE PAST—THE PRESENT—AND THE FUTURE

BY CHARLES MILLER

President of the Motion Picture Directors' Association

Jack of all trades and master of one; with the emphasis decidedly on the task of mastering the cinematographic drama:

Such was the motion picture director of the past.

Or it may be that the cartoonist’s conception of the fellow with “nothing to do till tomorrow” is more applicable in this case.

But one thing is certain: the director of the past, the man who made motion pictures under difficulties almost unbelievable in these days of well ordered producing organizations with a separate department for each and every little thing, the chap who was leading man, property man, technical expert and scenario writer as occasion demanded, the man who carried the burdens of the production end of the industry on his shoulders and struggled with new problems, always with face set resolutely toward better pictures—this man was a busy fellow.

Those of us who can hark back a few years can a tale unfold. The modus operandi of production ran like this:

The director was told to make a picture.

That was all. The director did the rest. The first step was to find a suitable script. If none was forthcoming the director must, and frequently did, write his own. Then he cast the picture as best he could, using stock people for the main and captivating friends from the speaking stage into appearing in the magic lantern drama, if possible. The sets and lighting effects all sprang from the director’s brain. There was no one to whom to turn for aid. All departments of the industry were in the experimental stage. The director stood or fell on his own merits. And many of them did stand on their merits and are still standing.

But these extreme conditions did not long endure. When a producer had financed a single reel picture for $300 and sold sixty to one hundred prints of it at $100 apiece and had repeated the profitable process many times he began to feel that he might be safe in putting a little of the velvet back in the business. The open air stage, a high sounding name for a wooden platform in a sunny spot, gave way to glass studios, which, in turn, were later to be replaced by dark studios almost everywhere.

Salaries of leading men and women soared upward from the hundred dollar mark in enormous leaps of $25 a week. What was a purely speculative proposition, became an established industry. Fort Lee, N. J., and Hollywood, Cal., became names heard around the world.

Then came the day of the combine. Producing organizations formed into groups; the largest of which was composed of Biograph, Vitagraph, Edison, Kalem, Selig, Essanay, Lubin, Melies and the Chicago firm of George Kleine which imported films. Only Vitagraph survives today. What a commentary.

Outside of this group there were the Kay-Bee, Keystone and Broncho films, Gaumont, Elclair, the Universal group and a few smaller producing organizations.

But remember, that—all this time, directors were mastering the new art. Men destined to achieve fame were being schooled. D. W. Griffith was “Larry” Griffith at the Biograph studio. Thomas H. Ince was “Tom” Ince on the Kay-Bee and Broncho lot, whence he migrated from the Imp studios in Eleventh Avenue, New York city, leaving behind him, among others, George Loane Tucker. Mack Sennet was leaving Biograph for Keystone. These are only a few names.

The next step was the formation of companies headed by men who saw that greater merit on the screen brought longer lines at the box office. Adolph Zukor started Famous Players with Edwin S. Porter as the first director. Harry Raver started All-Star, an organization now out of existence. Then came the Jesse L. Lasky company. Stage stars who really were stars began to worry about motion picture technique. These were the formative days of the industry. From this time on progress was sure and well ordered.

With the rise of the motion picture industry, the director rose also. Things got so that he could trust another man to design his sets. Writers began to appear in the scenario departments. Camera men arrived who realized the possibilities of photography. The interplay of the different factors in the producing end began to have real meaning.

Meanwhile the director was learning. The close-up arrived only to be scorned, then universally embraced. The cut-back lent added suspense to the action. Progress loomed on every side.

In this progress, I am glad to say without hesitation, the director was the leading spirit. His was the indomitable resolution coupled with a chance to do things. The familiar records of the few men I have already mentioned bear this statement out fully.

Often times the director was tempted to falter. The weak did fall. Obstacles were many and new ones presented themselves with each forward step. The heads of producing concerns were “from Missouri.” But the man who could “show them” made good.

Years of training are invaluable in any highly specialized line of human endeavor. I personally know that my years on the Ince lot gave me an invaluable able grounding. I am sure that every other director can point to his early environment with the same grateful respect. Most of us can go back to the speaking stage for our first instruction in dramatic values and in story telling. But presenting drama solely to the eye is a different proposition from stage work. There is no teacher like experience. The good old days gave us that.

The good old days. There is a wealth of romance in the words. Yes, a wealth of hardship and of struggle. The good old days. May they never come again.

THE DIRECTOR OF THE PRESENT

By comparison with the director of the past the director of the present has a comparatively easy task. He is backed up by a complete organization, the logical result of the years which have shaped the industry. Experts in the various branches of production activity may be reached without leaving the studio. He is surrounded by every help that can be given him in nearly every instance. The producing firm supplies with all the essentials for his success but one.

That one?

The query brings to mind the anecdote wherein Whistler was asked what he mixed his paints with.

"With brains," was the reply.

That is the one thing which all the efficiency in the world can not furnish the director. Today, as of yore, the director must stand on his own feet. The various other sources which contribute to the making of a photoplay are now of more value than ever. But the fact remains that it is the director who makes the picture. Others can help. They do help. A director who sought to go it alone these days would not last long. That has been proven. But when the electrician turns on the lights and the cameraman starts to crank the voice which is heard is that of the director.

Many changes have come about in the physical aspects of picture making. It is no longer unusual to take a company across the continent for a few scenes. The mention of a battle scene wherein the outlying players were directed by telephone would not cause a ripple of comment. The salaries of stars have soared almost beyond relief. Supporting players now command a salary larger than the dream of the most avaricious star of the pioneer days. The stage gives of its best talent. Literature has yielded its most famous writers. Artists of international reputation have consecrated themselves to the motion picture. The seemingly impossible is an accomplished fact.

But the director remains the man who makes the picture.

The director who is successful today is an unique combination.

First of all: He must know both drama and human nature. The picture must be interesting. To achieve that result it must be dramatic. The characters must be well drawn. From my study of audiences I know that fans are keen students of character drawing. They will often accept a story in which one episode is laid in China and the next in New York. But let a man step out of his character for an instant you will hear them say when they file out, "I didn't like the picture. A man would never act that way toward his own wife."

Secondly: The director must be a master of the technical end. He must know lighting. He must recognize pictorial beauty when he sees it and know how to treat it. The composition of a motion picture scene is now as carefully studied as is the composition of a great painting. Remember that these things do not reach the screen by chance. The director must know the camera, know what it can do and what it will do. For photography is his medium of expression.

Thirdly: The director must be a hard worker and a student. The indolent will not succeed. The unthinking can not. Time was when the stage was a deciding factor in styles and customs. The motion picture is even more of a factor because of the far greater audiences that it reaches. The girl in a little Oregon town at least knows what the metropolitan styles are like after seeing a comparatively new picture. For the screen is a great teacher. Your successful director is fully as apt to know Tolstoi as Ibsen as Harold Bell Wright and Dr. Frank Crane; a little more apt, in fact, for the first two are no mean dramatists.

It is not quite fair to take up the subject of which individual directors stand pre-eminent today. Many of them the public knows; the men whose productions are advertised under the director's name. Many others are known by name only to the most rabid of fans. But it is a comfort to know that the director is stepping out of the enveloping gloom and is being generally recognized for his contributions.

From the sporting pages of the dailies I learn that competition for promising ball players is very spirited. Big league scouts are always scouring the minor leagues in search of talents. I certainly doubt if this hunt is as searching as the endeavor to locate new directorial talent.

That in itself lends color to the statement that the director is the most essential of the elements which contribute to the success of a finished motion picture.

For to the director of today must fall the major part of the credit for advancing the screen to its present position as the entertainer of the world.

The only question is: "Where does he go from here?"

THE DIRECTOR OF THE FUTURE

What of the director of the future? Where will he lead us?
And where will he lead the millions who turn to the screen for their intellectual stimulus?

Only conjecture can supply the answer.

The director of the future will see the realization of possibilities as yet undreamed of. He will work with a medium vaster than the screen of today. Any hour may bring forth a development that will open up new vistas.

It is doubtful if the dramatic end of the screen can be embellished by any new refinements. The Greek drama contained all the situations that are used today. The actor's art is imperishable. Every generation has its leading players. So the development of the screen must lie along technical lines.

Settings and lighting effects, I believe, are practically perfect today. Authentic realism has been attained in both lines. Any striving for the bizarre or eccentric can be but a passing fad. "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," a European importation with cubistic and futuristic settings, may be followed by a flood of carbon copies of the same but I do not believe they will last. After all the greatest art is that which conceals art. The screen must be natural in its appeal.

Color photography and possibly stereoscopic photography are the two lines most likely to be opened up by the director of the future in my opinion.

So far most color processes have contained only two primary colors. It has been impossible to reproduce blue. The man who perfects a color process with three primary colors printed on film which can be shown on an ordinary projection machine deserves and will have wealth beyond dreams of avarice.

Tinting and toning are now used artistically to get two color effects. But real color photography would throw all this in the discard.

Stereoscopic photography is a more difficult problem. We all remember the stereoscope of our childhood days through which we used to squint at pictures of the Holy Land and the view of feeding the pigeons at St. Marks, Venice. The same principle will apply to the screen. Two pictures must be seen simultaneously for perfect stereoscopic photography. It may be that some genius will overcome the difficulties in this direction. Let us hope so.

Directors are hard at work now on every possible improvement. Some day their experiments and days and nights of labor will bear fruit.

The director who is working for the betterment of the screen, and practically all of them are striving toward that end, has a more important task than he may realize.

Time was when the screen took its cue from the stage. Now the reverse is coming true. Several photoplays have been adapted for the stage. One of them is now being translated into grand opera.

The screen has swung from sex stories back to the simple heart-interest drama. I firmly believe that a good rural drama would outdraw all the bed room farces on Broadway. The success of "The Storm" may be cited as a case in point.

Two recent news articles give a hint as to the trend of the screen. One is the reported sale of the motion picture rights to "Ben Hur" for a million dollars. That proves that no material will be overlooked because of expense. The other clipping says that Maude Adams, whom we all revere, is now experimenting in color photography for motion pictures and will shortly produce "Aladdin." In every issue of the trade papers one finds an announcement of a new literary light who is turning toward the screen as his medium.

In the progress that must come the director will play a leading part. He is a man most desirous of better things. His is the knowledge. His is the power. His is the opportunity. May he succeed. That is my only hope and ambition, for the future of the motion picture art.

GREAT REWARDS

By Adolph Zukor

Never before have the rewards been so great for talented motion picture directors, men who know how to interpret on the screen the ideas and emotions expressed by the great authors that are now joining with us to help make motion pictures better. Noting the high quality of men coming into the profession of directing motion pictures, and the rapid development of their genius, I feel sure that we are secure in feeling that they are well equipped to do their part in advancing the art of making the finer motion pictures that the public is demanding as its daily entertainment.

THE DIRECTOR OF THE FUTURE

By Joseph M. Schenck

The Largest Independent Producer in This Country

The Director is becoming increasingly important in the production of high class motion pictures. To-day, the Director who graduated from the old stock company, where he had played secondary parts, picked up a little information about lighting and got acquainted with the camera by either playing in the pictures or working at odd jobs in a studio, is a thing of the past, except in small and unimportant companies. The Director of the future is a man of college education, widely versed in history, literature and art. He will share with the star the chief responsibility of the picture. A good Director and a star of the first eminence can frequently make something worth while out of a mediocre story, but a poor Director can ruin even the best of stories, and can certainly handicap the best of stars.
The Director of the Future

By Cecil B. de Mille
(Director-General of Paramount Pictures)

The director of the future will be a man who never sleeps.

That is not said facetiously. The demands made on the director's time and intelligence are increasing daily. Ultimately the director will be of necessity a man who never sleeps, to speak metaphorically at least.

In the pioneer days of motion picture making many men entered the directorial field who were not altogether qualified for their work. True, directing in those days was a nerve-racking task because of the innumerable technical difficulties and the need for constant experimentation. But, compared with the present day director, the pioneers had a very easy time of it.

Then it was a case of "anything will do." The public had no standards to judge by. There were no photoplays worthy of the name. Motion pictures of that era were "pictures that moved" and that was all.

As the photodrama proper developed, the task of the director became more and more complex. From its first crude form, the screen play developed first a dramatic "skeleton" and later a distinct artistic form much as we know it today.

Each successive photoplay marked a distinct advance which every director was forced to keep pace with or yield up his place. The motion picture both as an art and as a business was growing by leaps and bounds, and the director was not only forced to grow with it—he was forced to grow ahead of it.

With the improved quality of screen productions came an improved public taste. The day of slipshod methods—of inexcusable technical and artistic bunglers—passed into the limbo of forgotten things. And in its place we had the photoplay of today made by the director of today for the most critical audience—the public of today.

Today and for some little time it has required the utmost effort of the producer to keep abreast of this demand on the part of the public. Contrary to popular opinion, there is no such thing as a picture that is "too good for the public." If a picture is worthy of success, it succeeds. If it fails, it is because the picture itself is faulty and not that it is "over the heads of the public."

The successful director of today is working eighteen hours out of the twenty-four to make his pictures worthy of the public's approval. If he is truly successful, he dreams, thinks and eats his picture while he is working on it. It claims all of his time, all of his brain and all of his artistry.

He realizes that he must produce a photoplay that is as nearly flawless as it is humanly and technically possible to make. To do this, the director must start planning weeks in advance in order that he may have ample time to make all preparations, to study his subject and to steep himself in the atmosphere of his theme.

In the early days, research work was an almost unknown term. No one knew or cared how people dressed a hundred years ago, what the customs of modern Spain are or whether traffic goes to the left or right on the Continent. Even the public manifested little interest in these matters.

Not so today. The public notes every detail of a screen production. And woe to the director who fails to check up every possible angle of his story and provide the correct detail in every particular.

To fail in this particular phase of his work is certain to spoil the illusion and bring down a deluge of criticism against the particular. To guard against this censure requires endless work and worry.

If these things are true of today—and they are unquestionably true—how much more will they be true of the director of tomorrow. If it requires two thirds of a director's day to keep pace with the present demands of the public, the director of tomorrow will have to be a man who never sleeps.

Instead he must develop into an authority on all subjects. He must conceive of new ideas and still newer ways of transmitting those ideas to the spectator. He must carry the artistry of the photoplay to a point not yet undreamed of. And he must continue endlessly to produce each time a picture that surpasses his previous effort. For to stand still in the motion picture world of today and tomorrow is to go back. The director must progress or abandon his work.

The photoplay is still too new and too youthful to have developed a fixed form. The director of the future will be a man who has vision enough to modify and build; to construct and progress always. He must see beyond the mere tomorrow. He must look far into the future. He must be a leader of thought and artist enough to record that thought so that all may read, for the true artist is the man who can conceive of a thought beyond the thought of the masses and so shape his thought that it may become the common property of all mankind.

And to do this, the director of the future must be a man who never sleeps; who is ever keenly alive to the delicate currents of thought and who is willing to sacrifice everything, both physical and mental, in the name of his art.
Director Independence

"The Great Pictures of the American Screen Have Always Come From the Independent Producer, and Always Will. The Factory System Has Killed Itself"

By J. D. Williams Genl. Mngr. Asso. First National Pictures, Inc.

The independent producer has always been responsible for the great pictures of the screen, the outstanding artistic successes and the undisputed box-office successes, and he always will be responsible for them.

It is always the independent producer who brings the new type of picture to the screen. He is the one who is invariably responsible for the new departure in technique, for the daring innovation in lighting or in pantomime. He is the one who is constantly being imitated by the rank and file of salaried directors toiling on the time schedule of the producing concern that turns out pictures in the same manner as a factory turns out automobiles.

And as long as the independent exhibitor backs up the independent producer with his screen, and guarantees to the independent producer a free and unhindered outlet for his productions, just so long will the motion picture continue to add to the millions of followers it can claim to-day.

The interests of the independent producer and the independent exhibitor are absolutely one and the same. Each one needs the other. Neither can get along without the other. And the motion picture cannot progress as it has been progressing—it cannot even maintain its present prestige—unless a majority of the theaters and a majority of the studios of the United States are independent.

There are two conditions which the independent producer must prepare to meet within the next six months. Each of these conditions is indivisibly linked with the other.

One is the absolute necessity for making as good pictures as he has been making, for less money than he has been accustomed to spend.

The other is the demand of the public—a demand that is rapidly coming to a head—for pictures that are not merely big, spectacular, expensive or beautiful, but pictures that are characterized by subtle touches, by unusual details in narrative or acting, by little features of style that cannot be bought, but must come from the brain or imagination of the director.

It is not the bigness of such pictures as "Passion," "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and others of the same kind, that is making them the success that they are. It is the finished acting, the perfectly expressed incident, the unusual situation subtly and vividly interpreted, the individual, almost intangible touches, that are delighting audiences. The American public is weary of armies, battles, court-rooms, cabarets. They are surfeited with palaces, pageantry, costly cities, and bacchanalian scenes. To-day, two people can hold an audience spellbound where ten thousand would make them yawn or laugh with contempt.

The American theatergoer will no longer spend his money at the box-office to see how much money the director has spent on the lot and in the studio, and how much the director got for his money. The theatergoer wants, and he will insist on having, in pictures from now on, something that money cannot buy—real entertainment values, stories that do not insult his intelligence, human, convincing acting, and the distinctive touches of characterization or incident that touch a responsive chord in his understanding or experience.

The "Mickey Neilan Touch"

"The Kid" is the supreme example of this irresistible method of telling a story in pictures, perhaps the greatest example that has ever come to the American screen. Marshall Neilan is a great director because he understands, to an infinite degree, the art of embellishing an incident or making a situation or a character unforgettable by some trifling, elusive touch which illuminates what he is doing like a flash of lightning on a summer night. It's the "Mickey Neilan touch," not the $100,000 set, that is going to pack the theaters and fill the tills from now on.

The picture that cost $200,000 six months ago will have to be made for $100,000 or $125,000, and there will have to be more gray matter in it from the director, or nothing will save it.

Bradstreet's statistics show that there has been a horizontal reduction of 45 per cent in the cost of the principal articles of public consumption during the past year. Figures of that sort constitute the handwriting on the wall for the extravagant and expensive motion picture. Too much money has been too recklessly and foolishly spent in the past. But it cannot be done with impunity in the future.

The "factory" system of production has completely broken down. The "machine-made" picture is not yet wholly a thing of the past, but it is rapidly on the road to becoming a matter of history. After seven years' trial by stars, directors and producing experts and executives, it is being abandoned with the rapidity of passengers abandoning a sinking ship.

What First National has done for the independent producer, is now a matter of record.

Let me point out that it is also a matter of record that the greatest box-office attractions of the last four years have been pictures independently made.
Not only is this true of the most successful First National attractions. It has been so true of productions which have been distributed through other channels, that the old-line producer-distributors have been forced to buy these independent productions to get real box-office magnets and have found them the greatest money-makers they have had to offer.

No more conclusive proof of their own utter inability to compete with the independent producer could be found than this.

They All Need Lots of Time

No director and no star can achieve his best under any other conditions than those of complete independence. If he is compelled to deliver so many productions within a given period, if he is limited to so much money on each production, if he can only give eight weeks to a picture, regardless of the demands that picture may make upon both time and money—then he is going to sacrifice everything else to the limitations of time and money. It is the only course he can pursue.

But when only one thing is expected of him, and that one thing is the best product he can turn out; when he knows that there is a premium on excellence in every detail of production because his market is guaranteed to him on the basis of excellence and on nothing else; he is assured that the better he makes a production, the more money that production will make for him—then the emphasis is where it belongs. He will make the best picture of which he is capable, because it means ruin to him to do anything less than that.

The day is rapidly approaching when every producer and every star whose name and reputation counts for anything with the American public will be making independent productions. Those who are let behind in the "factory fold" will be the weaklings and "selling platers" who are not strong enough to stand on their own feet and who have no merit worth capitalizing.

And those are the productions that will dominate the theaters of the country, because they will be the cream of the producing genius of America, and because the theaters will insist on having them for their known box-office value.

The motion picture exhibitor to-day has learned, from bitter experience, that the "factory" producer never gives him enough good pictures to offset the handicap of the weak ones he is compelled to book, if he leans on that service. The exhibitor has experienced with the reliability of independent productions and has found them safe and dependable. The day when a producer-distributor monopoly of the theaters of the United States was possible has gone by.

THE DIRECTOR OF THE FUTURE
By J. Gordon Edwards

"Art, art, art,—and away with the cheap, the lurid, and the crudely sensational." This will be the watchword of the director of the future.

Stars will be secondary in the productions of the days to come. All things will be sacrificed for the sake of continuity, and the dynamics of the story and its elements of instinct and emotion will be kept at all costs. The great personalities of the screen will be the writers and the directors rather than the players. Ultra modern methods will make the rankest melodrama beautiful.

Directors on the crest of the wave that is bringing the cinema into the fine arts will shun crudity, the lurid and cheap and grossly sensational. Harshness will be hidden and the picture will be made fit to be seen by even the most super-sensitive of devotees. Fight spectacles and over-embellished dramatic tableaux will go.

The progress the cinema has made to this situation where art is foremost has been made in a remarkably short time. It is now at a point where directors by concentration and the right manipulation of personalities must succeed in making hokum-proof, strong and absolutely clean pictures.

SCHOOLS FOR FUTURE DIRECTORS
By Herbert Brenon

I am convinced that in the not too far distant future, there will be in every Public School, and great University, a Motion Picture faculty, who will train the youthful mind for the great and young profession of motion picture directorship. Just as the youth who sets his mind to take up law, engineering, painting or sculpture as a profession goes to school to get his mind trained and properly equipped for the work, so, the youth whose ambition lies in the Motion Picture field will be trained and equipped to properly enter that field.

The tenets or foundations of the Motion Picture are even to-day in the process of formation. The youth of to-morrow who desires to become a Motion Picture Director will be trained in composition (the rudiments of landscape painting, color, grouping and sculpture and music), so that his sense of tempo may be properly developed. He must also have an extended knowledge of literature and the drama, he must know the art of acting, he must be capable of leadership, and possess sound business judgment, and have the many other attributes upon which demands are made if a man is to be successful as a Director of Motion Pictures.
The Past—and the Future

By David Wark Griffith

The director of the past: ingenious, hard working. With few mechanical aids; and little understanding. Striving for an end which often he could not foretell. Glad of the opportunity to do; appreciative of the slightest understanding.

The director of the present—perhaps very similar to the director of the past—a much troubled brick-layer, using about fourteen hours a day to place the bricks to the best of his ability.

The director of the future—let us look into the far, far future. Limitless his opportunity.

The world's understanding his for the performance. Silent tho the screen be, it is the silence of thunder. Portentous the power of the screen, so that of the director. And woe be that his art shall fall in the control of the wrong men—the wrong kind of men.

For the power of the screen is greater by far than that of any other instrument.

Because of this the director of the future must be a thinker. A greater thinker than he has ever before been. His must be knowledge of much. The world's ambitions; the world's aims; the hearts of humanity; the understanding of genius.

The patience of a master; the strength of a Hercules. Thematically the world's truths will be suggested by the art of the director.

Through the power of suggestion he will reach vast and great distances. Into the hearts of men he will travel. And multitudes will be glad because of him and his work. And be happy.

Far as we have travelled, so further we will go. Unhampered by censorship the art of the director will reach limits now unknown, undreamed of. Barred by censorship his art will wither.
The Director of the Future

By Perry N. Vekroff—M. P. D. A.

He will be the sum total—of two present-day factors: the manufacturer or producer, who now employs the director, and the director, who is now being employed. In other words, either the present day producer must be the director of his productions, or the present day director must become his own financial backer. Take it whichever way you please, these two factors must sooner or later be combined. It will be the inevitable outcome of economic evolution. The future will have no room for both. For, while the artistic nature of the photoplay is generally conceded, the factory methods employed in its production are still being adhered to. Result: red tape, confusion among various factors impossible to co-ordinate, tremendous overhead expense, which does not appear on the screen, and an appalling waste in money, time and energy in almost all centers of extensive production. This sort of thing will have to be stopped in the prevailing system of production; and the best way to accomplish this is to change the system itself.

Of course, in the face of the vast fortunes invested in the various motion picture enterprises, the suggestion for such a change is hardly expected to receive welcome; but the writing on the wall is even now plainly visible and no matter how reluctantly yielded to, such a change is bound to come.

There is much too much division of labor; much too much confusion; altogether too many executives and unnecessary lieutenants, where but one head only is needed to assume the responsibility for the success or failure of each individual enterprise, as all productions in the future will probably be. Wholesale "production" on factory methods may be the proper thing in manufacturing an automobile or any other article where materials and tangible things are concerned—things which can at all times be measured, classified and computed with mathematical precision. But in the case of photoplays one deals with ideas, dramatic suspense, themes, tempo, personalities, psychology, a good sense of the fitness of things, etc—intangible things, not amenable to factory rules or mathematical calculation. In the factory, the main executive can tell at any time just where things stand—before, during or after the money is spent. He has always a chance to correct mistakes and to prevent losses.

But in the studio it is different, which is nothing new, I admit, but which is all the more surprising since we all insist losing sight of the fact that, all that genius, money, time and effort can accomplish in motion picture production, can only go as far as the point where a series of tin-cans are obtained, containing an intangible something called an "exposure."

What motion picture executive ever lived, unless he be the director, who can make accurate speculations as to what his money has accomplished, until after the money has been spent? Such being the case, as it certainly is and always will be, of what really indispensable use is the executive and his many lieutenants? He must depend on his director and if the money invested brings profits or is lost because of the director, why not make the director invest it? And hereby hangs the tale of many a failure in the past and the success of the photodrama in the future.

The director, of the past as well as present, along with his inseparable colleagues—the author and cameraman—have always been and still are the most sadly miscast characters in any outfit they have ever belonged. They should have been and they certainly will be the main factors of future enterprises. It is the only way to eliminate waste and improve on quality. And since the director, by the very nature of things, is responsible for the success or failure of his productions, is it not fair that he be left unhindered by any rules or policies and given free scope to express his ideas to the utmost of his ability? With his own money and reputation at stake, he will be forced to undertake only what he knows he can do, giving the best that is in him, and depending for assistance only when he is physically unable to do everything alone.

That this is the tendency of future developments in motion picture production, is indicated by the "unit" system recently adopted in certain worthy and far-seeing quarters. And this system, though far from being ideal, being still hampered, as it is, by too many factors, proves my contention that the more intimately the director connects himself with the financial risks involved in his enterprises, the less will be the waste and the better the quality of his work.

Just what material will best qualify for the director of the future, is hard to tell, and does not really matter. It may be the assistant, the author, the cameraman or actor of to-day. But whoever he may be, he will have to be a full-fledged graduate of the school of experience. He will have to be a scholar; a student of human nature; an artist with imagination and undisputed creative ability, who shall find inspiration in the loveliest of ideals and the highest of moral standards. And as the screen’s possibilities as a medium of expression widen, the director of the future shall have more to say and do in the shaping of public opinion and the education of the young. To him shall devolve many problems of how can education be simplified and made attractive with entertainment.

His Duty to the Truthful Press

To his many tasks shall be added that of fostering an indigenous photoplay literature, calculated to uphold and propound the truth, rather than to exploit the publicity value of popular author’s names, or the titles of discarded novels, just because they had once been widely circulated—a photoplay literature, the merits of which shall be measured by the degree of good judgment displayed in selecting the theme and the efficiency of its treatment for the purpose of exposing superstition, prejudice, narrow-mindedness, and the many evils, which beset society and impede moral and economic progress. In this respect, the screen shall always stand in a place by itself—equalled, perhaps, in some of its advantages by other media, but unsurpassed in the full scope of its possibilities.

And should some one, out of the many now conducting experiments, some day succeed in perfecting a practical color-process, the director of the future will find himself in possession of the key to many doors hitherto closed. Then, again, who can tell but that the discovery of some new arrangement of prisms or lenses or something in the camera, may not revolutionize our present-day technique and thereby cause the usefulness of the screen to ramify into unexplored fields? What, for instance could then prevent the invasion of the screen into the class-room by substituting or supplementing the majority of dry text-books; or the elucidation and perpetuation of work done in laboratories and the lecture room; or the introduction of new methods of salesmanship, by doing away with the cumbersome sample-box or old-fashioned catalogue? With such and many other improvements which doubtlessly will come to pass, the troubles of the director-producer of the future will be many. So declares the oracle. Heed ye then its voice.

The M. P. D. A.

By Lilian R. Gale

When is the director conceded as competent?

It is when he suddenly delivers a surprising or stupendous success, a picture that is acclaimed by press and public, a Broadway phenomenon?

Or, is it when he has steadily earned for the producer a gradually increasing return, more prints in circulation of several productions, even though not any one of them has startled Broadway?

And, is the director, with an appealing story upon which to lay a foundation, a story that has perhaps been widely read and greatly publicized, who produces a successful screen version, a better director than the one who has struggled with poor stories, inadequate materials, and uninspiring conditions, but, withal, has continued to deliver marketable goods?

Just how is a producer to determine whether or not a man under consideration for the direction of a picture is or is not competent? He can look at a picture the director is responsible for, review his previous work, but does he know or does he consider the difficulties the director endured in making the picture, which is offered as a sample of workmanship?

A producer who does not stint a director in the matter of time, material, cast, story, is apt to be rather unjust when looking at a picture made by a man who was subject to entirely opposite conditions. When the producer can form his opinion upon the results obtained under such difficulties, the director, then, and only then gets a fair deal.

On the other hand, the same producer may look at a heralded success, and immediately wish to engage the director to make a picture or pictures for his producing unit. Does he consider the length of time it took that director, does he make note of the characters miscast, the lack in detail, when the fortunate director had everything with which to make the kind of picture that would not only meet with approbation, but at the same time earn big returns? Between the two directors, which of them may it he said is the more competent?

These days of sudden thrift are having an effect upon the director, to his advantage. The man who won a reputation upon one picture, a success over night, is perhaps no better a director, than he was previously. He may have been more fortunate in the matter of “the makings.”

The director who makes a salable picture from a story that is assigned him, despite the fact that he is limited to expense of cast, material of all kinds, and most important of all, time, if fairly treated, may prove to be just as good a director as the high salaried man whose one picture made him famous.

One of the hopes and ambitions of the Motion Picture Directors Association, is to establish a fairness by which members may benefit. It is not a union, it is not a benevolent association. It is a six year old, prosperous, energetic and ambitious organization. It stands for fair play, and for a brotherly love existing among the members, all of whom have, some time or another in their directorial careers, been obliged to contend with “conditions.” That they have withstood the opposition is evidenced by the great directors’ achievement of the past twelve months.
The Director of the Present

By William D. Taylor
Director of the Los Angeles M. P. D. A.

A thinker who is not afraid of work and who knows what he is doing—he, I would say, is the type of the motion picture director of today.

We recall the pioneer director who left the studio in the morning with a camera, $50 cash and an idea, and returned in the afternoon with a one-reel drama. Some of the qualities of this versatile and highly ingenious genius of the past are again in demand in a glorified combination of author-director-producer today.

But one who has partaken of the waters of Lethe with the best farewell wishes of all is that director, who, like his megaphone, was little more than a mouth-piece for the man behind him. His script was a blue print and he was a construction foreman.

Today many of the most successful directors are actor graduates; or come from the camera; or come from an assistant directorship. More and more it is the thinker—no matter whether, he begins as actor, author, assistant director or cinematographer—who becomes the real director. Possibly it is because this man in many instances combines an executive leadership with a hard-won knowledge of what the public wants for entertainment, and a practical experience of how to obtain that "what-the-public-wants."

More and more does the director trend to become a producer, arranging for finances, making his own picture in his own way and at his own risk; making pictures because he loves it, not because he can draw a good salary for making them.

He is still boss of a producing unit and director of a cameraman and players.

But he is becoming more and more an individualist, an interpreter of ideas, a molder of opinion—a power parallel to the statesman and the editor.

In these tendencies the progress of the motion picture director may be traced.

There is a growing honesty of purpose in motion picture direction today. The mere striving for effect, the reign of hokum, has passed. No longer are vital defects of story overlooked by public because the actors are excellent or the photography is exquisite. Fine acting and beautiful photography are integral parts of the art of pictures, but they are not its sole reasons for being.

Once upon a time one or more unusual scenes could carry a picture to success. The public could ignore defects and concentrate on the heralded novelty.

But that was the public of yesterday. There is a new public today just as there is a new director. The public today is being surely recruited from the classes of intellectual culture and artistic appreciation.

Novelties still have, and always will have, an audience. But novelty in any art or industry must be followed by merit that endures and that is continually surpassing itself.

As a novelty, motion pictures have reached their pinnacle.

Practically every effect and trick possible with a motion camera has been featured. Every imaginable sort of lens legerdemain, mat manipulation and multiple exposure has been experimented with. Every discoverable combination of fades, tones and tints has been utilized. We have tried animated titles, pictorial titles, no titles; we have played with back lightings, overhead lightings and floor lightings; we have contrasted mercury lights, arc lights and the sun itself; we have used art settings, realistic settings, futuristic settings, naturalistic settings, and no settings.

We have tested on our palette every brush and every tube of color. Now we’re going to paint some pictures.

To be a genius requires work. The director today is not petting himself. He works, works, works on his picture. Then he works on it some more. Then, perhaps, he is ready to start actual production.

The hard work, in picture making as in other arts, is in preparation. For a long time motion picture producers were too impatient. No sooner was a story purchased than the scenario star and the director got busy simultaneously. The director got his script sheet by sheet and as he shot his daily takes through the laboratory they were approximately edited and titled. At the end of the four weeks, or the twenty days, or whatever the production schedule was, the picture was given a final polishing and shot forth to a rather indifferent world.

Today the motion picture is made before the camera is set up. Many times the author consults with the director before he writes his story; at any rate before he adapt’s it, if it has already been published. Then there are conferences between continuity writer and director; between director and art advisors, technical experts, and others.

When it is time for the camera to blink its sixteen-a-second eye, 5 per cent of the hard work for the director is over; all he has to do is direct his picture.

THE DIRECTOR OF THE PAST

By Roy Clements, Secretary M. P. D. A., Los Angeles

To most clearly define the Director of the past it is necessary to draw a comparison to the Director of the present, and to my mind that is completely summed up by saying, "That which the director of today has, the director of yesterday had not."

To be more explicit, the director of the present has behind him efficient organizations of intelligence, representing many millions of dollars as compared in the past to the "penny ante" investments of a limited number of men. It seems to me then that it is more a comparison of conditions, where on the one hand a director is surrounded by money, efficiency, story-writing, intelligence and material help of all kinds, on the other hand the director of the past would be approached on Monday morning by his owner-manager and the manager would say, "Well Bill, what are you going to do next?" And Bill would say, "Well I have an idea, but I haven't got it quite clear in my mind." And the managing genius would make a great display of brains by answering with a patronizing smile, "That's all right Bill, take all the time you want as long as you get through in four days." We must admit that some of the finished product was not so bad, not to be compared, of course, with the product of today, but under the circumstances I sometimes wonder if the foundation laid by that director, handicapped by lack of money, management, stories and all that goes toward the fulfillment of the highly developed product of today—doesn't tend to tip the scales in favor of him who was the pioneer, and he was the pioneer. And I sometimes wonder if the industry of today still holds in regard that Daniel Boone, who was furnished reluctantly the necessary dollars of actual expense and from that blazed the trail to what we are pleased to term the fourth largest industry?

You may take issue with me when I give Bill and his contemporaries the credit for founding the industry, but there is one incontrovertible fact and that is, it was Bill together with Tom, Dick and Harry who individually had a vision and chafing under their working handicaps, got together one very rainy night to see if there wasn't some practical plan whereby conditions could be made better for the future of this wonderful business. The following week, February, 1915, nine of those directors of yesterday founded the Motion Picture Director's Association, a fraternal order binding its members together for the purpose of helping each other to make better pictures and pledging themselves to do everything in their power to improve the conditions and uplift the dignity of their profession. With its original purposes still intact and functioning that Association stands today as a clearing house of ideas, which every art has required, and through which every art has succeeded in developing to its highest goal.

The director of the present belongs to this Association and the director of the future will belong to it but it was the director of the past who conceived it and had he done nothing else to commend himself to the future generations he could still sit back and point with pride to this living monument. The director of the present may point with pride to that new $200,000 Director's building in Hollywood, and say truly, "This is the clearing house of the industry, for our home will also be the home of all of the essential organizations that go to make pictures." It is the director of yesterday who has made this possible.

The Director—As The Star Sees Him

In my opinion the director has the most responsible position in the motion picture business. He holds the reins that control every branch of the work. He accepts this idea or discards that at his discretion. According to his competence rests the fate of many a star or story. Sometimes the star or the story is so much greater than the mistakes of the director that it wins in spite of him. In that case he reaps glory unjustly. On the other hand, a director has been known to take a poor story and turn it into a very presentable one—to take inexperienced people and mould them into real actors. The director does not get half enough glory in that case and it often happens. The actor makes a hit. Up goes his salary and he is much in demand. He tries to do another part with another director and, well, it is a sad story. But if the picture is bad the blame rests upon the star.

"I saw Bobbie Blank yesterday. It was a terrible picture. Bobbie's work was good, but—etc., etc., etc." A continuation of etceteras in two or three pictures and the electric bulbs that form the name of the young star flicker out one by one.

The director should be an encyclopedia. True, he has actors, authors, technical men, photographers, carpenters, sculptors—everyone at his command. He can use the brains of all of them to terrific advantage if he himself has the brains to do it intelligently.

The late Sir Herbert Tree was one of the greatest of managers. One reason was because he was big enough to take suggestions from other people. His dress rehearsals were worthy of history. He surrounded himself with the greatest minds of his time and relied upon their judgment. He could call upon anyone from King Edward down for advice as to what should be used in this scene or that to make it most effective.

A director can do the same, and the great ones do. But whether the director is a success or a failure affects everyone connected with the production.—William Farnum.
GETTING BIBLICAL
(With acknowledgments to David)
The Director is my goat-getter; I do not want—him. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; but when—oh, when; has he ever led me beside the stilled liquid?
He weareth out my soles, leading me in the paths of uprightness for his name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, he should worry, for he is with me, his "meg" and his cameras confront me.
He preparèst a table before me and makes me pay for the dinner; I anointeth his head with Scotch; his hiccup hangeth over.
Shure, penniless and thirsty, he shall follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of Sam forever.—Tom Moore.

STARS BUT PART OF SCENERY
The director is everything. No, I'll take that back, because the director has to have a good story. It's about 50-50. When you come to divide up the 100 per cent of responsibility, you can split it two ways. You don't need to worry about anybody else.
A good director can take a good story and make a good picture out of it, if he has any sort of actors at all.
If you ever saw any of my pictures that were good enough to make a kid play hookey, you can give the credit to Clarence G. Badger, my director.
Where does the star come in? He don't. He's just part of the scenery.—Will Rogers.

SAYS BUSTER
Personally I don't think any more of the director than the New York baseball fans do of Babe Ruth. I consider directors, with or without puttees, as necessary as film and good stories. There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that my director, Eddie Cline, is deserving of considerable praise and credit in whatever success I have achieved. Although he doesn't use a megaphone, he is, like all good directors, a part of the motion picture industry. It is a combination of director—star—story that spells success. Three cheers and a tiger for the director!—Buster Keaton.

POOR DIRECTOR A HANDICAP
No actor or actress can under-estimate the value of proper direction. It is what makes successful actors and actresses and what keeps them up once they are featured players or stars. One of the greatest handicaps to any star is poor direction, and it has done more to kill some of our most popular idols than any other thing.—Bert Lytell.

DAY OF POOR DIRECTOR GONE
Good direction is absolutely essential in this present advanced stage of the motion picture industry. Producers, stars and exhibitors are realizing this more every day and as a result the present day director must be competent for the day of bad pictures and poor directing has passed.—May Allison.

THE MIRROR
The director is the mirror before which we work. He must therefore be sensitive, free from prejudice, open for suggestion and able to improve what he sees with an artist's hand.
He holds the reins, but it is for him to know when to be gentle and when to be firm, and you can always do a great deal more by kindness than by bullying.
It takes three things to make a great picture—story, star, director—and they each have a sphere in which they hold their own.—Mae Murray.

"POOR, SUFFERING HUMANS"
What do I think of directors? Poor, suffering human beings—having been one myself, I now have infinite pity and sympathy for every one undertaking such a task. They should be treated with the utmost consideration in order to make up for the life they must lead. How they escape the insane asylum is more than I can ever know. I think that there is nothing worse in the world than to spend one's time on this earth directing pictures.
These are my few small opinions on the matter; if they mean anything to you I am indeed glad to be able to give them.—Lillian Gish.

AN ESSENTIAL REQUISITE
I think a good director is one of the most essential requisites of the successful picture; a man who not only knows how a scenario should be written but can show his cast how to portray their respective characters.
There is a big difference between the director who is only capable of reading a prepared continuity to his cast, and trusting to luck that they know their business, and the director who looks upon his manuscript simply as a series of guide posts. The director who has creative ability is capable of injecting good original ideas into his work, and in most cases is in a position to show his actors how to put them over.
The director must first of all be able to inspire his cast with the confidence that he knows his business, because the average actor can tell in a very short time just how much or how little their director knows, and I don't mind saying it is just as hard to work with a man who is bluffling as it is for the director to be compelled to run a school of acting.
A successful director realizes that first of all he must have a good story, secondly a good cast and after that two very important factors are vitally necessary, harmony and cooperation, for without these, no matter how capable he may be personally, he cannot get results.—Bryant Washburn.

THE PILOT
An actor or actress is like a wonderful ship with full equipment and well manned with the exception of a guiding hand, a pilot. The ship may be the finest in the world but it is worthless without the pilot to keep it in the proper channel. The same is true of a motion picture. No matter how good the actor or actress may be, the director is the one to see that they play parts that they are suited for, to direct their work and get the most out of them.—Monte Blue.

MUST LIVE THE PART
A director is a medium for a star. There are oh! so few directors who make you feel what they want and give you the inspiration you need to make a scene what it should be. A director must live the role the star is playing the same as the actor or actress does. A real director is just as responsible for the success of the picture as the star.—Betty Compson.

THE MASTER MIND
When I entered pictures the director was a man who saw that his actors and actresses played all the scenes in the script. He merely transferred action from the state of imagination to the realm of being. He still works with a script, but now he is the master mind who either makes or ruins a picture. To him goes the credit for the interpretation of the story, the dramatic balance of the theme and the treatment of the situations.—Anita Stewart.

IMPORTANCE OF THE DIRECTOR
Although all successful comedians must understand directing and co-direct, they would be mental wrecks if they tried to do it all continually. The director, in his attention to details, takes a great load off the comedian’s shoulders.

In one reel comedies, the director is all-important. The actors, usually, do not even know what the story is about. With the two-reeler, it is a different proposition. A comedian could produce two or three pictures without direction. Should he continue, he would be apt to proceed along the same lines and hence get into a rut. So I couldn’t over-emphasize the importance of the director.—Harold Lloyd.

THE ARCHITECT
The director is to a picture what an architect is to a modern skyscraper. If a building was constructed without an architect, it would not be substantial and could not stand. When a picture has poor direction, it has the same fate.—Viola Dana.

SYMPATHY
A director who has the ability to win co-operation and sympathy from his cast, means everything to the success of a picture. He must work with his players; feel with them; sympathize with them; listen to their suggestions and give them equal co-operation. A director who can do this is a director who will make a picture a success.—Lila Lee.

MOST IMPORTANT MEMBER OF CAST
It is an established fact that an actor or actress must feel the part they are enacting in a story. However, if the director is not in sympathy with the actor or actress, it is almost hopeless for the picture to be a success. The successful director must live all the parts in the story. He is the most important member of the cast.—Alice Lake.

HIS AMBITION
“To show you what I think of directors, let me remind you that that’s what I want to be. I was a director once and I will be again—I hope.”—Wallace Reid.

“BILL”* HART’S IDEA
Bad direction can ruin a good story.
Bad direction can multiply the cost of a production by fours.
Consequently, GOOD direction is most desirable.—William S. Hart.

KNOCK THE DOUBT OUT OF PICTURE COST
By Thomas Wilson Switzer, General Mgr. Tilford Cinema Studios
One of the results of the general re-organization, through which the industry has been progressing for some time, is the insistence by producers, and the interest behind the producers, in knowing absolutely what a picture is going to cost before production begins, and in knowing positively that this cost will not be exceeded during the period of production.
The budgets for production in the past have always stated a figure which is supposed to represent the total cost of the picture, but almost without exception this figure is exceeded in the final analysis of the production cost.
The element of doubt and uncertainty always has been in the cost of settings; that means the cost of labor, material, decorations, transportation, etc., going into design, construction and embellishments of the settings. The cost of the cast, director, cameraman and assistants and studio rental now, as well as heretofore, is practically a known quantity. The cost of the settings has been to all intents and purposes an unknown quantity. The only solution to the problem is that the settings, now an unknown quantity, be handled by contract, reducing them to a known quantity. The contractor to be an organization specializing in estimating, specializing in purchasing, construction, labor, etc. The contractor, therefore, is much better fitted to absorb the element of doubt on an estimate than the producer himself.
When a concern or individual is going to build a building, before actual construction starts, all element of doubt is eliminated from the owner’s mind for the reason that he has a contract passing along any element of doubt to the contractor, whose business it is to shoulder the responsibility of any variance from the figure of his contract with the owner.
So, with the production of a motion picture, why should it not be handled in the same manner, with sufficient elasticity in the contract to permit of changes and additions, which are inevitable in any productive activity where artistic or temperament uncertainty exists?
What the Cameramen Think

SPEAKING RIGHT OUT

You want me to say what I think of directors? You want me to speak right out in public? And you want to print it in a respectable publication?

Oh, boy! Page Dr. Crafts to edit my copy.

No, they're not quite that bad—not quite, I said.

In the first place, in order to be a successful director, you must wear puttees and trick trousers. That erudite scholar, Will Rogers, was the first to discover the relationship between the high cost of puttees and their directorial popularity.

Then you have to wear sport shirts and strike thoughtful attitudes.

And incidentally—although it isn't of much importance—you have to know a lot about technique, dramatic values, stories, acting and little things like that. That's easy.—Percy Hilburn, Goldwyn.

MEANS EVERYTHING

A director blessed with the ability to translate an author's story into a picture which will be interesting and of worth to the public, means everything to the success of a motion picture. It is hard to fully estimate the importance of a director.—Guy Wilky, Paramount.

PUBLIC DOESN'T APPRECIATE HIS WORK

In my opinion the success of a picture depends upon four things, the star, the scenario, the photography and the direction. As a director is actually responsible for the success of the star and the scenario, it is easy to see how important a director is to pictures. The public doesn't fully appreciate just how much a director means to the motion picture industry.—Karl Struss, Cecil B. deMille Cameraman.

MAKES OR BREAKS

A director is the master hand that either makes or breaks a picture. A director with ability and understanding is easily responsible for 75 per cent of the success of a production.—Paul Perry.

THE CENTRAL FIGURE

The director is the central figure in the production of a motion picture. The cameraman may do his work well and the star may be wonderful, but if the director is incompetent, the work of all the other members of the company is worthless.—Jackson Rose.

A VITAL FACTOR

It is very seldom that the photography is praised in a poorly directed picture. The perfect picture results from close co-operation between the cameraman and the director.—John Arnold.

QUALITIES

In my candid opinion:
A DIRECTOR must be
1 An Artist (minus temper);
2 A MAN (in the whole sense of the word);
3 A Gentleman (minus mannerism).
A DIRECTOR must possess
1 A great Versatility (plus simplicity);
2 A keen business acumen (minus niggardliness);
3 Patience (plus firmness).

J. A. Dubray, I. S. C.

A NECESSITY

A capable director is a most vital necessity to the motion picture cameraman and the star. There have been many instances where a cameraman has worked hard and obtained good photography, but due to poor direction, the picture was a failure.—Arthur Martinelli.

HATS OFF TO MR. HERO

I used to think that a director was a kind of a being specially created when Providence was in a mean mood; that of all unnecessary evils that cumber life's path he was the most noxious and useless. The reason why I changed my mind was because I tackled his job and found out a great many things I never knew before.

When the Keystone organization was merged into Triangle I was made "supervising camera man," a position I continued to fill when Mr. Sennett cut down eighteen companies to six and formed the Mack Sennett Comedies, Inc., in order to make "fewer and better pictures." In this capacity it devolved upon me to go out with company groups to "shoot" and at the same time direct scenes while the director, perhaps at the studio or on some other "location," was directing other episodes. This has been my work for several years. It qualifies me to speak with some confidence on the subject of directors.

To the conscientious, capable and up-to-date director, Hats off, gentlemen! He is the very center and original impulse of picture making; he has to catch the creator's spirit and translate it in terms of a vital, living picture and the medium of his expression is temperamental players who must be humored, badgered, cajoled or coaxed into giving their best to the work in hand; he must not only please the boss but the public, himself and his players. Some job!

The director is not only at the mercy of the players who are supposed to embody the director's thought; he is also at the mercy of his assistants, his "prop" men and every supernumerary, any one of whom can and sometimes does impair the dramatic or comedy situation, thus bringing rebuke and criticism on the head of the much-maligned director. What a shiftless, don't-care-a-hang camera man can do to a director to distort his thought is fearful to contemplate. Though he never appears on the screen, the real hero of every successful photoplay is, in my humble opinion—Mr. Director.—Fred W. Jackman, Head Camera Man, Mack Sennett Comedies.
The Director of Today
By Jesse L. Lasky

First Vice President Famous Players-Lasky Corp.
The director of today differs from the director of yesterday exactly in the same proportion that the motion picture of today differs from the motion picture of a few years ago. In other words today’s director is a development, the outgrowth of the vast accumulation of effort, experiment and industry that has gone into the making of motion pictures, that has brought them to their present perfection.

From the inception of pictures, when the director was very likely to have been author, leading man, property man, as well—from the very beginnings, in short, the qualifications of the director have not changed greatly. The demands upon him have simply increased and his scope of action has been immensely extended.

Then as now, he required the instinct of the dramatist and a judgment of dramatic situation and story values. This faculty, which by reason of its possession and its exercise either makes or mars the work of the director, should be innate and long experience simply renders it more profound. The test of time has eliminated many who failed to profit by experience and whose instinct for the dramatic was insufficient to meet the growing demand for better pictures.

The director of today finds his position and his responsibilities tremendously increased in importance by reason of the enormous outlay represented in each picture of consequence; by the public’s far more critical attitude and because the screen has become so great a factor in life and such a pronounced moulder of opinion.

He must therefore be able to combine with his native artistry a degree of efficiency which will prevent waste in time, materials or money. Too great an emphasis in either direction must prove detrimental if not fatal.

But were I to attempt to express in one word the greatest essential to a director’s success today, I should say that he must be normal; normal in his viewpoint, normal in his attitude toward life and art and business, normal in his own life and dealings. Why this? Simply because, the picture will be in some degree a reflection of the director’s own personality, and as a picture must be normal to be successful it follows that the director must be so.

What does being normal mean?
That one must be possessed of good taste, must have a keen sense of the fitness of things, must neither be an extremist, nor a coward, must hold fast to common sense, even when adventuring in the realms of the exceptional. He must have imagination yet the ability to hold it within bounds. He must have understanding sufficient not to overstep the bounds of propriety, and yet not be so timid as to miss opportunities which by the exercise of good taste and judgment could be applied without harm.

If we seek for flaws and faults in motion pictures of today we will find that whenever they occur—which is far more rarely than one might expect considering the exigencies of the work and the manifold difficulties that beset the path of the producer and director—it is generally as a result of some abnormality in the director’s viewpoint and treatment of his subject. We will find that it has been through some lapse in good taste and reasonable judgment that the fault has been permitted to creep in and mar the whole.

How can a man acquire this normal point of view? The question is simple: By being normal himself and regarding life not through hectic nor yet blue glasses, but through the plain but highly powerful lenses of common sense. He will avoid the unethical, the offensive, the morbid and the pathologically repulsive; he will enhance the beauty of his work by touches of delicacy and rare charm, finding avenues for the exercise of his imagination and his dramatic instinct in situations that convince by their verisimilitude and compel by their power and lifeliness.

One value of imagination is that by its means one can make that which is unreal seem natural and true. Normally handled a problem of this sort becomes convincing and alluring, but without normal treatment might prove not only absurd but positively offensive. This is a test of the power of the director, for he will be confronted with such things very often in his work. It is but natural to suppose that the writer shall permit himself flights and handling of situations that if not impossible are at least frequently so unusual as to be exceptional. To make these things seem true is a real task. To make them seem true and yet not impose upon the intelligence of the audience, to maintain the sympathy of the spectator under such circumstances and withal to preserve good taste throughout will prove the right of the director to his title.

Given also, at this writing, the fact that the greatest authors are now contributing original works to the screen, the director must needs measure up to the standing of those whose works he must visualize upon the film, intellectually and otherwise. The director of today who is successful, is an artist, a business man, an executive, a dramatist, an actor. He has some knowledge of literature and the various arts and sciences. He is a man of broad gauged views and is conversant with the affairs of the day. His likeness to a great newspaper editor is rather marked. He stands astride the world and half its population is his audience.

Reminiscences of Early Days

BY AN OLD-TIMER

Back in 1895 I decided to cast my lot with moving pictures. It was a terribly immature business.

There were a few concerns and they didn't amount to very much, either. Probably the most important organization at that day was Raff and Gannon, who had the right to exhibit and use the Edison Phonograph in this country. There was a machine known as the Fantoscope and another as the Kinetoscope, and another as the Vitroscope, and all of these machines showed motion pictures. I have to laugh when I think of what they were. But Raff and Gannon had an idea that this motion picture was going to be good, so they made a deal with Edison and began to distribute the Edison Vitasecope. At that time Jim White and Percy Waters were playing around the picture business. Ed Porter got a job with Raff and Gannon and became an operator; that is to say, a projector. Raff and Gannon sold state rights on the Vitascope and I dare say they were the first state right people in the picture business. They had machines in Koster and Bial's, Proctor's 34th St. Theater and the Eden Musee and Huber's.

Interest in pictures began dropping off. This was due to the fact that all pictures in those days consisted of a few feet of motion photography showing the waves rolling or a street car in operation, or a locomotive passing by, or something like that.

At that time Edison was the whole works. Very soon Porter got a job in the mechanical branch of the Edison picture factory, and a week later began to develop as a director, which was just exactly what he wanted to do. His salary was $15 a week.

In 1899 Porter prepared a scenario for the first feature motion picture that America had ever known, "The Life of an American Fireman." Ed Porter was cameraman, director and everything else. The studio was on the roof of 41 East 21st St. Biograph had a studio on the roof of the building at 13th St. and Broadway. And this was all there was to motion picture studios in America, except that Pop Lubin had some sort of a plant down in Philadelphia.

In their order of appearance our directors developed about as follows: Wallace McCutcheon was the first director, hired and paid as such, and Roy McCardell was the first scenario writer. Richard Hollman, owner of the Eden Musee, had — Eaves, the costumer, directed what was really an illustrated lecture of about 2,100 feet. This was in 1898, and about the same time George Melies made some trick pictures in Paris. Jack Frolley was working with Pop Lubin in Philadelphia and Commodore Blackton and Albert Smith were working at Vitagraph; the most of their work was on short stuff. Ed Porter came along in 1898 as well.

There was a lapse of six or seven years from then on. About 1905 J. Searle Dawley came along and Tony Sullivan went from Biograph to Edison, where he became a director. Sid Olcott was working for Biograph. The following year, about 1906, Bill Rainess, who had been an actor, went to Vitagraph as a director and Dell Henderson also joined Vitagraph. August Balfour was a director at Lubin's and James Franey was working with Dave Horsley at the Nestor plant. Then Wallace McCutcheon, Jr., came along at Biograph, and Griffith, starting in 1906, became a director at Biograph about 1908. S. E. V. Taylor, who started with Biograph writing scenarios, went to Reliance as a director, as did James Kirkwood. About this time Charley Kent was with Vita.

The making of "The Life of an American Fireman" carried, as you will notice, all of the important ingredients and elements which make up the motion picture of today. It had heart interest, suspense and thrills, and this is a good enough background for any feature.

Incidentally, "The Life of an American Fireman" had the first close-up ever shown in this country. It had the first double exposure and the first switch-back.

This despite the claim made by David W. Griffith that he introduced the long shot, the close-up and the switch-back to the screen.

The story was very simple. It showed a fireman leaving his home, kissing his wife and child goodbye, then going on duty. He makes a tour of the place, which gave us a chance to show the fire house, and all that sort of thing, and then he had a sort of dream.

He pictures his family in danger. This is where they used the first double exposure. The alarm rings. And right here was used the first close-up, first showing the hand of a man pulling the alarm, and also the big gong in the fire house ringing. These were the first close-ups ever made for the screen. Then followed the excitement of the company going to the fire; the fireman rescuing, first his wife, then his child, with a great embrace at the finish.

It was four years later when Edison made the next, "The Great American Train Robbery," which was offered as the first feature film. Biograph made "The Moonshiner" about the same time, and Edison turned out "The Life of a Yeggman."

Shortly after Porter made "The Kleptomaniac," which gave the first dual theme of any picture. It started off showing a rich woman pilfering in a department store, who is arrested by a female detective and taken in her own carriage to the station house. Then they switched to a poor East Side woman stealing a loaf of bread, being arrested, thrown into the patrol wagon, taken to the station house where she was thrown into jail, while the rich woman who posed as a kleptomaniac, was allowed her liberty.

Incidentally, when Porter made "The American Train Robbery," he discovered what was to be later America's most famous daring, wild west rider, G. E., otherwise known as "Broncho Billy" Anderson.

Later, Anderson directed "Raffles" for Vitagraph, and incidentally this was the first feature that Vitagraph made. Subsequently he and George Sproor formed the famous Essanay.

In 1907 Porter was casting for Edison a picture, "Eagles Nest." A young man named Griffith applied for a job as the lead. Ed told him he was too small, but Griffith said he could pad up and lift himself and handle the part, and he did. And this was David W. Griffith's first appearance on the screen. He did mighty well as the lead in the "Eagles Nest." Unfortunately, I believe the negative and all of the prints of "Eagles Nest" were destroyed, but this was his start. Later he wrote scenarios and McCutcheon at Biograph gave him his start. One day when McCutcheon was ill, Griffith got his opportunity to direct and we all know what wonderful things have happened since.

Prior to 1906, the only companies in business were Edison, Biograph, Vitagraph, Lubin and Colonel Selig. Of course, we used all the stage properties and I think Biograph was the first company to use a lighting system, put in by Cooper-Hewitt, after they had experimented with some stage spot lamps.

In those days salaries were all on a daily basis. The lead got $5 a day, when he or she worked, and the extras who appeared chiefly in chase scenes got $1 a day. If a picture cost over four or five hundred dollars somebody let out a holler.

The first stop motion picture made came from the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, when we shot night scenes. It is funny when you think about this today. We made stop motion photography by counting ten and then cutting off. It took a whole night to photograph the illuminations of the Exposition. We made a picture called "Goldilocks," from the fairy tale, in which we used teddy bears and it took a terrible long time to shoot ninety feet of stop motion photography for this.

I think that the forerunner of the present trick photography used by Mack Sennett was in the picture Edison made, "The Dream of a Rarebit Fiend." This was the first picture in which sets were reduced to miniature size and where the first floating-thru-the-air trick was used. They made a panorama of New York from the World Building and then used this as a background. They worked up the story which showed a man eating a rarebit and drinking profusely, and finally after many adventures, one of which was on a safety isle in Madison Square where he saw the buildings tumbling all around him and were upside down, he finally got into his bed, and he began to dream. He sailed out of his window all around New York, finally lost his clutch on the bed, smashed thru a skylight and awakened in his own bed. They made a complete duplicate of the bedroom in miniature, with the bed as well, and manipulated so that the miniature stuff worked out and you couldn't tell it from the actual size. I believe this was the first trick photography ever attempted in motion pictures. This was made in 1905. The picture did a tremendous business, especially in Europe. By the way, Sennett was an actor about that time at the studio on 21st St. The entire working force for the "Dream of a Rarebit Fiend" was a scene painter and Porter. I do not think this picture cost over four hundred dollars and it ran about 600 feet.

Old Pop Lubin made the first battle scenes ever shown on the screen, down in Philadelphia. He got about thirty or forty men and dressed them in uniforms and showed some battles of the Spanish American War. These extras cost $1 a day each.

After 1907, this business began to develop in a big way. I think that it might well be said that our first directors really did things prior to 1907. Incidentally, Percy Waters probably operated the first series of exchanges, but Edison Raff, son of the senior member of the firm which leased the Edison Phonograph rights, actually put into operation the first film exchange of the world at 101 Beckman St., in New York, in 1897. You could take your own film to Raff and he would exchange it for some other kind of film. This was probably where the name "Exchange" actually comes from, because in those days you bought your film outright. There were no distributing points throughout the country and practically all of the buyers came to New York—and there weren't a great many at that.

SUN-LIGHT ARC CORPORATION

President
NOT A PRESS AGENT'S CONCOCTION, NOT A PUBLICITY WIZARD'S STUNT, BUT THE UNBIASED VERDICT OF THE INDEPENDENT TRADE PRESS, AFTER A SHOWING OF THE SENSATIONAL SUPER-DRAMA "YOU AND I," FEATURING VICTOR SEASTROM AND EDITH ERASTOW:

Motion Picture News:
"You and I" is a fitting successor to "A Man There Was." The story revolves around the theme of a woman's unselfish love. Truly, one loses all sense of time and environment; so impressive are the rugged story and the marvelously picturesque background. Exhilarating is the grandeur of its scenery, it is the vivid and stark drama which dominates. Seastrom is thoroughly grounded in his art. Once in the crowd the play will advertise itself by word of mouth.

Moving Picture World:
The theme is strongly developed. Scenically, the background of towering mountains, precipices, spouting geysers, and water-falls, seem most fit. Victor Seastrom gives an impersonation that is gripping in mounting dramatic intensity. Edith Erastow's performance is one of great dignity.

Wald's Daily:
As a whole, an excellent picture. Artistic production, fine acting, beautiful settings. Exceptional handling of eternal triangle makes it distinctive. Direction very good. Photography excellent. Lighting exceptional. Camera work first-rate. Victor Seastrom gives admirable performance, as does Edith Erastow—splendid types. "You and I" is "different." Even better than "A Man There Was."

Telegraph:
"You and I" is a story of ideal love. The simplicity, fine acting and beautiful settings combine to make a vital picture. Victor Seastrom has an eerie fascination, and Edith Erastow gives a strong and realistic performance. It displays an artistic blending of the old and the new.

Exhibitors' Trade Review:
Scenically and photographically "You and I" is a wonderfully big production. The story, while impressive, deals with an old theme, but one which, nevertheless, has always served as a great box-office attraction.

Bill Board:
It is a story of great elemental force, showing to an overpowering degree the devotion of a woman to her lover, and contrasting her sublime unselfishness with the weaker will and greater love of life on the part of her mate. The story is built up with outstanding directorial skill. Step by step, the audience is made to realize that it is in the presence of a great creative genius, possessing power, to an uncommon degree, to move and stir the feelings of the crowd.

New York Review:
Victor Seastrom directed the picture and acted the leading role, again revealing his mastery of both. He has one of the most commanding personalities in the cinema world. Goldwyn, Paramount, and Metro should compel their directors and stars to see it.

Screen Opinions:
"You and I" is a wonderfully fine production. Beyond appeal to the eye lent by spectacles of Nature, there is splendid craftsmanship. There are individual scenes which are masterpieces of composition. We doubt whether the art of facial expression has ever been more successfully demonstrated on the screen. The photography is especially good. The subtitles are carefully and effectively worked. This production could be used to good advantage as a special feature with special music and specially chosen programme fillers.

VICTOR SEASTROM stands out today as the greatest screen actor of the world, barring none. EDITH ERASTOW, the famous tragedienne of Europe—one must see the last scenes of "You and I" to realize that there is no greater dramatic actress on the screen, here or anywhere.

Even better than "A Man There Was," say the critics, and "A Man There Was" acclaimed by the trade press as the "Trent of the Season," was recently singled out by the New York "Times" and the New York "Globe" as an outstanding picture of 1920.

"YOU AND I" IS READY FOR RELEASE. "A Man There Was" is now being released and there is some territory yet unsold.
We are ready for business, dashing and profitable for any state-right man who is alert and quick to grasp opportunity.

Our Units At Work

Los Angeles—Four units are at work at the two studios operated by Warner Bros., making comedies for national and educational release.

In the former Jesse D. Hampton studios there are two companies at work. One is making a series of two films with Louise Fazenda and Lester Conklin for Educational use, and the other a series of one-reelers, likewise for Educational.

In the adjoining studio, which is also a Warner Bros. plant, the entire Banks comedies are under way for Federated distribution. A release for that company has been made, and another for the same company will be made early in this month. There will be seven films made this year and will be known as Tiffany comedies, available at Federated Exchange.

Buy New Feature

Warner's Exchange, the Federated archipelago holder in New York and northern New Jersey, has acquired Diane of Star Hollow from Procter's Security.

Vitagraph Rejoins Club

The Vitagraph exchange has reentered the local F. I. L. M., Club, having been out of the organization since last September.

Delegation Leaves Today

The National Association delegation, which will leave for Albany this afternoon at 5:30 to attend the hearing before the New York City Board of Alderman, will have a chance to meet with Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Goldman. The delegation has been at the hotel for the past week in the interest of film development.

Goldman Joins Warren

Sidney J. Goldman, for a number of years associated with F. B. Warner in the latter's activities in the film business, has been elected a vice-president of the F. B. Warner Corp., the latest entry into the national distributing field. Mr. Goldman, will be the representative of the entire central section of the United States.

He resigned last week as Chicago manager for Associated Producers, Inc., to join Mr. Warren. Goldman will leave for the Pacific Coast shortly. He will remain there during the remainder of the year, and return to New York early in the spring to attend the activities for the new organization.

"THE SOUL WITHIN"—Audrey Munson

An indication of the luxuriant settings used in the production to interpret the dramatic story of this famous girl as told in "The Soul Within," Perry Play, Inc.—Advt.

Oh, Hush!

It all went wrong. Oh, boy. How wrong? Ask Milt Crandall. Over at Equity, it was a set-up. Sweet and pretty. For Clara's latest. At Capitol this week. Milt had it all figured. Doped. Started by having Mayor Hylan propose a "hush" week. It was to be a great thing. Kids quiet. Sirens tied up. Got it over once. In Cleveland. "Hush" week was big. But here. Well, Rollo; that's another story. Hylan started to bite on it. Then went blooey. Issued his proclamation all right. But his "hush" stuff included this: "To hush the increasing, unwarranted criticism of the nation, state and city." Which got all the anti-advertisement papers set up agin it. They kidded it. To death. And further still. So "Hush week" was forgotten. Ain't it tuff?

Still Crandall got some space. For his feature. Not what should have happened. But then, some. And. In the life of every exploitation man. Is this slogan. "Try for much. A little received is better than nothing."

WHO'S THINKING?

Out in Los Angeles? Where Bebe Daniels went to jail. For speeding. Ten days. Wonder whether her director got busy? Did she shoot scenes of Bebe? In the lock-up? They showed her in a bath tub. Remember? How would it do in jail?

Bette a cookie it wasn't done. Bet two cookies to one.

A New Nat'l Booking

Is Promised by Jules E. Mastbaum—"Art Operations in the Summer"

"A New Nat'l Booking" (Continued to WID's DAILY)

Philade' his—Film men will, no doubt be very much interested in the following which appears in "The Exhibitor":

"According to the statement made by Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Co. of America, the National Booking Co., which he was also president, and which was organized in New York last summer and presumed to be one of the largest motion picture booking combines in this country, will not operate. Mr. Mastbaum has stated that the company has merely dropped out of existence and, while he does not admit that it will not succeed by a similar organization, he gives no assurance that the original plans of the officers of the former company will not be carried out. He then asked as to when anything might be expected in the way of a successor of the National Booking Co., he said that such a booking concern materializes that it will probably begin its operations in the summer. Mr. Mastbaum also expressed the impression that while the National Booking Co. has died a natural death that it will probably be succeeded by something of a similar nature which will continue activities during the coming summer."

Film men on Saturday revived the talk regarding Peerless Booking, the Keith subsidiory, which is reported will shortly launch a nation-wide booking office with the Stanley Co. as an ally.

The plan, as spoken of in film circles, would first call for the development of the scheme in the Greater New York territory where, it is said, a second Stanley Co. will be developed. After the local development has reached the proper stage the national expansion will be undertaken.

Mr. Mastbaum was asked by wire, addressed to West Baden, Ind., whether or not he was correctly quoted in "The Exhibitor." Up until the hour of going to press no answer had been received.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Ovossa, Mich.—This is the home town of James Oliver Curwood. When his "Nomads of the North" was shown here for three nights the theater, seating 600, was crowded all night, the last show beginning at 2:30 A.M. A few days ago "Kazan" same to town for a three day run. Four counties were billed from door to door with announcements that the theater would be open as long as there were people waiting to see the show. Election night crowds gathered. Lines formed two blocks long. The last show began at 2:45 A.M. Here it is said local merchants did $30,000 worth of business.

Omaha, Neb.—When "Earthbound" was shown recently at the Rialto, a great deal of comment was caused by the artistic lobby display designed by S. J. Bennett, under the direction of Resident Manager John Loveridge. The entire display was in airbrush work. The motif of each design was the mystery—"we would reveal an atmosphere of "Earthbound.” Backgrounds were more suggested than revealed. A dusty, mysterious blue was the underlying color scheme, with characters in rich gold.

At night, with the beautiful front of the Rialto lit by blue spotlights, the effect was truly striking. Three large panels adorned the arches, with the four-three-sheet posters, each describing one of the principal characters in "Earthbound" set at the street level, under glass. There can be no denial of the fact that this unusual display played a large part in the tremendous business done by "Earthbound" at the Rialto, where it smashed all house records in this 2,600 seat theater, running the entire week.

Dayton, O.

Dayton—A 700 seat theater will be built here by Robert J. Hirsh, manager of the Old Glory. The new house will cost $40,000.

The Queen of the Artists' Studios

In this issue Perry Plays Inc. announce the completion of this production. By an oversight, my contract with Perry Plays Inc., for whom I directed this production, did not provide for the credit mention of my name.

After many weeks of painstaking effort and the most careful thought, I have this day delivered to Perry Plays Inc. the completed production.

It measures up to the highest standards of elegance, of careful detail, of perfect cast, of beautiful photography, of distinction and originality in the treatment of the story, of all of those elements which make for a truly great picture—one that will make film history.

I am sure that the producers will admit that the production reflects the evidence of my unstinted efforts. I have asked them to give me the credit which I believe I deserve. I am now calling upon all fair-minded distributors and exhibitors who are familiar with my work to see that such credit is given when this picture reaches them.

I want it to be known among the pictures listed as "A Robert Z. Leonard Production"—a name in which I take pardonable pride and which I believe will increase in prestige and favorable reputation by association with such productions as "The Soul Within."

I have no legal basis for this request. I am relying solely on the fairness of those who have it in their power to render this bit of justice.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) ROBERT Z. LEONARD.

DODO BACK

Wonder why?

WILL IT COME?

THAT HEARING
Tomorrow. At Albany. With the dove of peace in the background. Maybe a flock of doves. That "harmony" existing is w-o-n-d-e-r-f-u-l. Olive branches and such. Where?

Of course there'll be a lot of speeches. There always are. Everybody will have ideas. Some will break loose. And what will Governor Miller do? I have an idea. But it won't be printed. Not yet, anyway.

Meanwhile the betting odds stand. Over at Mrs. Astor's: two to one. That he signs.

ADVERTISING: SCREEN vs. VAUDEVILLE
Once upon a time. Yep; advertising in productions. Sort of died out. Of late. But never was anything as raw. As appears in vaudeville. In the "Aunt Jemima" act. National advertising. Of a pancake flour. With the big, fat Aunt Jemima. Same as she appears in ads. All over the billboards. And in publications. They sure have put it over.

NAZIMova
Looks like she's through. With Metro. Lots of talk. Been goin' on for months. But looks settled now. All of which is interesting. Nazimova was best drawing card on screen. Two years ago. She was going. Like a house afire. One of the biggest bets in business. Then she got ideas. Insisted on picking her own stories. Her own director. She was all there was. And there will be nothin' more. And exhibitors say the rest. Say she has been declining since. In drawing power. All of which should prove something. To Nazimova. As well as other "stars."

THAT LITTLE MAN
Zukor. Doing things abroad. Famous will have exchanges in Germany. And that isn't all. But that's all for the minute. Sufficient. Getting ready. For the lifting of the ban. And it's going to be lifted. That's sure. If it hasn't been.

Incidentally they said Famous had 35 German pictures. For next season. Which Connick denies. Says they'll buy any good picture. Made in Germany. Or elsewhere. But it must be good. And they haven't the 35. Not yet. At least.

BOARD OF REVIEW
Keep an eye open. And an ear. And you'll hear something. Real soon. Regarding the National Board of Review. And another Board. And maybe you'll wonder.

Yep. This is a funny business.

STIRRING THE WATERS
Much, much talk. Over the report regarding Paul Brunet. That he may retire from Pathé. Hope not. Fine gentleman. Need more like him. In this business. It's the old story. You can't understand a business. When you're three thousand miles away. No matter what the profits are.

DANNY.

Rogers With "Big 4?"
Report is Given Credence on Coast—At Work on Last Film for Goldwyn
(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Los Angeles—Film circles are discussing the report that Will Rogers will go over to United Artists upon the expiration of his Goldwyn contract.

Rogers has started work on "The Poor Relation" under direction of Clarence Badger. This is understood, will be his last production under his Goldwyn contract.

The local office of United Artists knew nothing yesterday of the report concerning Rogers.

"Dream Street" Switched
"Dream Street" will be switched from the Central to the Town Hall on W. 43rd St., beginning Sunday night. Harry Reichenbach has been engaged by United Artists to handle exploitation for the picture.

Back to Coast Soon

"At the time we decided to start production, a director in keeping with Mr. Barrymore's requirements was not available. As a member of Barrymore film I was, of course, extremely interested and stepped in to the breach myself through the offices of Associated First National Pictures."

New Rivoli Record
Famous Players report that "Deception" last week rolled up 1,900 paid admissions more than Cecil DeMille's "Forbidden Fruit" at the Rivoli. The DeMille picture held the previous record.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellows know how you cleaned up.

Universal is overlooking no bets in its campaign on the new Priscilla Dean picture, "Reputation." The campaign is based on a group of maximums having to do with "reputation," and purposes to install a better understanding of the importance of good reputation in business and social life.

The "commandments" originally were sent out under the name Priscilla, with the explanation they formed the code which women and men should know to guard their good names. The "code" is being printed far and wide, accompanied by requests that readers send in their own thoughts on the subject of "reputation" in verse, essay or precept form, to the various newspapers.

The Rochester convention was the dupe of M. D. Crandall, Equity exploitation director. He succeeded in impressing the exhibitors that Clara Kimball Young was present in the flesh. Preceding a parade Crandall, by hanging our flags from Hayward and Seneca Hotels, gave the impression the star would lead the galaxy of stars. The marchers stopped and demanded the presence of the star, but Crandall appeared in her stead.

Paterson, N. J.—When "Every Woman's Problem," showing at the U. S. Theater recently, Al. W. Sobler of Plymouth Pictures, Inc., over a big exploitation campaign that included a private showing for the League of Woman Voters, the Business and Professional Women's Assn., and the Woman's Club; a contest in the Paterson Evening News, and what is apparently a new idea of interspersing names selected at random from the telephone book with classified advertisements in the daily newspaper, informing the person named that he or she had tickets at the box office. His work with the women got endorsements from all three organizations. Announcement of the winners of the contest was made from the stage. Prominent citizens were the judges. A large number of store windows were obtained.

Brooklyn—A fiery cross that seared on it and grew out of thin air was used effectively in the lavish prolonge produced upon the stage of the Mark Strand theater to properly introduce "Man-Woman-Marriage." The surprise effect was so unexpected and so striking, that despite the ostentation of the costumes and settings, this element of the prologue evoked applause at every performance.

The prologue was dedicated to a bacchanalian revel in the court of Constantine. The theme was the dominating power of Faith, the revel concluding with a lightning-blue flash as steel striking on steel and the illumination of a fiery cross following a burst of flame.

Managing Director Edward L. Hyman worked out the dances and electrical effects with particular attention to the mystery cross effect.

Richmond, Va.—A nautical display was obtained at very little cost for the showing of Goldwyn's "Godless Men," based upon "Ben Ames Williams'" sea story, "Black Paw," at the Isis. It proved most effective and had much to do with the big business which the photoplay did.

Most of the nautical articles used were borrowed from a seaman's store by W. R. Ferguson, Goldwyn's exploitation manager from New York. Included among them were two compasses, a toy model of a sailing ship, and a large net which was hung in the lobby. The nautical theme of the lobby was a sort of advance prologue to induce a proclivity to the drama.

Across the lobby, above the doors leading into the orchestra, was painted a twenty-four-sheet sign carrying the title of the photoplay. The newspaper advertising and billing campaigns were of the customary proportions for this theater but carried a note of distinction for the showing.

Cohn Still With Goldw (Special to WID'S DAILY) Los Angeles—J. Cohn, who has made production manager at Universal City plant, succeeding Johnson.

WID'S DAILY reported having gone over to Universal distribution manager.

Steen in Paris (Special to WID'S DAILY) Paris—E. Burton Steene, of the United Society of Graphers of New York, is heading a series of single reel juve productions for Goldwyn under contract with 10 different countries.

Asks for Commission

Instead of Censor Board—W. A. Brad Says Industry Will Pay Co—Hearing in Albany

Albany, N. Y.—The delegations of motion picture men here from New York yesterday afternoon made a final effort to prevent the enactment of the Clayton-Lusk bill, for the creation of a censorship commission.

William A. Brady, proposed that the Governor veto the bill and appoint instead a commission to investigate the industry.

"We will pay the entire freight," said Brady. "The work of this commission will not cost the State a single penny and I am sure it will bring results."

"The motion picture producers already have begun to clean house and in less than two months the effect will become apparent. We expect that before next winter all pictures to which there could be any reasonable objection will be eliminated."

Harlem Theater Sold

The one and two story theater, occupying the block front, east side of 9th Ave., between 144th and 145th streets, has been sold by Saenger-Amusement to Pathe Realty Co., subject to a mortgage of $103,720. The purchasers will pay $75,000 in cash and mortgages.

House Five East Side

Plans have been filed for a one story theater at 158 to 162 Eldridge St. to Allen St., $3,6 x 176. The Delancy Theater Co., Inc., is the owner of record and H. G. Wiseman, the architect, estimating the cost at $100,000.

A Correction

In yesterday's issue of this publication an item appeared in which it was erroneously stated that C. F. Zittel, formerly general manager of the International Film Service Co., Inc., had been sued by Wm. R. Hearst, charging fraud in connection with the purchase of the Dexter Sulphite and Paper Co. of Watertown, N. Y. In justice to Mr. Zittel it should be stated that he is not a party to the suit. Mr. Zittel says that to the best of his information, that Hearst has made no charges against him personally.

Hearst has filed an answer to the suit of the Dexter company in which he charges fraud was perpetuated in the deal by which he agreed to purchase the mills.

Newspaper Opinions

"Hush"—Equity Capitol

TRIBUTE—Clara Kimball Young does some good work in "Hush" at Capitol. However, she is more animated in this picture than in any of her recent films, and only once does she pose in a window, which used to be her favorite posing place.

DAILY NEWS—It's a pitifully sort of yarn about a woman who minds over her past early and often until she feels impelled to tell her husband all about it. With the usual result. And the usual sufferings and repentations. I think that this, and Clara Kimball Young's part in it, represents an unmissioned scene's notion of catering to the sensation loving mob.

EVENING WORLD—It proved to be an excellent vehicle for the undoubted histrionic talents of Miss Young. The plot was thin—very thin, but Miss Kimball's romanticized role was played by Mike Kyss, Holly Williams, Jack Platt and Bertram Granby.

The Traveling Salesman—F. P.-L. Rialto

POST—It is of a size, artistically speaking, with the other recent performances of this star, accomplished, occasionally deft, and tuneful, but very often of any considerable height as it never falls below mediocrity.

EVENING WORLD—An amiable comedian, mountain of fun in "Traveling Salesman.

"Peck's Bad Boy"—Lesser Prod. Strand

POST—That is one of the best things he does, that scintillating, twinkling dash for safety, cutting corners wide, and Sam Wood, the director of this picture, has made excellent use of this little star's legs. As to the other tricks they have set him to performing, it is a wonder that any child of his years could keep them from being unbearably self-conscious.

DAILY NEWS—A very clever and decidedly appealing youngster, he marched from co-star with C. Chaplin in "The Kid" to the full stature of movie importance in this story. But he is, after all, a baby child and an entire film devoted to his go-getting feats falls just a bit after it has run on and on for reels.

In the Courts

Hutchison to Work Here

Charles Hutchison will make his next appearance on the Pathe serial schedule in "Hurricane Hutch."

George B. Seitz will direct the new Hutchinson attraction. Interiors filmed at the Seitz studio, Park Ave. and 134th St.

Rialto

The Rialto orchestra plays "Zampa" as its prelude, a scene of the scene, is the second scene after the introduction of the bill which will place a 1% tax on theater admissions, in order to raise funds for rural schools.

Miss Putnam states she has been advised by the attorney general of the state that such a measure would not be constitutional. The present tax on theaters is $25 per year.

Asks for Commission
A petition was presented by Paul D. Cravath, representing investors in motion picture properties, signed by virtually all the big producers in the country. It urges the veto of the censorship bill and asks the Governor "to declare an amnesty" in the war on the film industry.

The picture interests promise to abide by any recommendation for legislation made to the legislature by the commission they seek to have the Governor create.
The Governor after the hearing gave no indication as to what his decision would be.

The representatives of the various companies and organizations who came here for the hearing left for New York late last night.

To Be Tried Out. With. "Dream Street"—Film Made With Development in Mind

When "Dream Street" opens at the Town Hall on Monday next. D. W. Griffith will try out a development in talking pictures. The invention that has apparently perfected this experiment is the work of Orlando Kelson of San Francisco, applied by Bryan Battey of New York.

Griffith has been in close contact with this mechanism for over a year. During that period he has watched its development through various stages. "Dream Street" was so arranged in the making that it could readily be adapted to the invention.

It was stated yesterday that there had been sufficient time to adapt the mechanism for all the characters appearing in the picture and that for the present, Tyrone Power and Ralph Graves will speak from the screen. The mechanism was tried out yesterday afternoon at 203 W. 40th St.

Ford Leaves F. P. L.

His Last Picture Was "Price of Possession"—May Make Some Under Special Arrangement (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Hugh Ford has left the Famous Players-Lasky organization. His last picture was "The Price of Possession" in which Ethel Clayton was starred.

It is understood from reliable sources that while Ford will not make productions for Paramount under a regular contract basis, if it secures a story sufficiently strong and one that meets with the approval of the Famous Players production heads, the company will finance him.

No statement regarding Mr. Ford or his plans could be secured from the eastern production department of Famous Players yesterday.

Laurent L. L. Couran of the French producing firm of Litz, Morat and Pierre Regnier Films Co., Paris, France, has two pictures with him. They are "Five Cursed Gentlemen" and "The Little Diplomat." Mr. Couran, who has been here some weeks, is at the Waldorf Astoria.

More Deals Pending

Arliss—United Artists Arrangement the Forerunner of Several Other Moves—Nothing Definite Stated

That United Artists, within the next few weeks will finally announce the consummation of several new deals which will give that organization considerably more product is the information reaching WID'S DAILY from thoroughly reliable sources.

It would not prove surprising if at least three new series of productions were added to the present schedule. Officials of United Artists are non-committal on the subject.

Following the announcement yesterday that the George Arliss pictures would be distributed through United Artists, there was speculation as to just what additional product the "Big" releasing company would handle. It will be recalled that coast reports, published in these columns within the last week mentioned the names of Nat Pendleton and Will Rogers, as being linked up with United Artists. The latter offers, upon each occasion, however, claimed to know nothing of any such deals.

To Use Two Studios (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Douglas Fairbanks will use the studios for the production of "The Three Musketeers." This has been found necessary because of the size and number of sets which Director Fred Niblo will use.

Astor Showing for "Reputation" Universal will give a special showing of Friscella Dean's latest picture "Reputation" in the grand ball-room of the Astor hotel on Monday at 2:30.

Deal Now Closed

Associated First National officially announced yesterday the closing of the deal for the distribution of "Peck's Bad Boy." The picture will be released by Associated. That the circuit would handle it was indicated last week in these columns.

Davis Heads Unit

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

San Francisco—George H. Davis, formerly of the Alcazar Theater and owner of "Isobel, or the Trail's End," is president of Quality Film Prod. Inc., a newly formed company which will make a series of productions for touring Roy Stewart. Local business men are understood to be associated with Davis in the company. Harry J. Revier will direct and Dal Clawson will be chief cameraman.

Graphic Presentation Corp. Formed

Albany, N. Y.—The Graphic Presentation Corp. of New York has been formed here with a capitalization of $10,000. The incorporators are J. Walsten Chubb, Carl W. Painter and Irving Reynolds. Cravath and Henderson, 52 Williams St., New York, are the attorneys.

The office of Cravath and Henderson yesterday refused to divulge any information relative to the new company.

Involved in the Courts Again

(Los Angeles—Bebe Daniels is made defendant in a civil action brought against her by Neil McCarthy, attorney on behalf of Mrs. Florence Mehra, who is suing for 10% of Miss Daniels' salary under the present contract. It is alleged that Mrs. Mechan acted as Miss Daniels' agent and was instrumental in closing the Realert contract. McCarthy claims his client is due $2,175 to date. The Daniels contract is said to run for three more years.)

In the Courts

A jury before Justice Ford in the Supreme Court has returned a verdict of $5,050 in favor of Miss Daniels against Gilbert M. Anderson and L. Lawrence Weber. Miss Daniels sued on a contract she signed for 32 weeks, in 1916, at $1,250 a week and a percentage of the net receipts of pictures in which she appeared. She alleged only one picture was produced and Anderson then dispensed with her services.

In a new action filed in the Supreme Court by Harry Revery against the National Film Corp., David P. Howells, Inc., and Harry M. Rubey, president of National Film, he has obtained a temporary injunction restraining Howells and his corporation from making any payments to Rubey from "The Son of Tarzan." Ralph Dittenhofer has filed an application in the Supreme Court to enter a judgment for $1,700 against the Victor Kremmer Film Features and Kremmer individually. He says that the sum is due on a note for $3,000 and that he has the right to enter judgment if the Kremmer Company did not pay it off in installments.

now awaits his signature to become a law. Judge J. A. Jenkins' brief will be filed on Tuesday and it is expected no definite stand will be announced by the Governor until the end of next week at least.

Dispatches to the morning papers from Albany yesterday differed as to the final disposition of the bill.

The Herald stated: "It is regarded as almost certain the Governor will sign the bill." The American said: "Despite the arguments of the motion picture men, it is predicted that Governor Miller will sign the Lush bill."

The World stated: "The Governor, although insistent the moves shall be begun, has all decide to accept the proposal of the silent drama creators."

While in Albany the champions of the industry took heart from a remark Governor Miller made when he said: "Censorship in itself is to my mind a thing to be avoided unless some greater evil results from its avoidance."

H. D. H. Connick, chairman of the finance committee of Famous Players-Lasky, was variously quoted in several papers. According to the World he said in part: "Our company today has plans for the biggest theater in the world. It will be a thirty-story building, costing $8,000,000, to be located on Broadway."

He later stated that Famous Players controlled more than 400 theaters in the United States and Canada and that the company had about 3,000 stockholders. He added Loew's, Inc., had about 9,000 and Goldwyn 3,000.

All whose holdings were threatened by the proposed censorship bill. He stated that the amount of money invested in the business was $1,250,000,000.

The American quoted him in part, as follows: "An estimate has been made that on the day this bill goes into effect the famous Players will walk over to whoever the proper person is and they will pay down $75,000. Simply because in the past, instead of distributing their profits in the shape of dividends and dividing the swag among us, we put it back into the company and accumulated a large inventory. In other words, we are penalized because we have run our business along sound business lines."

"The other film people who don't happen to be so firmly fixed financially will go into the hands of a judge Jenkins' hand on account of that one clause."

Kunze, treasurer, and W. A. Thimmes, secretary. For the present the company will continue at 3618 Olive St.

This From Ralph Block
Ralph Block, scenario editor of Goldwyn stated yesterday that his company had not purchased "The Deluge," which was produced by Arthur Hopkins in 1917 but a Swedish play called "Syndaboden" (The Sin Flood), from which Hopkins made an adaptation.

The Goldwyn publicity offices originally stated that "The Deluge" had been purchased.

New York, Del.—The Corporation of America, as attorneys, just brought into the incorporation of Ascher Theaters Corp., formed primarily to facilitate inter-company affairs of the various theater operations controlled and operated by Ascher Bros., is understood that the large capitalization of the corporation will not be an expansion of theater holdings but an expansion of theater holdings rather than a program of policy would call for. Four New Censorship Measures Rejected—Marks Activity Since January 1

Thirty states have rejected censorship measures since Jan. 1, it was announced yesterday by the National Association. This, in connection with the defeat of bills in four states: Michigan, Wisconsin, Rhode Island and, as noted, Ohio.

In Michigan, there was a strong fight over the bill. The senate refused to take up the measure and in that manner, it was defeated.

In Wisconsin, the bill was under discussion by a senate committee which decided not to report it.

In Rhode Island, the measure never left the committee and with the adjournment of the legislature, hope of its passage was lost.

In Ohio, as noted yesterday, the McCoy Bill was held up in the senate and the House.

The following wire was received yesterday from A. J. Moeller, of the Michigan M. P. Exhibitors Association:

"We win, following bitter two hour fight. The senate voted 20 to 9 to refuse to take censorship bill from the state affairs committee. Senator Tufts, chairman refused to report the bill out. Senator Wood stated 45,000 petitions were presented in one day against the measure."

Times Opposed to Bill—Comments on Albany Situation—Brooklyn Eagle Takes Slam

The Brooklyn Eagle editorial yesterday stated that if the Clayton-Lusk bill were to become a law, "it will make the movies worse instead of better."
The editorial in full follows:

"The motion picture men have managed the question of better censorship badly as possible. They have treated the bill as no more than an attack on an industry, which it is. What gives the affair a public interest is the profession investigating to an art. The art is rudimentary as yet, the industry is enormous; that is the fact, but the movieland must be able to own the motion pictures. But the art will suffer, and it will suffer public relations in the same measure as the Government signs the censorship bill."

"The magnates have created the impression of being willing to promise anything for the right to own their product. But the charges of the professional reformers have admitted most of the weaknesses of the press. The bill does not control the film; it simply grants to the public agencies to be taken seriously. None the less, the bill is a small beginning in the right direction.

"For we cannot do for more than the suppression of indecency. For the suppression of the rather limited amount of indecency is not a matter more than other agencies already at work, and the great faults of stupidity, insensibility and falling back upon social methods instead of dealing with the real problem."

"We do not do for more than the suppression of indecency. For the suppression of the rather limited amount of indecency is not a matter for other agencies already at work, and the great faults of stupidity, insensibility and falling back upon social methods instead of dealing with the real problem.

"It may be hoped that the Governor will consider the recommendation of Joseph D. Folks, a learned member of the bar, at least one sound and sensible solution of the problem. Nichols, previously employed by Washburn, as his personal representative is no longer associated with him.

Carl Laemmle Favours Importation of Foreign Films—Not Afraid of Competition

"United States has nothing to fear from an importation of German films," said Carl Laemmle, of Universal, yesterday in discussing the demand for tariff against German films coming into this country. "In fact, I am of the opinion that America should welcome the best films not from Germany but the superior of any nationality, and I have been in a position where I could see at first-hand productions made in every large producing center outside of the United States."

"But I am strongly of the opinion that the United States should immediately make every endeavor to have the barrier which Germany has raised against our films removed. Foreign countries have every right to make their own films."

"I have been in a position where I could see at first-hand productions made in every large producing center outside of the United States."

In the News

Harry Shiffman got a verid the City Court against the A. E. Dress Co. for $1,669 under an arrangement by which he was to receive a chair for chairs sold the N. R. Railo Theatre Co.

James P. Cameron, who closed the Theatrical Supply Co., deal film theater paraphernalia at 124th St., has been arrested for $1,000 bail in a suit by Victor Nast, who bought a half interest in the business for $2,000, to recover $10,000 damages for alleged fraud.

Nast said in his complaint that Cameron represented the business made a net profit of $1,300 a month, that the stock of film equipment was worth $10,000, the defendant owned certain rights free of all liens, and that of $8,000 additional, and that the balances were only $1,000. Nast alleges that the statements were false, that the value of the stock on only $600, that Cameron had no assets, that he had sold his interests and the business did not profit.

Issac Wolper has been sued in Supreme Court by William Douglas for $4,850. He alleges that Wolper promised in consideration of his services in having a contract cuted between 'Wolper' and Sullivan and Messmore Kenda, the Capitol Theater, to pay him. He alleges that the contract has been executed but he has not only $150.

An indication that the Stoll Corp. of America is selling its creditors was shown in the Supreme Court when on the application of the Stoll Corp., for a declaration of the creditors, and with the consent of their collateral for the Nicholas K. Laboratories was discontinued at the request of the Stoll Corp., vacated.

In connection with the showing of “The Queen of Sheba,” now playing at the Astor, Fox is advertising yesterday called attention to the fact that the company did not fear German competition. The copy said in part:

“Many protests have been made recently against the so-called flood of German moving pictures which threatens to inundate the American film industry.

“We are told that these pictures, made in Germany at a cost far less than they would have cost in America, will seriously compete with American-made pictures.

“Many Americans in the moving picture world are getting excited and are talking of protests. They say such German pictures will ruin the American film industry.

“But—

“WE DON’T CARE.

“Perhaps some people are worrying over the German pictures. The Fox Film Corporation does not fear this foreign competition.”

W. K. Ziegfeld has just seen through George N. Bohm for next production the rights to a story which recently appeared in magazine serial.

Schenck Against 'Em

Says German Films Should Be Kept Out—Gives Three Reasons for His Stand

Joseph M. Schenck takes a very firm stand on the question of the importation of German films into America, and allies himself with those who believe in making every effort to abolish German-made pictures. He says, in part:

"I have three reasons for my decided prejudice against German pictures. First of all, an influx of such films in the United States would be harmful to American industry and the public welfare. Secondly, the importation of German films would be a violation of international agreements. Thirdly, it would be unpatriotic to support the British censors, who are doing their best to suppress all forms of decadence and vice." (Continued on Page 2)

Advances Evening World Regarding Censorship—What the Globe Thinks

The Evening World editorially urges Governor Miller to grant the years' grace asked by film interests, and advises a veto on the Clayton-Lusk bill. The editorial says:

"After a campaign to clean up the movies, in which exposures by The World may revive "The Birth." The Griffith offices are considering the advisability of reviving "The Birth of a Nation," which opens at the Capitol tomorrow. If it is decided to launch the picture again, it will not be before fall. It is understood that the Capitol showing will have considerable influence on the final decision regarding the plans for the production. At the Capitol it was stated yesterday the engagement of "The Birth" may cover two weeks instead of one.

Grey Sails Today

Albert L. Grey, general manager of D. W. Griffith, Inc., sails today for Europe on the Celtic. He will be gone about six weeks.

Now It's 31

The National Association was advised yesterday by the Allied Amusement Industries of California that all adverse legislation in that state had been killed. There were three censorship bills pending, one regarding Sunday closing, one building bill and one designed to prevent the sale of tickets when all available seats were sold. The latter would have practically killed business at night. The wire stated that the Allied Amusement Industries intended renewing their drive for a state-wide organization which was interrupted by the introduction of these various bills. This marks the defeat of such legislation in 31 states since Jan. 1.
Schenck Against 'Em
throw thousands of our own pictures in the line from German property men, stenographers, bookkeepers, secretaries, and executives connected with film companies out of business. This makes it absolutely impossible for the American producers to compete with the German producers.

The second reason for not favoring the German picture is because of the present restriction on the importation of American-made pictures into Germany. The German Government has placed an embargo on our films, and by the law now enforced it will be recalled that the number of American pictures imported into Germany is limited to about 5%.

"My third reason for being opposed to German-made pictures is becoming prevalent in this country is because the men who produce these pictures, the men who write and adapt them, the people who work in and around the hundreds of employees, who, in various ways, contribute to their success, are not the ones who reap the benefits and the profits. The fact which is made in Germany for about $30,000 can total a profit of $400,000 over here, and to who does this huge profit go? Some shrewd American who has had nothing to do with originally conceiving or presenting the idea, who finds it easier to capitalize on men's brains, than his own."

The May 2nd issue of Loew's Weekly, which is distributed to thousands of patrons of the Loew houses all over the country, carries an editorial, headed "Invasion of Foreign Films," which in part says:

"At the present moment the greatest danger to American film labor comes through the gradually increasing plans of the producers to make pictures abroad, with American stars, directors and cast. These plans have aroused great concern among American companies. Famous Players made several pictures in England and India. Pathe made three in France and a number in Italy, and this year the British are making films all over the field in Germany. The rate of money exchange, which makes the American dollar worth so much abroad, especially in Germany, and the fact that foreign actors and studio help can be hired so cheaply, makes it possible for pictures to make it in Europe for far less than it costs here."

That is the real danger at present, but will not be a lasting one. Eventually the rate of exchange will stabilize itself, which will take away the enchantment of making cheap films abroad. In the meantime foreign producers are demanding such tremendous prices for their product, due to the success of previous pictures, that Americans find it advisable to make their own here."

Evening World played an important part, the Legislature passed a censorship bill.

“Censorship would put a heavy burden on the industry. But if Gov.
ment officials and the film producers agree to a voluntary code, the exhibitors will not deserve a particle of sympathy. Their punishment will not be out of proportion to their impartiality.”

Nevertheless, speaking for the public and not for the motion-picture industry, The Evening World bethought that Gov. Miller will veto the bill. A censorship is odious in itself. A censorship is usually administered with a complete lack of common sense and judgment. The expense of the censorship eventually will be passed on to the public in admission fees.

There seems reason to believe that the motion pictures industry has learned its lesson and that responsible leaders will exert effective pressure to eliminate the proposed measure. That would be far better than censorship.

“A year of delay will give the exhibitors time to clean up their own house and demonstrate that a censorship is unnecessary. If the movies cannot police themselves in that time there will be no good argument for censorship even more drastic than the present bill.”

“We hope Gov. Miller will take this view and veto the present bill.”

The Globe calls the films “an instrument of terrific power...”

The editorial says, in part, “What is the (the motion picture) is...”

The trouble is that the idea of a near relative of folk lore. Like the folk stories it depends for its appeal upon the simple form, upon “(vestige” of the old primitive stories from which folk lore are derived), and upon the fact that motion pictures are produced for profit by people who do not know how to keep the stream of folk tradi-down. The tendency of the film drama develops into an art, will be for it to express more and more intimately the elementary popular interest, and along this line a true, although it is a very simple art is entirely possible.

“The outstanding fact about motion pictures at present is that they are an instrument of terrific power...”

The Indians arrived in New York yesterday and registered at the Commodore. They bear some great names (suspicions here points to Peter Smith.)

If Jackie Coogan can keep up the precedent set by "The Kid" and now followed by "Peck's Bad Boy," there's no good reason why he should worry about the high cost of living. He shared honors with Charlie in "The Kid," but in "Peck's Bad Boy" he's THE star and rightly so. Of course one has arranged the story and another has directed the picture and Jackie too, but they couldn't put expressions on his little face, and even by persistent prompting succeeded in securing the results that they have, if the Kid wasn't born with an inherent talent for comedy. There isn't an awful lot to the story of "Peck's Bad Boy." It is just a series of incidents in the life of a mischievous youngster who just couldn't be good. But they are sufficiently important to hold the interest from first to last and when you read "The End" it seems all too short. The audience at the Strand laughed the loudest at the incident of the ants. Jackie's father is troubled with rheumatism. While he is dressing to go to church he asks Jackie to bring in a sort of pad which he wears for relief. Jackie fills the pad with ants and while in church anxiously waits results. This bit actually make you itchy when you see the father beginning to feel uncomfortable.

Other good moments are Jackie's attempt to blackmail his father to get money for the circus; his eating in the grocery store and the subsequent dose of castor oil; the rescuing of his dog from the dog-catcher. These are only a few of the laughs. A dog that the star calls "Tar Baby" has caught some of the comedy sense from Jackie. The dog contributes no small share of the fun.

There is a good thrill in the last reel when Jackie, in an effort to escape the long promised punishment from his Dad, hops aboard a hand car and speeds off in the direction of an approaching train. A young doctor in love with Jackie's sister is almost arrested for stealing some important papers which the boy has slipped into his pocket. The doctor follows Jackie on another hand-car and snatches the boy and the dog off the car and jumps to safety just as the engine crashes into the hand-car. It does seem that they might have made it more realistic by allowing the irate father to put the shoe to his bad boy but of course there are mothers like the one in the picture, who refuse to allow their "lamb" to be touched. The titles are splendid. Irvin S. Cobb wrote them.

Will Keep the S. R. O. Sign Busy

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Peck's Bad Boy" ought certainly to prove a money-maker and, judging from the crowd that tried to get into the Strand on the first day's showing, it would appear that Jackie is running his former co-star a close second in popularity. If you played "The Kid" you should merely have to announce Jackie's name to get them interested in "Peck's Bad Boy," and if you have as enthusiastic a crowd as they are in New York you will keep displaying the S. R. O. sign.

Regardless of the favor with which the boy star was received in "The Kid," his own picture shows what he can do by himself and you may be certain to promise them he does it well. The picture is a real box office bet and if you don't make money it's your fault.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Traveling salesman falls in love with station agent’s daughter and saves her property

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..............4,514 feet

Here’s a case of another good stage play “gone wrong.” “The Traveling Salesman” as a play was a popular hit, but it falls short of being a successful screen comedy and doesn’t give the Paramount comedian much chance to get over his usual line of laughs. True, there are a few big ones, especially in the poker game, but they come too few and far between to hold over. Long stretches roll along without a laugh at all, out a laugh at all.

Perhaps if “Fatty” hadn’t turned out such good ones as “Brewster’s Millions” and “The Dollar a Year Man,” his last two pictures, this one wouldn’t seem so lacking in mirth. But after them “The Traveling Salesman” is weak entertainment. It doesn’t give the star enough to do. James Forbes’ story doesn’t contain good screen material in the first place and as it appears here consists of incidents loosely strung together and they are of real old “movie” formula—the heroine who owns property which the villain is planning to relieve her of and a jealous suitor, in on the scheme, and finally the salesman hero who comes to the rescue.

Director Henabery didn’t have much to work with, but he might have made more of what comedy possibilities that did present themselves. They could have pulled some “rube” stuff in the country hotel besides drawing “hootch” from the gas pipe and serving it in tea cups. The title writer got an inning in the opening shot and tells some jokes, one about a girl being attractive at twenty, attentive at thirty and adhesive at forty.

Bob Blake (“Fatty), salesman for ladies’ clothes, is the victim of practical jokers and he gets off the train before it arrives at his destination, Grand River. Bob is drenched in the pouring rain and when he can’t find a lodging, breaks into an untenant private house which the sheriff is going to sell for the taxes. It belongs to Beth, the telegraph operator at Grand River Station. Bob looks her up to pay for his lodging, and falls in love with her as well. Royce, also in love with Beth, is jealous of the salesman and accepts the proposition of Drury, a skinflint, to do Beth out of the proceeds of the sale. The deal isn’t made very clear, but anyway hero “Fatty” saves the house and wins the girl.

Should Go Over Well Enough With Folks Who Like Star

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Arbuckle’s latest won’t hand them the laughs that some of his previous features have, but if they like the fat comedian well enough they’ll probably be satisfied with “The Traveling Salesman.” The title is a good one and should have a good drawing power. In view of the usual line of jokes told in connection with this familiar personage, the title ought to get them interested without further explanation.

You can tell them it is an adaptation of the stage play. Use stills for your lobby decoration and if you are entitled to local newspaper space, the Paramount press sheet contains adequate advance stories. Catchlines can be used to good advantage also. Say: “Ever know a traveling salesman who wouldn’t flirt? Here’s one who wouldn’t—so he thought, but watch him when he meets the right girl. ‘Fatty’ Arbuckle is at the blank theater.”
"—and when you find THE WOMAN with that mark on her shoulder you will know that you have got THE ONE THAT— — — — —"

CHARACTER OF STORY ........ Happily married wife loses husband's love when she confesses something of her past life

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..... About 6,000 feet

Clara Kimball Young's latest production to reach Broadway contains a direct warning and then gives a six-reel reason why wives should not tell their husbands too much that isn't good for them to know. Other than the message it carries, "Hush" doesn't fulfill any further mission. It is too unconvincing and actually lacks the strength of its own convictions.

The basis of the plot is meagre and certainly not substantial enough for the amount of footage accorded it.

At least the director is to be congratulated upon the fact that he hasn't taken as long to reunite the couple as he does to part them. There is considerable satisfaction in this.

Miss Young is adequate in the role of the conscientious wife who kept her secret a year but then tells her husband. But the star has had much better roles than this which doesn't ask her to do any unusual acting. J. Frank Glendon as the husband is very convincing either of his own accord or because the director called for it, but his indifference is peculiar to say the least. His actions aren't quite human. It would seem more probable that he'd either turn his wife out or accept the situation, but he does neither.

The production accorded the feature is all that is required. Settings and effects are all good and the photography first rate. The camera work is generally good with the exception of some badly judged shots. All the titles are too long.

Vera and Jack Stanford are married just one year when Vera's conscience begins to bother her and she threatens to tell Jack of an affair in her early life with one Herbert Brooks. Isabel Dane, her friend, a "girl who can pal with a man, smoke with a man, and still be nothing more than a chum," warns Vera against telling her husband, but Vera goes right ahead, and although Jack says he can forgive anything in the world, his attitude towards his wife changes and eventually Vera leaves the house and lives with Isabel.

Jack is under the impression that the man in the case is his friend Graham and that Vera has gone to him. Isabel plays Cupid and brings about the reunion of her two friends.

Should Go Best With Women

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This isn't very strong drama and even though it isn't really convincing it might be a good idea for too talkative wives to see it. Those who like Clara Kimball Young will probably accept "Hush" favorably. The picture has been offered throughout the country for some time prior to its showing in New York, so it is quite likely that some exhibitors have either played or booked it. Should do well with audiences especially of largely feminine kind.

If the production is properly handled it ought to go over. Plenty of exploitation angles suggest themselves in connection with the titles, and catchlines could read: "What your husband doesn't know won't worry him. Don't tell him too much is the warning in 'Hush,' Clara Kimball Young's latest production."

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 6,000 feet

William Farnum’s latest Fox offering is a human interest story that compels a good deal of sympathy for the hero, but it is carried to extremes and the feature is so long that it almost becomes tedious. Toward the close, coincidence is allowed too prominent a position, which in a way detracts from the sympathy previously established. After the story reaches a certain point it is obvious what the ending will be, but they keep delaying it.

The director has done pretty well with the piece when you consider its lack of originality and that it is fundamentally of the most familiar formula of drama. He has secured a fine sympathy through the devotion of the father for his child. The story is smoothly unfolded with perhaps just one exception. They stress a point in the signing of the singer’s contract in which you are led to think that her manager and agent are about to “double-cross” her, but nothing happens. Again, later in the story the mother completely drops out of the picture. This is thoroughly plausible, but seems to leave things unfinished. The actual production is all the story requires and consists mainly of the regulation studio sets.

The star has a good dramatic role and he is usually convincing, but occasionally he acts with over-deliberation. Wonder when he will stop blacking his eyes so? It looks very poorly on the screen. Alice Fleming makes a good deal of the faithless wife and Evelyn Greely plays well in a short emotional sequence.

"HIS GREATEST SACRIFICE"

Picture patrons who like the star's work will be pleased with his latest picture and to the average audience it will probably give fair satisfaction. It seems a bit too long, especially toward the end, and would be greatly improved if it could be cut. This may be difficult. If it could be worked the unnecessary arrest of the hero at the close could well be eliminated.

Play up the title in connection with Farnum's name. You can also use J. Gordon Edward's name. But he has done so many better things that perhaps it might be just as well if you didn't. Recall the star's last picture, "The Scutlers," if you showed it. Catchlines might attract. You could use "The glamor of a career blinded her to love and duty." Or, "She chose between her husband and an operatic career. See which she selected and what 'His Greatest Sacrifice' was."

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 4,405 feet

With a very pretty story of the old South for a background, Gladys Walton should not have much trouble in providing a goodly amount of pleasant entertainment for the average picture patron with "Desperate Youth." The story, by F. Hopkinson Smith, starts off as though it were going to be a regulation Western thriller, but after the first reel of prelimi-aries, it develops into a sweet Southern romance of the days following the Civil War. There isn't a great deal of action after the first reel, wherein the heroine's father is killed defending his claim in the West, but it is a delightful story, and it gives the star a part in which to look very attractive and charming in old fashioned dresses, and in which she appears at her best.

The most notable thing about the production, and what will immediately catch the attention of the observant spectator, is the fine southern atmosphere contributed by all the settings used in the latter part of the picture. The old Southern home is the real thing both inside and out, and the attention to detail and correctness of fittings throughout is noticeable.

If they pickaninnies are there, true to life, and not a small part of the enjoyment is furnished by an old "Mammy."

Besides a highly satisfactory performance by the star, there is J. Farrell McDonald, who makes a lot of the character of old "Mendocino Bill," and Louis Willoughby, who plays "Alabam" Merridew, and also his brother, Henry Merridew, the Southern gentleman, with intelligence and dignity. The whole piece is very well cast, and there isn't much fault to be found with anyone's work. Harold Miller, the hero, doesn't make his appearance until late, and hasn't really a big enough part for a leading man.

"Alabam" Merridew and Mendocino Bill, partners on a Western claim, catch Sam Billenc jumping their claim. "Alabam" is shot in the fight that ensues, and Mendocino sends his daughter, Rosemary, back to
"Dixie" to live with "Alabam's" brother.

There she is abused by Merridew's second wife and his step-daughter, who keep her hidden so that the step-daughter may have plain sailing with the season's "catch," Tom Dowling. Tom, however, sees Rosemary, falls in love with her, and she with him. Mendocino, learning that Rosemary is unhappy arrives to straighten things out, just in time to find that things have straightened themselves out, and Tom's and Rosemary's love has triumphed over all the deep laid plots of the step-daughter and her mother. Rosemary wakens on her wedding morn to find her room full of presents from Mendocino who has struck it rich.

If They Like a Pretty Love Story They'll Like This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Desperate Youth" to a certain extent beies its title, in that there is never anything very desperate, as the word usually means, about any of the action of this picture. It is however, a very pleasing little story, with the love theme all worked out in a romantic Southern atmosphere. The best course to pursue, is to appeal to those who enjoy this sort of a "peaceable" entertainment. Talk about the splendid Southern atmosphere that runs all through. If the star is popular with your patrons, of course play her up above any other feature. You can promise her admirers that she has a part in which she is at her best. Tell enough of the story in connection with the scheming women who abuse the heroine to create curiosity as to how she finally "beat them to it." It won't do to play up the title too loudly, as it is likely to be misleading.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ... 4,684 feet

Evidently Goldwyn was so well pleased with "Hold Your Horses" that they decided another story along the same lines for Tom Moore would be appropriate and so they have taken William Hurlbut's story, "Made in Heaven," which gives Moore a role somewhat similar to that of Daniel Canavan, the whitewing of "Hold Your Horses." The present picture, like the former, is rich in titles which make up practically half of the comedy business. They seemed to get more laughs at the Capitol than the actual business.

"Made in Heaven" does not contain so many humorous situations, but the star and his Irish smile holds the attention all the time. The supporting cast including Rene Adoree, Helene Chadwick and Charles Eldridge, is well selected and they all do good work. The direction is very good and particularly in small matters which of themselves don't mean a lot but add to the feature's enjoyment. Director Schertzinger has done very well. Scenes taken from the ship coming into New York harbor are effective and later when the Irish immigrants are established in their East Side quarters.

There is a realistic fire with hero Tom saving an heiress' life. After the rescue he continues to wear the uniform, but as far as the audience is concerned he doesn't appear to be working at his "profession." The director might have used an occasional scene with Tom in the firehouse.

Tom brings his father and sister to this country. He joins the fire department. He isn't long on the "force" before he makes a thrilling rescue, saving the life of an heiress. It develops that the heiress is being forced into a marriage against her wishes. One day she meets Tom in the park and confides her troubles to him (contrary to the adage, "tell your troubles to a policeman"—she tells them to the fireman). Hero Tom agrees to save her by marrying her himself and agreeing never to see her after the ceremony.

Complications occur in which the heiress' sister marries the unwelcome suitor and leaving the other sister with a fireman-husband on her hands. Of course Tom meets his "wife" again and eventually he makes some money through an invention and builds a pretty home, where he takes his "wife," but suggests that they be married first, explaining that the first marriage didn't "take" and that it wasn't real.

Clean Humor that Should Please Everyone

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors should be able to satisfy them with this if their patrons like clean, light comedy pictures. And particularly if they like the star and saw him in "Hold Your Horses," you should please them with this. If you played "Hold Your Horses" you might mention that "Made in Heaven" is somewhat similar and you can promise them some real laughs. You might make known the story by catchlines such as: "Being an Irish immigrant and a fireman didn't stop this hero from proposing to an heiress. See the results in Tom Moore's latest Goldwyn production."

The title probably has drawing power. Use it in connection with explanatory lines such as: "They say marriages are explanatory lines such as: "They say marriages are 'Made in Heaven,' but was this one? See how it happens in Tom Moore's picture at the blank theater."

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 5,070 feet

Max Linder, French comedian, makes his first appearance since the war, in a five reel comedy feature which is thoroughly amusing and provides really good entertainment. "Seven Years Bad Luck" has many new fun-making tricks and some old ones that look new and get the laughs just the same. Linder has written and directed the piece in a way that displays a keen sense of comedy value and he doesn't resort to slap-stick business to make it a riot.

With the exception of a short sequence in which another man appears with the star impersonating him, Linder is the center of the comedy and in the first reel when he returns to his home very much "under the weather," he gets the audience's attention right off by mistaking a window for a clothes closet, throwing his coat and hat in, as he thinks, but actually out. The episode of the broken mirror is one of the best things in the picture. Max's servants break a cheval glass. In order that Max won't discover that the mirror is missing, one of the servants gets in back of the frame and acts as Linder's reflection until he discovers the deception. Other bits such as his getting by the gate-man when he loses his ticket and pocketbook and the subsequent chase when the conductor searches for the "dead head," are all amusing. In one instance the conductor corners him in a porter's room on the train. The comedian dons a porter's suit but is minus the black face. A silk sock pulled over his face completes the make-up.

All this happens because Max is running away from the girl who has turned him down and returned his ring. When the train stops hero gets into the station ahead of the conductor and impersonates the station agent and incidentally saves the real agent's job for him because he should have been at work. While the conductor is making love to the agent's daughter Max gives the signal to go and hops aboard the train. Later he is chased by the policemen into a lions' cage. Max is very much at home with the animals but the cops don't dare enter for their victim. Eventually after a long chase hero is finally captured and brought to the court where he finds his former fiancee about to be married to his best friend by a Justice of the Peace. Max tells his story to the judge. The friend is arrested and the sweetheart forgives Max. The last shot shows seven little Linders in frock coats and silk hats.

Should Please Everyone Who Likes Real Laugh Makers

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You ought to be able to do pretty good business with "Seven Years Bad Luck" if your folks like good clean comedy that keeps them laughing all the time. Perhaps your patrons have forgotten the French comedian but recall his name and in case you played his last picture, "The Little Cafe," you might mention that. You can make promises for the fun it will provide and to get them interested any newspaper space which is at your disposal could be used to mention some of the biggest laugh getters. Stills in the lobby should attract attention also.

Play up the title with catchlines such as "Do you believe in the superstition of the broken mirror? Max Linder has good reason to believe it's 'Seven Years Bad Luck.'" Or, "There's more ways than one of regaining a girl's affections even if you are handicapped by 'Seven Years Bad Luck.' See how Max Linder does it in his latest comedy feature, a Robertson-Cole release."
A Bit of Comedy Relieves Rather Unhappy Story

“LAVENDER AND OLD LACE” Hodkinson

DIRECTOR ......................... Lloyd Ingraham
AUTHOR ............................. Myrtle Reed
SCENARIO BY ...................... Lee Royal CAMERAMAN ...................... Ross Fisher

DETAIL .................. Appears adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY...... Woman waits a

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 5,770 feet

Perhaps it doesn't sound likely, but it is a fact nevertheless, that there are people who occasionally want to see a picture that is the direct opposite of a "Pollyanna" atmosphere. They like to feel the chunks in their throats and weep with the heroine. Myrtle Reed's novel has much of that sadness and it may be that the characters of Joe and Hepsey were included in the original. At any rate as they appear in the screen version they offer a thoroughly acceptable comedy relief.

Director Ingraham has retained the quaint charm of the novel in the atmosphere which he has created, and it stands out particularly in small matters of detail such as the costumes of the players and the dressing of the sets. He might, however, have improved his picture by reaching the end earlier than he does. Once Mary Ainslie learns that she has waited all her life for her lover to return it seems only natural that the breaking of the long suspense would kill her. Perhaps Mr. Ingraham was trying to avoid criticism for "killing off" his heroine too quickly, but it would have been appropriate in this instance. The heart interest throughout is quite strong.

Marguerite Snow is thoroughly pleasing in the role of Mary Ainslie. Zella Ingraham and Victor Potel handle the comedy business very well and Lillian Eli-liott makes a good deal of a minor part. Louis Bennison and Seena Owen give satisfactory performances, as does James Corrigan who appears late in the picture.

Mary Ainslie has lived all her life in a little New England village believing that some day her lover would return. Jane Hathaway, her friend since childhood, also waiting for Jimmy ball to return, tires of waiting and goes after her man. In the meantime Jane's niece Ruth visits in the town. She spends much of her time with Mary and later tells Mary of her coming marriage to Carl Winfield, a writer. Mary invites Carl to her home and recognizes in him the son of the man who deserted her. Carl's conversation confirms Mary's presumption and gradually she dies of a broken heart. Carl, whose father died when he was five, learns that Mary's lover was his own father.

Novel is Well Enough Known to Have Title Attract

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Because of the popularity which the novel attained, the picturization of Myrtle Reed's story will undoubtedly attract attention by the mere announcement of the title. Of all her books it is conceded that "Lav-den and Old Lace" was the favorite, and the title should be your best selling point. If you go in for exploitation stunts you might use the one which was used by some exhibitors in connection with a Mary Miles Minter picture called "Sweet Lavender," and that is to distribute small envelopes containing lavender.

Appeal largely to your women patrons. It is the kind best liked by women but men may call it foolish.
So stuff doesn't usually appeal to them. Catchlines can be used if you are in the habit of getting good re-results with them.
Some Short Reels

"The Cowboy Editor"—Universal
Type of production...........................................2 reel western Swapping his quirt for a typewriter, Jack Perrin in this one is the reform editor of a small town daily; the Bugle of Devil's Gap, and oh, boy, the Gap is in awful shape. It's all the fault of the father of little Miss Lorraine, who, is fortunately, Jack's Society Editor. The old man is "the man higher up,"
Of course the town's rough element attempts to prevent Jack from drinking his sarsapailla in peace and quiet, but by the strength of his good right arm he manages to stick. An as-asassin is sent; a Mexican knife thrower, who misses and gets beaten up. Then the time comes when Jack is going to print the story of the girl's father's villainy. But he doesn't. Her father reforms, gives her to him, and puts this series first position as "the man higher up." The picture is a good avertage two reeler, but the end is not plausible enough. The production is otherwise good, the cast well chosen. The action is fast. It will hold interest. It's a thorough going saddle-gun-sombrero western.

Paramount Magazine—"The Clean Up"—Famous Players
Type of production............................................1 reel animated cartoon
This Earl Hurd "Bud and Susie" cartoon is unusually funny.
The home of these black and white frymakers this time is overrun with an army of giant roaches to great speed and resourcefulness and with a variety of facial expressions heretofore unknown in the insect world. The cat and the baby share Quixote-like adventures after a googly-eyed darkey fails.
The eline goes on guard with a gag, but he is kept so busy saving he doesn't have time to shoot. All the ex-soldiers in the house will be wanting to see him get a machine gun when the baby comes on dragging a vacuum cleaner. This does the work very well.

Kineto Review No. 51—"Peculiar Pets"—Kineto Co.
Type of production............................................2 reel pictorial
This one is a succession of shots of various odd and familiar animals which have been domesticated. It shows "Pongo," a monkey, investigating a vase of flowers with an almost human expression of curiosity on his anthropoid face; a mother ferret apparently counting her young; ferrets being trained to kill snakes; Japanese "waltzing" mice; a pet fox, guinea pigs, a pony claimed to be the smallest pony in the world; shetland ponies at pasture, spotted fawns which are apparently not at all timid, and some pet kittens and dogs in amusing antics.

"The Sheriff of Mohave"—Pathé
Type of production............................................2 reel western
This is a Tom Santschi short feature, and it is characterized to a great extent by the same finished appearance, and the same capable handling of the story both by director and actors, which have made all the numbers of this series first-rate offerings from an artistic as well as an entertainment standpoint. The exterior settings are all fine westerns, the interiors are good, and the photography is better than average.
Santschi has his usual kind of part, this time that of a square dealing sheriff, who adopts the daughter of an outlaw whom he thinks dead. Later the outlaw appears, after ten years, and the sheriff is up against a problem. There is plenty of excitement in a couple of gun fights, and finally the outlaw is killed, thus solving the sheriff's problem for him. Where westerns are popular, this one will go well, and if you use short features at all, this one will be a good bet.

Kineto Review No. 7—"Morocco the Mysterious"—Kineto Co.
Type of production............................................1 reel travelogue
A strong impression of the city of Fez, Morocco, can be gotten from this interesting travelogue. Narrow alleys, broad commons struck with sunlight and roofed with vine-bearing lattices, walls and battlements—groups of veiled and shrouded humanity footling it with an odd step due to odd footwear through Saracenic archways and standing inside the mosques against a background of old arabesques and Moorish tracery; it's lauzaz with little boys running about the top of a minaret—groups in rings, squatting around some aesthetic in the public square—one who with rapt face chants the praise of Allah and discourses on the Koran—all these things are shown.

"Catching a Coon"—"Adventures of Bill and Bob"—Pathé
Type of production............................................1 reel educational
The second of the series of "The Adventures of Bill and Bob" is called "Catching a Coon" and shows how the two youngsters catch a raccoon. The trap is baited and Bill and Bob are not too successful. Some practical results. It is surprising that the cameraman has been able to obtain such a close range. One shot shows the coon wading through a shallow brook. Later it is caught in the trap and securely fastened with rope by the boys before they release the trap.
Mr. Coon unwillingly trudges out of the camera's focus leashed to the rope. Very good material of its kind.

"For Sale"—Century—Universal
Type of production............................................2 reel comedy
There is some new stuff, some originality and very few dull moments in this funny Harry Sweet comedy. There is a lot of old stuff, too, but most of it is done with new touches that put it over. The picture is all about a 1903 model flivver which is for sale. It has all the ailments due to age and a few more besides. Selling it is a pretty hard problem for Harry Sweet. But he is a persistent and energetic salesman for he spends most of his time starting and stopping, running after and trying to catch up to and being run over by his Spanish War coupe. Whoever designed the thing helped make the picture what it is, for it is a combination of the grotesque and grandiose and is funny. There is scarcely any doubt about the fact that your people will be satisfied that this film is really a good slapstick comedy.

"False Roomers"—Hallroom Boys Photoplays—Federated Film Ex.
Type of production............................................2 reel comedy
This is the first of the Hallroom Boys comedies of the new series to be distributed by Federation Exchanges, Inc.
Sid Smith is now the only featured performer, with Harry McCoy still playing the other fourflushing Hallroomer. There are a whole lot of new gags in this number, and a great deal of new business, most of which is very funny stuff. The stunts register in quick succession from the start, and it will unquestionably be good for a bunch of big laughs. It's all about the boys' troubles in a cheap boarding house, and there is a lot of good business right off the bat, furnished by their numerous devices rigged up to combat the high cost of living.
Later Percy and Ferdie adjourn to a swell hotel to live, and there they also meet with some amusing difficulties. There's a surprise finish that will get a good laugh. It should be a satisfactory comedy offering in the majority of houses.

"Biskra, The Beautiful Oasis"—Burton Holmes—Paramount
Type of production............................................1 reel travelogue
A city unfamiliar to the majority of Americans is visited by the cameraman for this reel. It is the city of Biskra, and as may be guessed from the picture's title, is in the center of the desert, in Algeria. It is surprising and interesting to find a city so large and so modern, in the middle of a barren waste of sand, and on this score it is a very satisfactory offering.
The reel devotes most of its footage to views of the city, its buildings, and street scenes; but there are a number of portraits of the inhabitants at close range. These are composed chiefly of Arabs, and French colonial negroes, and both races are shown to advantage. Some close-ups of the Caid; the chietman of the Arabs, are interesting. A first rate travel picture.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Girl wins love of compuncher-sheriff allowing him to believe she is a thief
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 5,000 feet

When people see Bessie Love in "Penny of Top Hill Trail" they are probably going to wonder why they don't see her at regular intervals like many other stars because she is a delightful, vivacious little person with a personality that is sure to appeal to a large majority of picture patrons. And in her latest picture for Federated release she has a part that affords her numerous opportunities to "play up" to the audiences and make folks like her.

The picture has a surprise ending that makes up in a good measure for rather slow proceedings in the earlier reels and although folks will probably guess that there's a catch somewhere, and may even have an idea of how it is going to turn out, still the director has injected a good suspense and has managed to explain various bits that added to the suspense and were not explained as they occurred. The production is very good and there is a fine background of real western country. Photography and detail is good with the exception of one or two apparently misplaced sub-titles.

Everybody will love the star and she gives them good variety in the role of "Penny." Wheeler Oakman is well cast as the hero and the others in the cast are all suitable and give satisfactory performances.

Jo Gary, a ranch hand, confides to Kurt Walters, the cowpuncher-sheriff, that while in Chicago he fell in love with a girl named Marta but she refused to marry him because she was a thief. It happens that Walters later finds Marta in the town jail. He secures her release and takes her to the home of friends who offer to reform her. She asks that they call her Penny, her real name. Gradually Kurt falls in love with Penny but believing her in love with Jo, says nothing.

It develops that Penny isn't Marta at all but a moving picture actress hiding from the manager who wants to renew her contract. She explains how she changed places with Marta in jail and that everyone except the sheriff knew that she wasn't really Marta. Kurt is then free to tell Penny of his love for her and Jo is happy with Marta who arrives for the surprise.

Tell Them About the Surprise Finish

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a really entertaining program picture which should give adequate satisfaction. Bessie Love hasn't appeared at great frequency of late but that shouldn't be any reason for the picture not attracting them. Promise them they'll be pleased with her after her absence from regular release although you may have played her two previous Federated pictures, "The Midlanders" and "Bonnie May." Make the most of her name in your announcements and play up the surprise finish.

The title of itself may not be unusually attractive but played up with catchlines should interest them. Say: "If you were in love with a girl you believed a thief, would you try to reform her or marry her. See the story of 'Penny of Top Hill Trail.'" Or, "There's more ways than one to get out of doing things you don't want to do. See Bessie Love in 'Penny of Hill Top Trail' at the blank theater."

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 4,587 feet

Realart has turned out much better program releases than “The Magic Cup.” And certainly after director Robertson’s “Sentimental Tommy,” it is difficult to believe that his name should appear as the director of this poor mixture of entertainment. It is obvious that he was handicapped by a weak story. Possibly the producer held the strings tight on the money bags. Certainly E. Lloyd Sheldon’s story wasn’t worthy of an expensive presentation.

“The Magic Cup” contains about everything, or a smack of everything, that is offered in picture entertainment. It starts off with some kitchen comedy, introduces the reporter-hero, switches to a Cinderella atmosphere, gets in some crooks, followed by drama and eventually culminates in romance. What more could you want for one picture? The author tried to cover too much ground and the continuity which he has provided is poor. The action starts in Greenwich Village, moves to the Ritz, thence to Long Island, with a jump-over to Ireland in between.

Constance Binney hasn’t any opportunity to appeal to her audience in this picture for she has to share considerable footage with too big a cast. Vincent Coleman is the reporter-hero. William Strauss, as a Jewish gentleman, who furnishes the cash for the crooks’ deals, makes a good deal of a small comedy role especially when he is requested to carve roast pig.

Every time Mary Malloy needs money she pawns a silver cup which her mother left to her. The Patri- cian, a crook, tells Abe, the pawn broker, that Mary must be the granddaughter of Lord Fitzroy, an Irish nobleman. One of the crooks impersonates Fitzroy and Mary is established in a beautiful Long Island home as the long lost granddaughter. Bob, a reporter known to Mary in her dish-washer days, falls in love with her but is suspicious of her “relatives.” He cables to Ireland and the real Fitzroy arrives. He recognizes the butler as his son, but at his request Mary never knows that he is her father. The man dies, Mary pleads for the freedom of the crooks and then goes back to Ireland with Bob and her real grandfather.

May Go Over Where Star is a Favorite

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If Constance Binney is a favorite with your patrons there are numerous ways in which you can get your folks interested in her latest picture and they’ll possibly be satisfied with it as average program material. You might go at it from the Cinderella angle and use catchlines as follows: “Suppose you slaved every day as a scullery maid and then one day you were told you were really a Princess? But then suppose some crooks were just using you to further their own mercenary schemes. See the final outcome of this unusual situation in Constance Binney’s latest Realart picture, ‘The Magic Cup.’”

Use the star’s names conspicuously in your announcements and if you don’t make too great promises you can get by with the picture. Strong promises aren’t in order because the star has had better pictures and done better work.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Several down-andouters finally regenerated through good influence of one
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,000 feet

Conway Tearle has a part quite unlike anything he has had lately and in “Bucking the Tiger” he appears in a western story, playing the part of a down-and-out. He is one of several of life’s unsuccessful people who have joined forces for some reason or other not made clear to the spectator. The feature is slighty below the standard of pictures which the Selznick organization has been turning out recently.

The story was originally used as a stage play but was taken off after it was plain that it was not making good, and as picture entertainment Achmed Abdullah and May Tully’s offering is a slow-moving and at times tiresome piece that certainly doesn’t provide the star with a role suited to his ability or personality. He is usually connected with the ballroom or hero type of story, but in “Bucking the Tiger” is just one of a number of unsuccessful beings, although he appreciates his failure, whereas the others do not.

Of course Director Kolker was handicapped with a story that contained little action, but it seems he might have gotten in a little more than he has. The first reel especially gets over without arousing the interest in the slightest. It isn’t until about the first half of the production that it picks up and switches to the North with some good snow scenes and a bit more action. The earlier reels consist of ordinary, very unattractive western barroom sets.

Conway Tearle manages to go through with the role well enough, but it isn’t the kind of a part that will let him make an impression. Winifred Westover is the blond heroine and is usually so poorly lighted that her face almost appears blank and her features sometimes undiscernable. Gladden James is the bad man of the picture who is false to the fair Winifred and deserves the shot from Tearle which kills him. There are numerous titles but they might have been written to give a better idea of some of the incidents. There are many incomprehensive bits which might have been made clear by the title-writer.

After Tearle’s band has put over a hold-up he decides that it is all wrong and they go north to start life over. James had previously been expelled by the band, but appears at their cabin after they have gone north and during the night steals away with Winifred. Tearle overtakes him and it’s a case of his own life or James’. Tearle shoots and kills James and then Winifred tells Conway she loved him, not James.

A Good Accompanying Program Should Be Secured
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This isn’t strong enough to stand alone, so if you show it as a single feature, secure a good accompanying program, as did a transient Broadway house when it showed the feature. A good scenic and a comedy will help you put it over. The star’s name may attract attention, although your folks are sure not to like him as well in this kind of a role. He seems best suited to full dress parts or one similar to that which he had in his last picture, “Society Snobs.”

“Bucking the Tiger” would do for a double feature program well enough. The fact that it isn’t a knock-out shouldn’t discourage you, for the Selznick organization has been releasing some really good entertainment of late and one weak one shouldn’t make you prejudiced.
"The Sky Ranger"—Pathe
Type of production: Melodramatic Serial
This is the latest serial offering from George B. Seitz, to be released by Pathe. Seitz directed, and is also co-starred in the piece with June Caprice. The first three episodes were very well reviewed, and judging from that much of it, it will prove a good bet in the serial line. The story is extremely imaginative and impossible at times, but the nature of it provides opportunities for a vast number of thrills and exciting scenes. The element of mystery is very strong throughout the first part, and if the balance holds up to the standard of the first three episodes, there should be no question about bringing your patron back for more. It has all the stuff that serial fans enjoy. June Caprice is a pretty and attractive heroine, and she works well with Seitz, who displays plenty of pep, puts up a good fight, and behaves generally as a thriller hero should. Harry Semsie is even more villainous than in "Violet Fingers," the last Seitz serial. The story concerns the adventures of George Oliver Rockwell, who falls in love with the daughter of a scientist who has invented a searchlight to signal Mars. A rival scientist, who has the invention, seeks to gain possession of the light, and will go to any length to get it. The attempts of the villains bring June and George into many dangerous adventures.

"Playmates"—Century-Universal
Type of production: 2 reel comedy
An animal that is certain to entertain is the star of this Century offering, which is an all round good number. Brownie, the bulldog, is the animal, and the dog's truly remarkable performance will be a source of enjoyment not only to every child in any audience, but to most grown people as well, for seldom has such a well trained animal been seen either on stage or screen. He is ably assisted in this piece by a very cute young girl. Peggy, who manages by numerous chicanery and work together in a manner calculated to excite admiration and get numerous laughs. Brownie gives Peggy a bath in one place—getting the tub, filling it with water, and supplying the soap, brush and towel. There are numerous other wonderfully clever stunts that the animal performs, seemingly with the greatest enjoyment. There is some human comedy, too, although it isn't emphasized, and it isn't anything unusual. Mostly very ordinary slapstick. The dog's performance should make it a highly satisfactory comedy offering.

"Hurry West"—Pathé
Type of production: I reel comedy
Eddie Boland is the featured performer of this one. The "Vanity Fair Girls" have dwindled down gradually, until there is only one of them in evidence in this number. The idea is a very good one, and Boland has a chance for more funny gags than he has in some of the previous reels in which he has recently starred. In this one he is a tenderfoot who goes west to take charge of a ranch, and is received by the villainous band of quick shooters who want to get his property. The characters are all humorously overdone, and when Boland attempts to get the better of them at every turn although scared to death, the result is some good amusement. It will make a very satisfactory comedy reel for any kind of audience.

"Wood Sims"—Century-Universal
Type of production: 2 reel comedy
The Century trained lions are the featured performers in this number but the animals are not as much in evidence as in some of their previous pictures. The story is pretty much a repetition of the stunts that they have worked in other offerings. However, they do make good entertainment while they are in action, and in performance with members of the cast, furnish a good many thrills as well as making pretty fair comedy. They don't appear until nearly the middle of the picture, the first part being given over to registration slapstick comedy. This is still the best of the gags and business having been used many times. It will carry on the strength of the animals' performance.

The Toonerville Follies—State Rights
Type of production: 2 reel comedy
There are many curious results and a long succession of preceding episodes. Fontaine Fox's funny jay characters; the Skipper, who steers the Toonerville trolley, the Terrible Treme, Mr. Bangs, the Powerful Katrinka, Aunt Eppie Hogg and the rest all can be seen on the screen in this film. They are so popular they have become a byword in every household. Every member of every family will want to see them again in the coming episodes.

In this one, the Skipper, Dan Mason, on behalf of the new minister, organizes the Follies in which local rube talent is starred. The Terrible-Tempered Mr. Bangs escorts the minister to the "opry house" and has engine trouble on the way. Finally when the audience is hoping he will keep right on with the same stuff for a long while yet he manages to get going right and they get to the show. A rube quartet sings "A fleece in the Deep" and then the curtain rises on the Follies, which are rather brief and consist mostly of a new variation of a vampire, tabloid, starring the Skipper. The director, Ira M. Lowry, should get credit for the snappy jam ending in which the minister is found to be a crook and escorted off to the calaboose. They will look for more Toonerville stuff.

"Double Crossed"—Universal
Type of production: 2 reel western Clean and amusing is this Jack Perrin riding, fighting and love-making western. It has just the right amount of dime novel stuff in it. Louise Lorraine is the girl, whose father's coat of mail is being stolen by a gang of rustlers secretly led by Jack's rival for her hand. She complicates things by promising to marry the man who captures the outlaws. Jack gets two of the gang and at work, but is wayled by his rival, left bound and under guard in a hut while the rustler rides off to marry the girl. The wedding ceremony is half through when the jam ends begins. The summing up is logical. Jack finishes up in the calaboose, but there does not seem to be any good reason why this picture should not prove pleasing. There are a lot of exteriors of rolling plains and rocky fastnesses; shots that will interest. The action is fast and the cast well chosen. It is a good routine western.

Pathe Review No. 101
Type of production: 1 reel magazine
Most of the reel is of average interest, with two of the subjects impressing most of the entertainment value. To start it off there is an exhibition Dutch wooden shoe dance, by a young man and young woman who interpret in quite a vivid manner, the spirit of the country of windmills. Then comes a slow motion bit of two prolouges, performing some difficult stunts on horizontal bars. Next is a Hy Mayer Travelaga titled "All To The Bowwows." This is a clever combination of playing and photographing showing several kinds of dogs. It is in the world of animation, and the subject is in color, and presents some realistically tinted views of a Bedouin Arab encampment. The band is seen at their daily occupations, which for the men apparently consists of nothing, and for the women, the making of butter, the weaving of cloth, on old fashioned hand looms, and preparing the ever moving caravan for its next trip. This is the best part of the reel.

"Travel Laugha"—Universal
Type of production: 2 reel western
A good western, full of comedy. The eye-catching introduction is a scene of the calaboose. The story is well told, and the outdoor shooting is unusually good. The gags are many and effective. The comedy throughout is excellent, being of the hard-hitting kind. A rather thrilling finish. The film is together with its first release is worth a showing.

As many as you please. All at one time. And as near perfection as possible. No risk of man handling. Every inch. Of every print. Just so. Same tint. Same tone. Up and down. Over 11 spoons the print develops and is washed. Then over 13 spoons the hypo takes effect. Then over 17 spoons it is washed. In purified water. Then into the tint baths. Again washed. Then dried. In the cleverest drying machine you ever saw. All open to the eye. With a patent effect. That rings a bell when a break arrives. Just as perfect as a machine can be. Then rolls the print. fire-proof. Hold 1,000 productions. Wonderful place. You should see it. Especially if you are a producer.

EXPERIMENTING
Up at Newburg. Ain't it a place? To experiment in. Warner's and Bobby North. Put on "Why Girls Leave Home" for premiere. Doing a Griffith. Trying it in the small places. To see what happens. But, back to the experiment: Had a lot of cards printed. For the audience. Wanted to know: (1) how they liked the title; (2) how they liked the picture. And the cards came back. All filled in. With result that Bobby North was tickled sick. Even if the violinist almost gave him a spasm. And the family think they've a winner. Even Harry Rapf.

GETTING IT BACK

It's a business.

WHY THE WORRY
Over this German stuff?? Actors excited. Equity all worried up. See jobless times. Soup kitchens. Etc., etc. All producers' press agents busy. Grinding out interviews. Some don't worry. Others do. Over this so called "Foreign Invasion." It's a laugh. Count the foreign films now being shown? Any importer how many good ones are left? And who has 'em? Famous to have a lot. So they say. But Connick says no. Usual program stuff made abroad punk. Wouldn't get a nickel here. Couldn't. Fine kettle of fish. When a half dozen foreign pictures. Can stir up such a mess. What a fine lot of Panicky people there are. In this business. Better worry about making good pictures. That's more important. And more to the point.

PROLOGUES
Joe Plunkett. Stand up, Joe. Take off your hat. No; don't; you may catch cold. But stand up, anyway. Gets the silver plated velocipede. Presented by Cheerio Sidney. For putting on prologues. They have something to do with the feature. Something other Broadway showmen might think about. Just another example last week. With "Peck's Bad Boy." Mighty clever. Incidentally introduced a song by Paul Sarazan. The only musical composer in press agent captivity. First National will print it. And shoot it out with bookings. Kinda catchy, too.

STEPING ALONG
Those Ascher boys. Of Chi. Started about 15 years ago. Little dinky theater. Now they own a flock of houses. In Chi and other places. And still growing. Changed from a partnership to a corporation. Have 175,000 shares of stock. No par. But assets are supposed to be valued at over 17 million. That, as the mule said of the express, as it passed, is "going some."

THE WORLD DO MOVE
Since "Griff" made "The Birth of a Nation." So has "Griff." With a revival of the feature. At the Capitol. Now he comes along with talking pictures. To be introduced to-night. At the Town Hall. With "Dream Street." Invention of O. E. Kellum. They say it works. If it does Kellum has a fortune. In his mitt. Edison tried it. And failed. Harry Webb spent a fortune. Of Baltimore dollars. Trying to get it right. Others also. Their name was Legion.

By the way "Dream Street" will be somewhat different. "Griff" has made some changes. Tied in the action to the theme. Thinks it clear now. For anyone. And the big idea symbolized by the "Evening Star" promises to be clearer.
Robertson Chosen
To Make Barrie’s “Peter Pan”—He and Josephine Lovett to Confer With Barrie First

John S. Robertson, who directed Sir James M. Barrie’s “Sentimental Tommy,” and Josephine Lovett, who adapted the book for the screen, will sail tomorrow for London, where they will confer with Sir James and Adolph Zukor on the filming of Barrie’s “Peter Pan.”

“Sir James already has seen ‘Sentimental Tommy,’” said Jesse L. Lasky yesterday, “a print of the picture having been taken to London by Mr. Zukor, and he was so greatly pleased with the adaptation of the story to the screen that he requested that ‘Peter Pan’ be entrusted to Mr. Robertson and Miss Lovett. We have not yet decided whether to produce the picture in London or in our Long Island studio or in Hollywood—that will be worked out in the conference with Mr. Zukor and Barrie. But, in any event, the scenario will be written in London, in collaboration with Sir James.”

Lasky also announced that Wallace Reid will arrive here May 16 to begin work, co-starring with Elisie Ferguson, in “Peter Ibbetson,” under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

He went into some detail regarding various producing activities of the company and in one portion of a lengthy statement said: “Agnes Ayres is coming East to play opposite Mr. Meighan and on the completion of ‘Cape Ricks’ she will go to London as the first of a number of our stars who will work in our London studio.”

beaverbrook's Plan Fails; France Considering Ban

Scheme Halted
A. to Discuss Booking Plan—
General Meeting Thursday—
Goldwyn Stops Bookings

By Cable to WID'S DAILY

London—There have been some out developments in the assumption regarding Beaverbrook.
Beaverbrook’s idea to get the block booking system has rubbed waters and it seems safe that his plan will not be carroughed.

The meeting of the Cinematog-graph Exhibitors' Association of Britain and Ireland has been for Thursday to discuss the situation.

In the meantime Goldwyn, as stopped accepting bookings of four months, has resigned.

The affair started with the appearance of F. E. Adams of the Cinematograph Theaters, with Biocolor, Ltd., the fuss over cancellation of contracts to secure a shorter rental, that a company had been formed at it.

Entirely assumed here that he knows the matter would be referred impossibly to the C. E. A.
by a matter of fact, Beaverbrook as no official connection with E. A., invited about the exhibition to the Hyde Park Hotel, and a number of resolutions were asked.

The point is that there was a conference with general members of the C. E. A. regarding the move er in the organization of the is form any involved in participation in these conferences.

Beaverbrook considered the resolutions passed at a en evening at the Park Hotel, had arranged a policy in detail.

Minutes of the conference were read. They called for exhibitors booking films for release on Aug. 31, 1921, pending a period of four months, which is for release within six months the about the price of existing bookings.
Third, exhibitors ask for a 25% reduc-ion in the price of existing bookings.
E. Weekly asked some points on which the altristic attitude of the solicitation of the trade by Beaverbrook's part was raised. Kine, states that Beaverbrook intends foisting a co-operative scheme of booking and leasing theater, which may be at the tlee general meeting of the C. E. A. to upon a full explanation from

of his agreement to the London scheme already in ments against this agitation, has declared a

Adolph Zukor is back in London

Talk of Tax

Bill Up in French Chamber—Industry
There Reported in Serious
State—Export Mks. Lost

A bill aimed at American pictures has been introduced in the Chamber of Deposits in France, according to a copied dispatch published in yesterday's Herald. The cable stated:

"With the object of saving the French cinema industry from complete extinction by the invasion of American films, which now comprise 80% of the pictures shown in this country, a bill has been presented in the Chamber, signed by 60 Depoities, which would levy a 3% tax on foreign films used in theaters showing less than 20% of French films and a tax of 5% where more than 25% are French.
This is in addition to the general 6% tax
it is proposed to be placed on cinemas.

"The French film industry is in a serious state, having lost its export market, as well as being driven from the French theaters by American productions. Sixty per cent of the films shown in the Argentine were French last year, while today scarcely any are exported there. The same is ture of many European countries, according to the figures presented in the Chamber."

ization is back in New York from his European trip.

Merit Gets Burlington Films

Contracts have been signed whereby Frederick Burchill’s "Wild Men of Borneo" films will be distributed throughout the United States by the Merit Film Company.
This new deal also calls for 22 new one-reel adventure pictures taken in the Orient, the United States and other countries, which will be limited in distribution to the rate of two a month. Inter-Ocean has the foreign rights.

U. F. A. Deal Off

The breaking off of negotiations between Famous Players and U. F. will undoubtedly prove a surprise to film men who are familiar with the foreign situation. As a matter of fact, it has been taken for granted in the possibility of entering into reciprocal arrangements with foreign producers.
No specific names were given out, but it was generally taken that the U. F.
was one of the companies.

Last week it was announced that Zukor was to establish his own exchanges in Central Europe. He has, through Ben Blumenthal, placed Pola Negri under contract. She will come to this country in the fall. Blumenthal when he last stated he had been an Ernest Lubitsch Co. and in view of the relations between Zukor and Blumenthal, it is natural to assume that Blumenthal has turned his contract over to Zukor.

Pioneer will release "A Good Woman," starring Gail Kane, in May, and "Out of the Depths," starring Violet Merseman, in June.

Imports Jump

An analysis of the imports and exports has just been made by the Washington Bureau of the National Association. The figures were obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

For eight months ending February of this year, the total footage of positive film imported was 3,137,422. During the same period in 1920, the amount was 1,649,085. From these figures it shows that the imports were nearly doubled during the past eight months. The amount of negative film imported has also been more than doubled during the same period. For eight months ending February 1921, the United States imported 1,372,842 feet, while in the same period there was imported 668,669 feet. Exports during the same period show a decrease this year over last. Exports during eight months ending February 1921, totaled 108,825,976 feet of positive film, while during the same period in 1920 112,591,288 feet were exported.

The United Kingdom is still the best customer, with Canada second, Australia third and France fourth. It is noticeable, however, that exports to the United Kingdom have decreased nearly 50 per cent, also that business decreased with Norway, Spain, Mexico and Cuba, and that it increased with France, Italy, Argentina, Brazil, Japan, Australia and British West Indies.

Keep Theater Taxes

(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Washington — Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, in a letter to Representative Fordney, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, recommends that the tax on admission be maintained. In his letter he says, in one part: "3. Retain the miscellaneous specific sales taxes and excise taxes, including the transportation tax, the tobacco tax, the tax on admissions. ** * **"

High Expected to Direct Nigh in New York

Harry Reichenbach has turned 43d St. from the East to the Hudson River to that name. If you don’t believe it notice the blue signs on the street corners wherever they intersect 43d Street.

This is only one of the stunts he has pulled in connection with the opening of “Dream Street” at the Town Hall, which, incidentally, is located on 43d St. The block between Broadway and 6th Ave. is decorated with flags of the Chinese Republic, as well as American flags, and big signs on various corners show the way to the hall. Incidentally, they refer to the Chinese. Famine fund drive which is on this week.

A street car is touring Broadway from the Battery to 125th St. all week, and this, too, is jazzed up with portraits of the company and a streamer tells the rest. Every night a big red fire will appear on the roof of the Town Hall.

away from him summarily without a hearing and without possibility of a review. This, it says, “strikes an American note and grates upon the sense of fairness and justice.”

Strongly the article declares the bill in a general way will have the effect and accomplish the purpose of a criminal law because it will inflict punishment for whatever should be done by motion picture men contrary to the public good, but without trial by jury, which, the brief charges, is “an invasion of rights” that have come down to us from the signing of the Magna Charta.

It assures that the Commission, if appointed, would have unconstitutional control of the press, for all printed matter for a certain production would be under its control.

Sale of Tickets Stopped

Business was so large at the Capitol at 7:30 Sunday night that the sale of tickets was stopped. The lobby was jammed at that time and the waiting line extended from the outside box office to 5th St. one way and around on 31st St. in the other direction.

Goldwyn Managers Switched

Several changes have been made in the Goldwyn field staff. J. A. Koster, Seattle manager, has been transferred to Seattle and C. Knickerbocker, until now a member of the Chicago sales force, will manage the Salt Lake office.

Revised and Then Vetoed

The National Association stated yesterday that Governor McKelvie of Nebraska had vetoed a drastic censorship bill which, in the last stages of the present legislative session, had been rushed through both the House and Senate. Early in April word was received here that the measure had been killed, but it was revised again. The Governor’s veto means that there will not be censorship in Nebraska for at least a year.

Looking Things Over

R. K. Evans, sales manager of United Artists for Ohio, with headquarters in Cleveland, has been placed in charge of the Boston office, succeeding D. J. Horgan. Walter E. Banford, Salt Lake manager, has been transferred to Seattle and C. Knickerbocker, until now a member of the Chicago sales force, will manage the Salt Lake office.

the terrible amount of labor expended, to say nothing of the cash cost.

TRIBUNE—So there you have it—it is some picture!

New York Times—In a number of ways, this picture is about the best thing Mr. Nolan has ever done. The staging of the famous battle of General Custer and his troops is a remarkable piece of work. But this is not all. Young Wesley Barry and other incontinents are disturbingly conspicuous in the picture.

Post—Another incident in the history of these United States has been made a pedestal to prop a fiction. However, the photography is good, especially the distant views. One feels that condition means much to Marshall Neilan and that he reveals in the handling of the moving masses.

Telegraph—Superb picture. The film deals with love and adventure and is full of life and fire.

Journal—In any film this combination would be hard to beat, but in "Bob Hampton" they appear unbeatable. He (James Kirkwood) does it well—and he does not wear the same expression on his countenance all the way through, not even in the climaxes. This represents what might be called an excel in the motion picture art. Globe and Evening World made no comment.

"The Home Stretch"—F. P. L. Rialto

Herald—MacLean is nonchalantly buoyant and entertaining, and this sporting life picture is one of the best in which the young comedians has paralleled his smile.

World—Ince has produced an interesting picture. It is a photography that combines comedy and pathos nicely. Mr. Ince is always a clever producer and he deserves credit.

American—Real story, real hero and action in Rialto film. "The Home Stretch" full of thrills as it weaves pretty romance of race track. Douglas MacLean scores in excelling role.

Globe—As one of those strenulous heroes with the type of smile known as "electric" he seems an energetic success, though he does overwork a bit even when resting.

"SUN"—And we have the not unusual demonstration of a screen star making a production worth while and interesting at rather overwhelming odds.

Mail—""*""A delightful comedy drama. * * * Douglas MacLean is an ideal type * * * and he loses none of his admirers for his work in this film."

Telegraph—Some of them are comic and some are thrilling, but they are always interesting.

Journal—* * * The young star shows that he is there with the punch almost as powerful as that of other Douglas somewhat better known.

"The Birth of a Nation"—D. W. Griffith—Capitol

TRIBUNE—It is a great picture, and al though long one to believe that directors are born and not made, for that time D. W. Griffith was making much better pictures than other directors are making now, since "The Birth of a Nation" was filmed they have had a full dozen years to practice in it.

POST— Still, in many ways, the dramatic pinnacle of things cinematographic in this country.

DAILY NEWS—Begun to say that "The Birth of a Nation" is still a good picture, I pause to say it is again a good one. They have not "done it one better" since it was made, I think.

"Bob Hampton of Placer"—1st Nat'l Strand

GLOBE— Neilan has made it into a breathless melodrama of that first daunt less adventure across the plains.  Pic torially the scenes of the frontier struggle— the battle between the Ute Indians and the Sitting Bull tribes—are masterpieces of lighting and composition.

"The Home Stretch"—F. P. L. Reitwilo

TRIBUNE—It is a good comedy and we cannot possibly dislike any picture in which Mr. MacLean appears, however, there is nothing in the least convincing about any of the characters who are seen in this picture, and in thinking it over we are convinced that this is entirely the fault of the titles.

POST— It is full of homely humor and, in general,合格s for that school of American comedy that has made more money and done less for the country than any other.

"EAGLE WORLD"— Plenty of thrilling situations.

"THE STORY OF THE PROGRESS"
At Broadway Theaters

Capitol

The overture at the Capitol this week is composed of excerpts from Homser's "Southern Rhapsody" interpolated with Southern and negro melodies and original themes. Because of the length of "The Birth of a Nation," there is nothing else on the program with the exception of the accompanying music, of course. There is an interlude of five minutes between Part 1 and Part 2 of the picture.

Rialto

The Rialto orchestra this week plays "If I Were King" as the overture, "British Cavalier," an urban Kineto Review, is the second number on the program. It is followed by Encarnal Lyst, who sings "Yale's Song" from "Philemon e Bencius." The Rialto Magazine has fourth place on the bill. Hallie Stiles, soprano, then renders "Coming Home." The feature is Douglas MacLean in "The Home Stretch," a Thomas H. Ince Prod. The Rialto Orchestra plays a selection from "The Fortune Hunter." The comedy, "Ladies' Pets," from the Chester studios, is the eighth number, and the concluding organ solo, "Cortega."

Strand

"The Force of Destiny" (Verdi) is the overture at the Strand this week. The Strand Topical Review is the second number. Another Paul M. Sarazan song, "A Little Girl Who's Waiting," is part of the prologue to the feature in which the Strand Male Quartette and the Blackfeet Indians take part. The feature is Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton of Place." Wasley Barry and "all his friends" appear in person twice daily. The comedy is "Torchy's Big Lead," another of the Torchy series. The concluding organ solo is "March" (Rogers).

Skouras Bros. also control the New Grand Central, West End Lyric, Pagoant, Shaw and Arsenal theaters. Of the 3,000 shares of stock the Skouras Bros. and Rassinier control, 500 shares each. Eugene and Harry Freund, who own the Cinderella and are interested in the Melba, and Geo. F. Meyer, general manager of the Capitol, and Sam Pasternick own 375 shares each. The par value is $100 a share.

"Dangerous Love," a feature controlled by C. B. C. Film Sales, has been purchased by the Standard Film Co. of Cleveland for Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky.

Theater Insurance
Stebbins Replies to Ehrenstein’s Liability Insurance Ideas

The following letter has been recived:

“Editor, Wid’s Daily:

“Being an every day reader of your paper, it was natural for us to note an article in your paper in which Herbert R. Ehrenstein, head of the firm of insurance brokers bearing his name, had advised William Brandt, President of the Theater Owners Channel of Commerce, that a ‘serious matter’ had come up in connection with li-bility insurance covering theaters.
This ‘serious matter’ was that the insurance companies writing liability insurance for motion picture theaters had agreed to include in their policies a clause, specifically excluding the responsibility for loss from liability to any person, resulting directly or indi-cently from a fire or configna-

After reading this article we were almost positive that this statement had been made in error; but in order to be doubly sure, we took the mat-ner up with the president and executives of the various casualty companies and now wish to call your attention to the fact that none of the conference companies writing theater liability insurance have any clause in their policies which will exclude such coverage, or the ever contemplated or discussed the matter of having such an exclusion in their policies.

The liability policy specifically states that the company will indemnify the assured against any accidents which may happen by reason of a fire or other perils then existing or impending or which are devoting to escape therefrom.

“We are enclosing herewith a copy of the London Guarantee & Accident Company’s Theater Liability policy, this being one of the so-called conference companies.

“Will you, therefore, please emphatically deny the statement or the article which you printed, as we do not like to have the exhibitors who read your paper be misled, parcularly our clients who number at least, if not more, than 75% of the motion picture industry.

To substantiate our statement, we are enclosing herewith letters from the London Guarantee & Accident
Co., the U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. and the U. S. Casualty Co., which speak for themselves.

Thanking you for your attention in this matter, we beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

Reuben Samuel, Inc.

By ARTHUR W. STEBBINS,

Vice-President.”

Shaw’s Satire
According to the New York Herald, Samuel Goldwyn talked for several hours in London with George Bernard Shaw in an effort to have him write for the screen. Shaw closed the conversation by saying:

“Well, Mr. Goldwyn, there is not much use in going on.
There is this difference between you and me. You are only interested in art and I am only interested in money.”

What They Think

Below will be found excerpts from daily paper criticisms of the talking pictures now at the Town Hall:

TIDES—“ Although those who spoke from the contract last night could be heard clearly, it cannot be said that their voices had a prevalent quality. There was no scraping of the needle on the record could be heard by those in the house. The synchronization of voices quite seemed perfect.”

WORLD—Talking pictures open new movie era. Successful demonstration of the art in the production of “Dream Street.”

HERALD—Several scenes of David Wark Griffith’s photoplay had been done over to introduce the voices, perfectly synchronized with the movement of the lips on the screen.
The audience expressed the highest appreciation with frequent applause.

GLOBE— The experiment was extremely interesting, however, in that the synchronization of voices and pictures has really been perfected.

JOURNAL—There were no two opinions as to the success and meritorious promise of the new Kalem-Griffith undertaking. A new era in the astoundingly and historic history of cinematic art was opened.

MAIL— Several distinct impressions are left, the chief of which is that talking pictures are not only within the realm of possibility but have actually come close to the point where they are ready for rapid development toward general use. As demonstrated last night, the lips of characters on the screen formed perfectly the words that came from the phonograph, both in speech and in song.

More Suit: Over “The Kid”
(Special to WID’S DAILY)

Philadelphia—The M. P. T. O. A. of Pennsylvania and Associated First National Pictures of Eastern Pennsylvania are parties to two suits brought in the Common Pleas Court here regarding contracts on “The Kid.”

One suit has been filed on behalf of John Hayes of the Columbia theater and York Palace, the point involved being whether or not an exclusion was negated when the price called for in the original contract is boosted an alleged 100%.
The second is on behalf of E. J.
McIntyre of the Kid’s theater, Mahoney City, Pa., who seeks damages because he charges, First National permitted the picture to go to a exhibition house when he held a contract.

Years ago two different persons prophesied that the day

would be acclaimed the

Understood to Be Negotiating With Two Stars and Three Directors

Los Angeles—Arthur S. Kane, chairman of the board of directors of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., is understood to have opened negotiations with two stars, one woman and one man, and three directors for the release of their product through his organization.

The plan, as learned here, is this: the female star is to appear in a series of productions to be directed by one of the directors with whom a deal is on. A second series will be made with the male star and two additional series to be made by the other two directors.

Enrich Von Stroheim has finished all his scenes on the elaborate Monte Carlo Plaza erected at Universal City for "Foolish Wives." The set was over six months in the building, was used for five weeks in the filming, and will probably run on the screen less than 30 minutes when the picture is shown.

The cast of "The Glorious Fool," a Mary Roberts Rinehart story being made by Goldwyn under direction of F. Mason Hopper, is now complete with the addition of Frederic Vroom and Lilian Langdon.

The photography on "Ace of Hearts," an original story by Governor Morris, was completed last week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Rex Ingram is busily engaged in supervising the construction of sets, assembling the cast and attending to various duties in connection with "The Conquering Power."

Bebe Daniels says she had so much company during her 10 days in jail in Orange County that she got no rest.

"Bob" Kerr has been added to the force of directors at the Hal E. Roach Studios. Kerr has had seven years' experience in directing comedies.

Lloyd ("Ham") Hamilton and Director Jack White are well under way with their new comedy for release through Educational.

Charles Meredith has been added to the all-star cast of "Hail the Woman," which is now in its fourth week at the Ince studios.

Scott Sidney is finishing a Gayety comedy featuring Henry Murdock and Mary Wynne, with Dorothy Orth and Eugene Corey in the cast.

Win. Beaudine is cutting a new Variety comedy entitled, "90 Days or Life," in which Irene Dalton and Feeney again appear as leads.

"Over the Phone" is the title of Alice Lake's new Metro picture, a story written expressly for her by Arthur Somers Roche.

The Photoplaywrights' League of America will circulate nationally a petition against censorship.

Harry Harris is directing Gladys Walton in the next production, "What Can You Expect?"

Pathe announced yesterday that contracts had been signed between Paul Brunet and Fred C. Quimby for the release of a one reeler called "A Day With Jack Dempsey," showing the pugilist in training at his camp. Pathe stated that the film was made by arrangement with Jack Kearns and that Quimby directed. It was added that 200 prints will be placed in circulation. In the Courts

The Lenox Producing Co. was sued in the Supreme Court by The Triangle Film for a balance of $11,695 alleged to be due. The complaint stated that in 1918 the parties agreed that the plaintiff would produce for the defendant a photoplay from the scenario, "No. 1," and the defendant would pay the cost of production plus 20% and would refund all sums spent by the plaintiff. The cost was $51,197 and 20% of this sum is $11,232, but the defendant has paid only $56,577.

Jamison Hardy has sued the Bray Pictures, Inc., for $4,836 for breach of an agreement under which he was engaged in March, 1920, for five years as manager of the defendant's industrial department at $250 a week and 10% of the net profits. He was discharged in April, 1920, he says.

A default judgment for $2,070 was filed in the City Court against the Stereospeed Producing Co. in a suit by the Motion Picture Apparatus Co. to recover $2,000 paid to the defendant for stereospeed cameras which the defendant failed to deliver.

In a suit of Frederick Ambrose Clark against the C. & R. Amusement Co. and others to foreclose a mortgage on the property at 2128 Amsterdam Ave., a report has been filed in the Supreme Court showing that $52,400 is due.

A judgment for $1,469 has been filed in the City Court by Walter H. Eichelberger against Francis X. Bushman on a judgment obtained in Baltimore.

A judgment for $612 has been filed in the Supreme Court by Frederick K. Nixon against the Brewster Film Corp. on a note made in 1918.

Adolph Zukor Reported as Having Closed Deal—Means Three Plants in Europe

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Philadelphia—The Public Ledger publishes the following copyrighted cable dispatch from London:

"The fight against the high cost of production of motion pictures in America has been carried a long way forward by Adolph Zukor, who in the last three weeks has purchased ground in Paris and Berlin and contracted for the erection of large studios for the production of pictures for American theaters.

"These with the studio in London already in operation will give the corporation Zukor controls three large production centers in Europe, where it costs much less to 'make' pictures than in America.

"It has been estimated that the cost of producing a film in London is as low as one-fifth what it costs in California, notwithstanding the difficulties of weather necessitating long waits at times for enough sunlight to film. Mr. Zukor, who recently returned to London, plans to equip the French and German studios with the latest devices, most of which will be shipped from America."

Jesse L. Laskey's office stated yesterday that nothing was known of the report from London. When H. D. H. Counick was reached he said he didn't know anything about it.

"Maybe Mr. Zukor is going to place a camera to shoot some scenes and the correspondent has him building a studio," he said.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his thing along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Pittsburgh—Three hundred half sheets were used on the street cars here when "Lying Lips" was playing at Rowland and Clark's Liberty and Savoy theaters.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Selznick Week will be conducted here early in June, with autographed photographs of Selznick stars will be distributed among the big merchants to be awarded those buying a given amount.

Birmingham, Ala.—At the suggestion of Jean Darnell, Arrowood of the Alcazar obtained a large model window for "It's a Great Life," the stunt being to ask "when you use soy-and-so's merchandise."

Los Angeles—The recent arrest of Bebe Daniels for speeding was capitalized by theaters here which were running her latest. Frank L. Brown of McClure's Broaday, collected all the newspaper stories and displayed them in his lobby.

Jackson, Miss.—McDonald of the Istriovu recently acted the part of a cowboy when "The Round Ups" with Fatty Arbuckle played at his house. He donned an authentic outfit which he used to wear himself on the plains and rode through the streets.

Philadelphia—When Forbidden Fruit was shown here, El Orozito printed a four page news sheet, headlined "West Philadelphia," and so on, depending on the suburb where it was given out. The story of the picture was printed on the first page, in the manner of a real daily. Only the ads named the picture and where it could be seen.

Columbia, S. C.—Manager L. T. Lester of the Rialto, when he played "Love, Honor and Behave," staged a real wedding at the stage. The bride's trousseau and the groom's clothes were donated by the merchants of the town. It was advertised that the formula "Love, Honor and Behave" would be used instead of the time honored "Obey." An elaborate stage setting was constructed for the ceremony. Several trolley cars carried banners their lengths.

Defeat Wisconsin Censorship

The M. P. T. O. reported yesterday that in Wisconsin the exhibitors' association had won its fight against the Bennett bill, creating censorship and that due to the efforts of President J. G. O., is to the effect that the bill was killed Wednesday in the Senate by a vote of 29 to 3.

Bill Into Effect

(special to WID’D DAILY)

Albany—That Governor Miller can be definitely expected to sign the

Lusk-Chayton Bill and make censoreship in New York state a fact is practically in sight. Not only from the attitude he has taken all along to-warding this measure by using it as a party proposition and jamming it through the Legislature, but also by his remarks made Wednesday when he clearly indicated he had no idea of accepting the suggestion of appointing an investigating commission

as suggested by Paul Cravath.

It would not be surprising if he signed the measure any moment.

Then the next matter of interest will be as to the personnel of the Board.

There is every likelihood that someone from Buffalo will be on the board.

Surely an up-state appointment is in line. There is talk that Mrs. Florence

E. Knapp of Syracuse, prominent in Republican circles will have serious consideration according to gossip

here, and of course Mrs. Clarence

Waterman of Brooklyn, who was conscious in the fight for censorship. She would fit the place by tician is backing Mrs. Gooderson for the place, so the scrap looks lively.

A new company, the Celtic Photo Plays, Inc., with offices at 330 W. 2d St., has been formed to handle pictures of an Irish theme. The company is offering stock at $5 a share and the capitalization provides for 10,000 shares.

In a prospectus it is stated that the company by a contract held at the Arcataum with the producer of "Oscar Wilde's "The Canterville Ghost," will employ a process which will show "living figures in relief, moving in space as in life, apparently unattached to the screen and with color possibilities that are truly sensational."

Thomas J. Ford, associate publisher of the Irish World, is president; Thomas Egan, the Irish tenor, is vice-president; Thomas Kirby, secretary and treasurer, and Francis Smith, director-general. These men, together with Leopold Wharton of Wharton Bros., compose the board of directors. The advisory board includes several prominent men interested in Irish affairs, among them Frank P. Walsh and Judge Joseph E. Corrigan.

Jules Burnstein has been appointed general representative. The company has two pictures ready, "The Colleen of the Moore" and "War Torn Ireland."

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

(Special to WID’s DAILY)

Omaha—Two exploitation stunts put on by Manager Ballantine of the Moon, have recently helped put over a new star, with the opening of the new season. Last year, the one receiving the ticket to visit the Moon on a certain day, to be admitted free (except war tax), was a 12-year-old girl. This year, a 15-year-old girl was received for the same price, and the result was the same.

The second stunt, worked just last week, was when certain hours during the week were set aside for girls 15 years or older, with red hair, black hair, or light hair—depending upon the hour they attended—were admitted free.

In the first instance, says Ballantine, every holder of a ticket usually brought from one to four with him, and then decided who and which of their friends made the trip.

The stunt plans to use this stunt frequently, until the 1,000 tickets at least, are sent to 1,000 residents listed in the telephone book; different people each time. Within a year he well cover his entire Omaha, and phone book listing of residences, and then will start over again.

The second stunt, that of admittng girls 15 years and older, was at first only sent out to 1,000 residents listed in the telephone book; but the result was so encouraging that it was decided to go for the full list, a year from now.

Marion, O.—The management of the Orpheum Theater, worked a novel stunt in the exploitation of "Outside the Law," the Priscilla Dean feature.

Takin advantage of the "tie-up" week in Marion, cards were sent to every family in Marion, bearing the cryptic words: "Clean up your act; and back yard, you are Outside the Law," P. D."

The cards caused no end of complaint, but much good was done with the new advertising which the picture enjoyed.

Indianapolis,—When the Colonial had "The Greater Love" with Vera Gordon, it got a window tie-up with a department store which it paid 25 dollars per week. The store was a name of names, with a charge of $10.00. incorporation, $1,000. Incorporators, A. C. Thomas, H. S. Bareford and M. H. Fuller, Attorneys, Thomas and Friedman, 2 Rector St.

lish circles that Beaverbrook was attempting to sound the death-knell of block booking, now that he has become the chief author of the British industry at heart, but because he was desirous of launching a large co-operative organization of his own modeled along the lines of the First National in this country. At the dinner referred to above, Beaverbrook gathered around him about 70 exhibitors. Several important resolutions were passed, among them one calling for the rejection of all bookings after Aug. 31, 1922, and another for the reduction of 25% on existing bookings.

The point brought out by English trade journals was that these resolutions were passed without the knowledge of the great mass of British exhibitors and that Beaverbrook was attempting to foist upon them a measure which they had not been consulted about.

Film men familiar with the situation have been conjecturing for the past few days as to just how Adolph Zukor and Famous Players were involved in the matter, if at all. Beaverbrook, as noted on various occasions, is financially interested in the Famous Players-Canadian Corp., and is believed to be quite close to Zukor. The latter is now in London.

Priscilla Dean steps forward in her latest Universal, and probably does the best character work of her career in “Reputation.” An excellent vixen, hayden type, she goes into character in this, and in the closing reels as the drug satiated mother gives a performance that is going to be liked and well remembered by those who see her. Just why they called this “Reputation” is difficult to conceive—it has nothing to do with the story, except in a far-fetched way, and the average public is going to figure that the title has an entirely different significance.

Director Paton has done an excellent piece of work, and except that the picture needs cutting to bring the sequences to a clearer understanding and with a few titles properly placed, the production well merits a place as an important picture. Here and there, because of the dual roles of the star, sequences follow which are not at all clear, but which gradually work out, and at times this is annoying. Incidentally, the title writers take lines bodily from Shakespeare and Dickens without any qualification or quotation. The one from Julius Caesar many people may not know, but a lot of people surely recall the famous lines of Sidney Carton beginning with, “It is a far, far better thing than I have ever done, etc.”

Miss Dean is on the screen practically all of the time, first as the mother, the one night stand star, and later as the rage of London and Paris, and then as her own daughter, who has also gone on the stage, and who, when her mother fails to appear at her New York premiere, takes her place—getting away with the deception through her natural resemblance to the famous artist. The mother, recovering from opium, fights her way back to New York and on the night of the premiere makes her way into the star’s dressing room, intending to fight with the woman who has stolen her name and reputation. Before this ends she shoots the man who had been her own manager, leaves the blame upon the other woman, and not until later does she discover that she has placed the blame upon her own daughter. She leaves a confession and kills herself, and of course in the end the daughter is freed and marries the press agent of the company.
Other than Miss Dean the support has no particular appeal, indeed all of their work is overshadowed by the almost constant appearance of the star. Yet the cast contains many well known people. There is an excellent lot of double exposures, and a chase scene of the dual characters is unusually well handled.

Play Up Priscilla—Should Be Enough

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Universal has given you something good to work on with this. Priscilla Dean is well liked in a number of communities, and her work in this is surely going to add to her admirers. Incidentally the story is based on stage life, and you know how much your people like this sort of background for any play. Besides you can talk about the production values which are really worth while.

Be careful of the title. Some of your people may figure that it has something to do with the reputation of a girl or woman, when really it has this significance only so far as the fame of the actress is concerned.
So be careful. There are a lot of people kicking these days because they go into the theater as a result of the title, and leave kicking because the picture hasn’t anything in common with the title. Be careful of catchlines because of this. Put your big play on the star. She’s worth it.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 7,268 feet

In his novel, Randall Parrish has used Custer’s last fight as the climax to a dramatic romance in a way that holds the interest, and the screen adaptation has been well done, considering the amount of incident contained in it. However, there are occasional slumps that seem to occur through the writing in of a small part for Wesley Barry. The youngster has only one or two real opportunities, and the rest only serve to hold up the interest in the main story. Barry certainly didn’t belong in the story.

James Kirkwood gives a splendid performance in the most important role, Marjorie Daw is a pretty heroine who hasn’t a great deal to do. A large supporting company has been carefully selected and all do good work.

Bob Hampton, gambler, is the terror of Placer, but somehow retains the friendship of the sheriff. While enroute to another city Bob joins a caravan troupe which is attacked by Indians. Bob and a little orphan girl are the only survivors. Later it is made known that Bob is in reality Capt. Nolan who had served under General Custer and later escaped from prison where he was committed for a murder which he did not commit.

Through a picture which she carries Bob learns that the girl he has rescued is his own daughter, but he doesn’t want to tell her until he can clear his name. Marjorie falls in love with Lieut. Brandt, son of the man Bob is supposed to have killed. Bob finds a clue to the real murderer, the man he has sought all through the years. In the meantime Custer is preparing for his last fight with the Indians and allows Bob to join the company as a civilian. He is killed in battle and his body is found after a confession has been obtained from the murderer. He leaves a note for Marjorie telling her that he is her father and leaving her free to marry Brandt.

Exhibitors Ought To Get Good B. O. Results With It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Marshall Neilan’s latest production is big in every way and should prove a box office attraction. It will bear promises and you can tell them it’s the biggest thing the producer has done yet, and proves him thoroughly capable when it comes to directing spectacles. There are many battle scenes, two in particular which are well worth seeing—the massacre by the Indians, and later Custer’s last fight. There is some very realistic fighting.

In case your folks won’t be enlightened by the title tell them about the historical background, and give them an idea of the story by use of catchlines such as: “They called him ‘Bob Hampton of Placer,’ but at Custer’s last fight see who he really was. Marshall Neilan’s biggest picture so far is being shown at the blank theater.” Wesley Barry’s name will probably attract attention and general good showmanship should allow “Bob Hampton of Placer” to make money for you.

Gentlemen:

The Motion Picture Directors Association, New York Lodge, extends to you its hearty congratulations upon the speed and the excellent results achieved by you in handling of the pictures taken at our Ball given on April 2nd, 1921 at the Astor Hotel.

The negatives of these pictures were exposed at 10:50 P. M. and two hours and five minutes after delivery to you the finished prints were handed to our representative for projection that night.

We believe that you have established a world's record for developing a negative and positive together with printing and tinting the finished product and, at the same time, turning out a quality of print that would make an excellent first run copy for any house in America.

Most sincerely yours,

Truly has this offering marked a new epoch in the production of films in America. Technically this is not a greater film than "Cabiria," although it is to be classed with it. For an American audience the appeal is much greater. From the technical viewpoint I think "Cabiria" showed more wonderful spectacular effects in many ways, and was a greater production, but for appeal nothing has ever been offered to the American public, be it film, spoken drama or spectacle, that can approach this great work in the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or the almost uncanny reproductions of historic scenes. The greatness of the film is in its spectacular points and these historic reproductions, yet the drama is so clearly defined and carefully presented that it grips, and grips hard. Naturally the master producer of the films has been the first man in this country who has ever been able to instill enough confidence in the films to get the necessary money to go out and work on such a really gigantic undertaking. It was, to film folk, rather amusing to see and hear the theatrical folk and the first nighters fairly gasp as they saw these thousands handled before their eyes with movements that convinced because of the atmosphere, and an action that swirled you along with it because of the flashes and cutbacks. A producer can make or break any production by his cutting and assembling after he has taken all his scenes, and since, in this case, Mr. Griffith took over one hundred thousand feet of negative to get the twelve thousand feet utilized, one can readily realize what the cutting and assembling means. For that part, I feel that there is still room for some improvement. In a few places the flashes were three or four feet too short, and in the second part, the story of "The Clansman," the dramatic action is held a bit too long before the spectacular is swung into it again. I also want to complain against the use of the camera in front of the speeding "Ku Klux Klan," when the camera is moving rapidly before them. It absolutely kills the illusion. When they sweep down upon you as the camera stands stationary the effect is tremendous, but the minute you flash from that to a view of the men riding at breakneck speed and apparently not gaining upon you, it hits you slap in the face, and even the layman stops for a second and then says to himself, "Oh, they have the camera in a fast auto," and the illusion is gone. The presence of the camera is felt. Mr. Griffith's greatest work was in the realistic detail of the assassination of Lincoln, the other historic reproductions, the marvelous battle scenes, day and night, and in the tactful manner in which he handled the big "punch" of the play, the attack on the white girl. The first six reels are absolutely superb. The second six are wonderful, but in the drama there is here and there a weak moment. It seems that a better assembling in certain parts might help these points. Henry Walthall as the Little Colonel was superb, and Ralph Lewis as the northern leader, and George Sigman as the mulatto lieutenant-governor, were very fine. The girls did not carry their scenes as well as the men. The allegorical scenes at the close of the film I did not care for. I do not like an anti-climax. When a great film is finished allow your audience to applaud. They were all ready to even cheer at the finish, when on came the allegorical scenes and hushed them, with the result that at the finale half of the house was standing putting on their wraps and there was only a ripple of applause instead of the spontaneous outburst that would have come otherwise. But remember, excepting "Cabiria," on the technical, it is the greatest film production ever made, and it is the greatest production, film or theatrical, ever made in America.

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . Miner with a million saves Englishman from the "Badger" game and then falls for it himself

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 4,700 feet

A good many picture patrons will be satisfied with "Colorado Pluck" regardless of its old situations and regulation program production. The story is old stuff but still finds favor with a good many because it has the kind of ending they like. The picture from every angle rests comfortably on the average mark all the way through. It contains, however, a good dramatic quality, and works up to a climax that leaves a good impression at its conclusion. And what's more the villain goes his way unharmed, contrary to custom, so that "Colorado Pluck" is not soiled by "molder."

The old "badger" game makes up the main situation, and is given good play though it seems inconsistent that the wily miner should avoid the trap in New York and then fall for it in England. But there's a satisfactory alibi in that "love is blind," and when he fell for the English game he was in love.

The director has done adequate work with the production and story generally except perhaps he has not made the English sequence very English. A typical butler and a father who sees a joke "sometime later" is all that makes the atmosphere British. One or two minor errors in detail occur. When Russell saves Reggie Featherstone from a couple of quick "workers" in a New York hotel, the latter hands him his calling card bearing a London address, although they later become friends in New York.

Colorado Jim has made a million and comes to New York to enjoy it. He is "on" to the cute little girlie who tries to be friendly and later saves Featherstone, an Englishman, from what might have been his own fate. Later Featherstone invites Jim to visit him in London. Jim is made welcome after the fortune hunting family learn he is rich. Angela, the daughter, is already engaged but to a poor fellow. It is broken and Jim, really in love with her, proposes and is accepted. Angela makes it plain immediately after the ceremony that she will live in his house, sit at his table and spend his money—and no more. Angela, her former fiance, Meredith, and her family manage to relieve Jim of all his money. Then he takes Angela by force back to Colorado, is followed by Meredith who shoots Jim. Angela then realizes she loves her husband and they live happy, etc.

Story Isn't Original But You Can Please a Good Majority
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The Fox organization seem to be giving their cowboy heroes a whack at drama. Both Farnum and Russell, in their most recent releases, are seen in dramatic roles that call for acting but not action. In "Colorado Pluck," William Russell does some good acting, but he hasn't the opportunity for one real fight, and there's no regular shootin' in the picture. Because it gives the star a part somewhat different from those which he is accustomed to having the picture may appeal even more strongly. At any rate you can show them "Colorado Pluck" and undoubtedly satisfy them.

Catchlines telling the story should interest them. "If your wife doesn't love you, make her. William Russell does it in 'Colorado Pluck.'" Or, "Do you believe in 'cave man' tactics? Here's a husband who did, and made his wife like it. "He was too wise to fall for the 'badger' game, but see what love did to him? William Russell in 'Colorado Pluck' at the blank theater."

CHARACTER OF STORY........Society girl moves to East Side and tries to make good in new life with thirteen-dollar start

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,000 feet

The story provided for Elaine Hammerstein's latest Selznick production is a somewhat unusual sociological idea that manages to hold the interest all the way despite a very illogical and inconsistent ending. Miss Hammerstein gives the story an improbable start in the first place, but then society girls are sometimes given to doing unusual things, so the fact that she sacrifices luxury for two months to prove that she could make good with a thirteen-dollar start, will not be looked upon as altogether unlikely.

Director Archainbaud may have had a good continuity to work with, but he has done his share toward making a smoothly told story with the sequences well joined together. There is just one thing that noticeably detracts from the picture's appeal. Matt Moore, the hero, who had formerly been a gang leader, returns from over seas, thoroughly reformed. He proves it by putting up a fine fight when an inhabitant of a cheap cafe attacks one of the girl singers. The melodramatic conclusion in which he plays the biggest part, is inconsistent and doesn't hold in accord with his reformation. His former sweetheart, Stella, threatens to stab Mary, because she believes Mary has stolen Matt from her. Moore appears and shoots Stella in the back, killing her. The shooting is uncalled for,
and the only unpleasant bit in the picture.

The star has had better parts than the one in "Miracle of Manhattan." Her personality, pleasing as usual, dominates the picture, and Matt Moore lends able assistance as the hero. Ellen Cassidy is good in a small part.

Evelyn Whitney, society girl, wagers that she can make good on $13. She becomes Mary Malone, and tries various means of earning a livelihood unsuccessfully until she becomes a singer in a cheap cabaret.
Here she meets with success and falls in love with Larry Marshall, reformed gang leader. Stella, formerly Larry's sweetheart, is jealous of Mary and attempts to stab her but is shot by Larry. Stella dies and Larry is arrested. In the meantime, the two months period of Mary's wager is up, and she returns to her Riverside Drive home where she is ill from the effects of the shooting incident. She recovers in time to testify for Larry and bring about his acquittal. Later she marries Larry.

Star's Popularity And Moore's Name Will Put It Over

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Stories of society life appeal to a good majority of picture patrons, and in "Miracle of Manhattan" they will find a story somewhat removed from the usual line of social dramas. The author hasn't used good judgment in having his hero kill his former sweetheart. It would have been much better if he had killed the man who attacked the heroine. At least it would ring true. This melodramatic twist may not be especially observed, but it does leave the ending a trifle unpleasant.

Be sure to make good use of the star's name, and tell them she has Matt Moore for a leading man. He puts up a good fight which you can tell them about.
There are some good angles that can be brought out in catchlines and you may promise to keep them interested throughout the picture. The following lines might be used: "A society girl falls in love with an ex-gunman. See the outcome of this unusual situation in Elaine Hammerstein's latest Selznick picture
'Miracle of Manhattan.'"

Another Good One To Please Carey's Admirers

Harry Carey in
"THE WALLOP"
Universal

DIRECTOR ......................... Jack Ford
AUTHOR ......................... Eugene Manlove Rhodes
SCENARIO BY ................... George C. Hull
CAMERAMAN ..................... Harry Fowler
AS A WHOLE . . Novel western that has much better interests than its love story

The love story part of "The Wallop" isn't over attractive, but it has enough other good points to make it interesting all the way. The star seems somewhat out of place making love to a young girl, but his stories usually call for the good looking leading man coming out the victor in the love match, with Carey the good samaritan who admits defeat and rides slowly out of focus followed by "The End."

The backgrounds in "The Wallop" will attract no little attention. There are a great many really beautiful shots, and some of long range are indeed fine. The photography throughout is first rate and there are several good night scenes, including some rain stuff that may not be the real thing but it looks it at any rate. Carey gives his usual satisfactory performance, with Charles Le Moyne once more the villain. Mignonne Golden is the heroine, who is suitable, but would be more so if she'd tie up the curls.

John Wesley Pringle, adventurier, returns to Gadsden to claim the girl, Stella, only to find that she loves another, Chris Foy. It happens that Foy is accused of a murder he did not commit. Matt Lisner, sheriff, searches Stella's home for Foy, but later learns he is hiding in the mountains. Lisner and his crowd set out to get Foy and claim the reward for his capture.

Pringle reaches the mountain by a back route, and pretends to rescue Foy, but surprises both Lisner and Foy by claiming the reward for the capture. Then follows a second surprise when Pringle orders Lisner to release Foy, explaining that it was merely a ruse to get Foy safely from the mountain top. Pringle then discloses evidence which makes Lisner the real murderer, and Foy returns to Stella while Pringle goes quietly on his way without letting the girl know how much he loves her.

You Ought To Be Able To Satisfy Them With This Western

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors in the habit of playing Universal's regular line of program releases will be certain to satisfy their patrons with Carey's latest. There's some good action, a few thrills and a romantic twist besides. Surely enough of everything to please most anyone. You can talk about the story, and the real hero role of the star. You can make promises along the lines of a western atmosphere that's just a bit different, and a story that will hold their interest to the end.

"The Wallop" has some good riding, and above all be sure to tell them it's a picture that is good to look at. Still's of some of the pretty scenes will attract attention in the lobby. Mignonne Golden has appeared in support of Carey previously, so if you think she made an impression, you might use her name also. Catchlines based on the idea of a westerner who loved a girl but saved the life of his rival, might interest them.

DETAIL ............................ Apparently correct

CHARACTER OF STORY......Young race track gambler loses big race and then nearly loses his girl

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ............. 4,513 feet

For his latest Paramount production, Ince has supplied Douglas MacLean with a lively story written by Charles Belmont Davis. It is original and provides the popular comedian with a part different from anything he has had. It starts off with a fine race track atmosphere and works up a good deal of excitement with a race that ends in a thrill, when a little girl runs out on the track in the way of the approaching horses. The race is fine as it is, but would have been even more exciting had the camera followed the horses around the track.

“The Home Stretch” hasn't as much comedy as some previous MacLean pictures, but it makes up for the humor in other good bits of business. Besides the race track scenes there's a good rural sequence, and some comedy that gets over. Director Nelson has connected the various sequences carefully and the result is a story smoothly told and one that holds the interest to the end. He has handled the conclusion in a novel fashion and the ending is the kind that most audiences want. The feature makes a thoroughly satisfying hour's entertainment.

MacLean is pleasing as usual; alert all the time. A capable company support the star. In the cast are Beatrice Burnham, Walt Whitman, Margaret Livingston, Wade Boetler, Charles Mailes, Molly McConnell, Jack Singleton, Joe Bennett and George Holmes.

Johnny Hardwick's sole possession is “Honeyblossom,” a thoroughbred left him by his father. Johnny puts all his money on Honeyblossom. Just as the horse pulls ahead, Gwen Duffy, a little girl, runs out on the track. Johnny rushes to the rescue, resulting in a fall for Honeyblossom and the loss of the race. That night at a party Johnny hits a man who strikes a girl. Believing he has killed him, Johnny leaves town and later works in a third class hotel. Gwen's father accidentally comes upon Johnny and tells him the man did not die. Johnny then goes to work in Duffy's resort hotel. In the same town he meets Margaret Warren, a store-keeper's daughter. Sometime later Honeyblossom “comes back,” and Johnny makes a lot of money. He returns to the town to claim Margaret, and when he hears she loves someone else, sails for Europe. Margaret reaches the dock as the ship pulls out. Johnny jumps overboard and swims back to shore.

You Can Satisfy Most Everyone With Comedian's “Home Stretch”

Douglas MacLean’s latest should satisfy most anyone, so exhibitors will do well in securing it. If you have shown the comedian’s previous offerings and satisfied your patrons you may be sure they’ll like this one, so exhibitors will do well in securing it. If you promise them some excitement. The musical accompaniment during the racing scenes will have a lot to do with putting it over.

Be sure to tell them that the star has an original story in his latest and one that is different than anything he has done yet. Make the race track business the main idea in any catchlines. It will attract the most attention. You might make use of the line: “What is ‘The Home Stretch.’ Visit the race track in Douglas MacLean's latest picture and you'll find the answer.”
Metro's Latest Is Pleasing Light Comedy Offering

EXTERIORS ......................... Good

DETAIL ..................... Not important factor

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Country youth is a continual victim of coincidence even to inheriting a fortune

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,500 feet

"Coincidence" proves its title continually throughout the picture, and if you don't believe in it after watching so many instances of it, then Metro's latest offering fails in its mission. However, it's likely that folks will be entertained by this very light comedy offering that keeps up a good lively pace once it lands Mr. Hero in New York City. The production is ordinary but all that the story requires, and the director has managed to hold the attention throughout. There are some effective comedy touches that register laughs of greater or lesser proportions.

, The picture is mostly straight comedy with the exception of one trifling dramatic sequence, in which they might cut a few feet from the scene of a man attacking a girl. The story is inoffensive comedy romance with a rube hero. There is a certain amount of implausibility which can be readily overlooked in a story of this kind, inasmuch as it makes way for some good humor. "Coincidence" contains many scenes which will interest local picture goers. Many of them have been taken around the city, some on the Fifth Ave. buses.

Robert Harron does good work as Billy Jenks. He makes the most of all the opportunities which the role affords. June Walker is a pleasing heroine, and others are Bradley Barker, William Frederic, Frank Belcher and June Terry.

Billy Jenks is a "live young bank clerk in a dead town." Billy comes to New York to work. He becomes a cashier in a department store. Billy's life becomes a series of coincidences, and through one instance he becomes acquainted with Phoebe Howard, a stenographer. Billy and Phoebe both "fall" so hard that they neglect their work and finally lose their jobs. Fortunately Billy has an aunt who dies and leaves him a large fortune. When he tells Phoebe about the inheritance, Harry Brent overhears the conversation and plans to relieve Billy of the money. He introduces himself and agrees to invest hero's money for him next day, but before the meeting Billy has the money stolen from him by a man who needs money to meet some notes. Billy recovers the fortune after a long chase, and in the meantime Phoebe has learned the real purpose of Brent's friendliness. Billy and Phoebe are married.

Title And Catchlines Should Interest Them

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This isn't knockout comedy, but is lively enough and keeps moving fast enough to please a good majority, so if your folks like this sort of picture for a change, you might safely show them "Coincidence." Make the title your selling point and you should be able to get them in without a great deal or trouble. Tell them "Everyone recalls certain outstanding coincidences in their lives but Billy Jenks' was just one

'Coincidence' after another. But see the best one of all in Metro's latest comedy offering."

The Metro press sheet bills the picture as having an all-star cast but probably Robert Harron's is the only name which is familiar. Catchlines and promises along the lines explained previously should interest them and the title ought to have a good deal to do with getting them in.

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Shoemaker’s wife

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 5,000 feet

After looking at Pearl White’s most recent production a good many will agree that for the time supposed to have transpired during the telling of the story, an unbelievable number of incidents occur. In these three hours they develop, complicate, entangle and solve three distinct situations that keep the star busy from the word “go” until they flash “the end.”
Pearl White’s latest is purely old school “movie” material, and the production given “Beyond Price” belies the time spent on its making. It is apparent that director Dawley didn’t draw many weeks’ pay for the actual production time.

There’s an over-abundance of incident crowded into the feature, and the result is a serious jumble that manages to maintain a fair comprehensibility but has the general atmosphere of being a much elaborated complication. There’s an altogether unnecessary murder at the close that doesn’t add any to the enterta-iment.

Pearl White gets in some of her acrobatic business in an art gallery set, and again when she comes to the rescue of a millionaire who is being blackmailed, and plays the part of his wife. For the remainder of the picture the star cavorts around in a chinchilla wrap, but otherwise hasn’t much to do.

Sally Marrior, wife of a fashionable bootmaker, decides that she is neglected by her husband, who gives too much of his attention to shoes. Sally delivers a pair of shoes at the home of Peter Weathersby, millionaire. A maid hands Sally a fur coat belonging to Mrs. Weathersby. While Sally is waiting Mr. W. is arguing with a professional dancer who is trying to get a large amount of blackmail from the millionaire, because he has been friendly with Valicia, a dancer.
Sally poses as Mrs. Weathersby and foils the dancer.

Later Sally discovers she has delivered the wrong shoes to the millionaire, and rushes to the art gallery with the shoes for Valicia, who is appearing in a tableau. Mrs. Weathersby attending the art exhibition, discovers Sally with her fur coat and a chase ensues. Sally finds herself in an apartment where a woman has apparently been murdered. She is accused of the crime, but later it is learned a jealous man committed the act. Then the millionaire explains the blackmail episode, and Sally returns to her husband, cured of her longing for fame and riches.

May Disappoint Star’s Admirers

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Even the star’s admirers aren’t likely to be satisfied with this one. She has had better stories recently.
“Beyond Price” doesn’t supply her with the sort of role to which she is best suited and on the whole isn’t attractive entertainment. If you think it probable that the neglected wife theme would interest your folks you might use this as a talking point. A good short reel program will also be needed.

The star’s name will attract a good many if you just want to get them in and don’t have to worry about them coming again. The Fox organization has a good collection of stills which you can secure for lobby display, and the press sheet contains further suggestions for exploitation.

Attractive Settings And Good Production Save Familiar Story

Eugene O'Brien in "GILDED LIES"
Selznick Pictures

DIRECTOR .................. Wm. P. S. Earle
AUTHOR .................. John Lynch
SCENARIO BY ............. The R. Cecil Smiths
CAMERAMAN ................. Jules Cronjager
AS A WHOLE........... Has well sustained interest that holds the attention; variety of atmosphere STORY........ Not unusual and has no original twists to distinguish it; gives star satisfactory part DIRECTION ...... Secured attractive settings for the story and is otherwise adequate
PHOTOGRAPHY ............. Good
LIGHTINGS ................. Sometimes too bright
CAMERA WORK ............. Good
STAR .................. Does good work SUPPORT.......... Martha Mansfield pretty but doesn't show emotional ability; others suitable EXTERIORS ................. Many pretty shots
INTERIORS .................. All right
DETAIL .................. Correct
CHARACTER OF STORY..... Explorer, given up for dead, returns to find his fiancee married to another

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 5,000 feet

Eugene O'Brien's latest offering for Selznick release is good to look at, despite its very familiar story situations. Director Earle has obtained attractive locations for the action, which make up in a good measure for what is lacking in originality otherwise. The idea of the sweetheart given up for dead, and who returns to find his fiancee married to another, has been done time and again. Regardless of the handicap, "Gilded Lies" holds the interest throughout the five reels and reaches the obvious conclusion twice, the latter affording a bit of a thrill, but being hardly necessary to finish the story.

There is a good variety of atmosphere for your pleasure. The opening scenes are "north of 53°," later it is the city, Florida, and finally a mountain spot. There are many very pretty shots, particularly those in the South and in the mountain lodge. The production generally is quite satisfactory, and the camera work and photography good. There are some interior shots which have been taken at too far a range, keeping the players too far in the background.

The star has a part that affords him good opportunities and he is supported in the main by Martha Mansfield, who is very pretty and wears gowns well, but seems lacking when the moment requires real emotional acting. When she learns her former fiance is alive, right after her marriage, she certainly doesn't act as though she felt as badly as the titles try to make out.

Helen Thorpe consents to marry Martin Warde, newly rich "asphalt king," when her Aunt and Warde persuade her to believe that her fiance, Keene McComb, an explorer, has perished with his expedition. McComb returns to the city and later leases an estate in Florida, afterwards learning that Helen and her husband are neighbors. They meet and McComb realizes that Helen is not happy with her husband. One night Helen seeks refuge in McComb's home when her husband beats her because she will not aid him in roping McComb into a "phony" financial deal. A note found on Ward's private dock next morning indicates his suicide. Helen and McComb are married and spending their honeymoon at a mountain lodge when Warde appears to fight it out with McComb. Warde falls from a cliff and is killed.

Should Go Well Enough In Majority of Houses

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a thoroughly satisfactory program attraction which should satisfy a good majority. If they like the star, so much the better. "Gilded Lies" is the sort of story that still appeals to a good many, women especially, and you might make known what it is all about by use of lines such as: "She consents to marry the rich man because she believed her sweetheart dead. But on her wedding day— 'Gilded Lies' will give you the answer." Or, "If you married a man believing that the one you really loved was dead, and he suddenly returned, what would you do? See how it works out in Eugene O'Brien's latest Selznick picture, 'Gilded Lies.'

Some of the New York theaters are introducing the idea of using trailers of pictures prior to the showing. It seems to be proving effective. You might try it. Stills of some of the exteriors in the lobby will attract. You could also use the name of Martha Mansfield in your advertising notices.

Some Short Reels

"On Account"—Century-Universal
Type of production..................................2 reel comedy

This one may not be thought to be very funny—for slapstick stuff. It features a small baby girl. A landlord who is making beer in his apartment attempts several times to collect a bill owed by the infant's parents. Each time the baby pusses feet down stairs and steals a bottle of beer for the mother to use in appeasing the landlord's anger and in securing a stay. The landlord sets a trap and gets a private detective to catch the thief. A patrol full of policemen with drawn revolvers lies in wait and apprehend the baby, who turns the tables by capturing three crooks who have been in an adjoining room. The father is outside on a scaffold painting the house most of the time. Of course there is some paint slinging. There is some new stuff in this, that will get a laugh, but the comedy is not up to standard.

Screen Snapshots No. 24—C. B. C.—State Rights
Type of production..................................1 reel magazine

Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin and Jack Dempsey appear in an interesting number of this reel. It starts with a studio shot of Hank Mann buying the drinks for a crowd of extras in an old fashioned wild west dance hall. Marie Prevost and her pets—a cockatoo, several turtles and a parrot, are the next bit. Fans are given some inside information on slow motion photography and are shown the workings of a speed camera. Naomi Childeres then reads the palm of Gloria Hope and of Ray Howard. Hugo Ballin directs his wife Mabel Ballin in a love scene with Edward Earle. The juvenile, Miriam Battista, who was in "Humoresque," is shown studying a part and rehearsing it—footage that is particularly good. David Butler then is shown being directed by his father Fred J. Butler in a melodramatic Russian picture. The final number shows the Chaplin-Fairbanks-Dempsey trio, in multi, performing amusing antics with a number of Marines. Kid McCoy and Jim Corbett are also in this.

"Take Your Time"—Vanity Comedy
Type of production..................................1 reel comedy

This is a quickly-moving, coherent story that is free of any noticeable vulgarity and funny. You can't go wrong in booking it for it is sure to amuse almost any kind of a crowd with the possible exception of those who crave stuff that has less story and more of the absurd. This one is fairly believable. The newlyweds, Irene Dalton and Earl Rodney, plan a month's vacation. They leave for the boat in a wild dash, and when they get there they find they have left baby home. Hubby makes a useless trip back in a speeding taxi to find he has forgotten his latch key. Several other trips are made, for things forgotten and misplaced. There is a brief police court scene where the judge quickly dismisses all parties. At last they are all set to walk up over the gang plank when they learn they are two days ahead of time. So they camp on the dock until the boat leaves.

"His Meal Ticket"—Sunshine Fox
Type of production..................................2 reel comedy

Bobby Dunn is very funny in this racy comedy that is full of laughs and not at all dull until the end. There is a lot of new stuff in it. Bobby hires himself out as a pet monkey to an organ grinder who has an attractive dancing girl for an assistant. A monkey of about Bobby's size and build escapes from a cage in the city hospital, where it was being held for an experimental operation. Bobby is taken for the escaped monkey and instead of giving him pennies everyone runs away from him. Finally, Bobby hides in the cage in the hospital that held the escaped one. He lands on the operating table, but an orderly breaks a tube of laughing gas and the operation has to be called off.

Chester Screenic—Educational
Type of production..................................1 reel scenic

This one consists of two parts; "The Philippine Futurity" and "An Angle in Idaho." In the first the water buffalo is shown at work in the tobacco fields and rice terraces of the islands and in a sort of steeplechase race through village streets between thatched huts and across a stream, the beasts being ridden by native boys. A few rare shots of fish swimming in the shallow of a mountain torrent in water so clear that pebbles can be seen beside the shadows on the bottom leads the second part. The remainder is a succession of beautiful and well chosen views of distant mountains, miles-wide valleys, ravines, gorges, cataracts in the woods and foaming brooks swirling through gnarled tree roots.

Pathé Review No. 102
Type of production..................................1 reel magazine

This one starts with tinted photography of two small Japanese women in holiday dress wandering in a staid manner through a tea garden. They are waited upon with ceremony by a little yellow servant. The gathering and manufacture of false hair is next. Factory employees are shown handling long heavy hanks of peasant women's hair, washing it in various ways, combing it on an interesting kind of fixed comb and then sewing it hair by hair to a mesh of cloth used as a basis for a wig. Some slow motion photography follows; sea lions diving and swimming after their food.

William Fox plans to enter upon the production of spectacles on a

It is now officially admitted what had been published in these columns on numerous occasions, that one of the important pictures to be made abroad will be "Nero." Another will be a story depicting the history of Francesca di Rimini. Another will depict important occurrences in the life of Alexander the Great, this film to be produced in Greece, according to present plans.

The plans as mapped out before Carlos and Edwards sailed were quite ambitious. Edwards plans to make "Joseph and His Brethren" in Egypt and of course finish "Mary, Queen of Scots." He will likewise visit Ber-

What Leander De Cordova Is Up

Against Working in South Africa

Part of an interesting letter from

Leander de Cordova from Durham,

South Africa, telling of his experi-

ing in directing a feature over there:

"It has rained now for over three weeks in which time I was only able to work two days and the rainy season is supposed to be over. And on the clear days you sit and 'wait for the clouds' and the rest of it.

"I was at a place called Waterval

Bovea for a week and was driven out by rain, but I must tell you of my experience there—I had to find my location so went direct to Sergeant Vener of the African Mounted Police on a par with the N. W. Mounted Police, who volunteered very kindly to show us around, so we started out on a horseback. We rode through country that baffles description. Wild country! Beautiful! It's a deadly climb for about three miles, through elephant-grass so high as to obscure the sight of a man on a horse six feet ahead of you—the path is just big enough for a horse to walk and the rocks make it almost unpassable. If by any chance you tell it would mean a drop of a thousand feet or more. Wild game is all around, now set a rifle. Thousands of monkeys and gorillas, but they do not harm one and I have no real desire to shoot them, for if you do not kill them instantly they tear themselves apart to find the bullet.

"The spot I finally decided on (I haven't worked there yet on account of the rain) is at the bottom of this mountain, to reach it you have to cross the Nuigini River—and you go on horseback—to take a wagon down there it took two days, even then near, nor can they use them in this locality, for there are no roads. The company has to walk seven miles, being a bulky bunch of people and don't know what 'yellow' means.

"The black momba snake, the most deadly in Africa, abounds through here, for at this spot the start of the Low Veld, the hotel (7) we stayed at is the dream of some rare breed. The bed I slept in for five nights was wet. Thank God none of us are ill as we could not drink the water (this is the Fever Country), so we were allowed two drinks a day, one bottle of beer and one finger of brandy and bitters.

"They have no actors worth mentioning to play small parts, etc., in this way.

"I would like to give this message to every director in America—Never kick at anything, for you have it all at your back door. My own philosophy is that the best is not necessarily the most spectacular, and that the best ideas are not necessarily those that are the biggest and most expensive to make.

For the big one. That’s coming. But that’s expensive. And there’s a stock of stuff available. All the time. And more in sight.

HAVING FAITH

And proving it. Even these days. Of tuff times. Doesn’t stop Whitman Bennett. From buying a studio. And at the same time telling everyone to have faith in this business. Urges optimism. And he’s right. There are a lot of people in this business. Who have a wishbone. Where their backbone should be.

WE’RE SORRY

Note from Victor Nurnberg. Of Reelcraft. Denies the allegation. And disaffirms the alligator. Referring to last week’s line: That Paul Sarazan was the only composer. In press agent capacity. Nurnberg says he’s another. All right. Let’s go.

WHAT NEXT

They came. A long line of vamp pictures. Followed by a lot of sex stuff. Just one question: What’s next?

BUSY LITTLE AZ

In Berlin. Wouldn’t deal with UFA. A chance. Then he stepped along. And grabbed a lot of the best people. Of that organization. So Famous now has in Berlin: Lubitsch, who directed Passion. Negri, who starred in it. Mia May; another star. Bratz, the financial expert. And Davidson; another big power. Also Jennings. Who played Henry VIII. In “Deception.” By the way Jennings is an American. And golly; what an actor?

To be shown at the Criterion. Don’t miss it. It’s real. And unusual. That’s all he will say. But he worked all night Friday. Getting ready.

WHY HAVE A HOME

Which reminds. Of Hobe Henley’s story. Of when he was working. For a certain company. That believed in efficiency. Worked all night. For three nights. Hand running. Getting his picture in shape. Decided he needed a little sleep. So next day didn’t reach the studio at nine. Half an hour later. Was called on the phone. "What’s the matter?” asked Mr. Studio Manager. “When are you coming down?”

“Don’t know,” said Henley. “I just got in.”

NOW IT’S MOTORS

For SA. Yep; Lynch. Down Atlanta way. Not satisfied with a few hundred theaters and other banking interests, SA has gone and taken over the Packard motor agency and put Frank Freeman and Millard and the “other boys” in charge. Don’t worry; he’s still interested in theaters. And pictures. But he likes Packards. And when SA, likes anything he goes to it with all he has.

National Managers Coming to Town for Sales Meeting—Starts Monday at the Astor

Thirty-eight exchange managers, who arrived on Thursday, will be on hand at the end of the week, all set for opening business session of the annual sales convention, scheduled to open Monday morning at the Astor. The sessions will last four days.

General sales policies will be discussed and of course, there will be, as always, various addresses by the heads of departments of the home offices.

One of the features of the sessions will be a careful analysis of press conditions all over the nation, as each branch manager finds out in his particular district.

A rather ambitious entertainment gram has been prepared for the managers, with various comic contes figuring in on it. On Monday at Norma and Constance Talbot will entertain, at a beatnik place as yet undetermined. Tuesday, Jules E. Brulatour will host a dinner to be given at the Ritz-Carlton tonight, and there are promises to put the list with a triple-barreled af.

The first will be a dinner given by the Louis B. Mayer Corp., at the Riviera, 6th Ave., the latest innovation in restaurants. This will be followed by a theater party to be given by the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corp. The show has not been defined upon as yet. Following that, E. Beban Series?

The curious thing that George Beban’s tour of the country in connection with showings of “One Man In A Million,” had brought him back to Los Angeles and that he would shortly start work on a new subject for the company.

Although the company statement made no mention of a series of pictures, from other sources it is gleaned that Beban would probably make a number of productions for Robertson-Cole release.

Ritz Showings Tonight

“J’Accuse,” the French-made picture dealing with Germany and the war, will be given a private showing in the grand ball-room of the Ritz tonight. Marc Klaw controls the film in this country.

Anti-Film Bills Killed in Penn. (Special to W’D’s DAILY)

Harrisburg, Pa.—Every bill in the Legislature aimed against films has been killed. The Brady measure, designed to tax all theaters one per cent on gross business, is among them.

Others are: The Denning bill, prohibiting standees. The Smith bill, imposing a tax of one per cent per lineal foot on film. Bill requiring a full and unobstructed view of stage. Blumberg measure, calling for uniform scale of admission prices for entire week. Bill imposing 5 per cent tax on billboards. Schaefer anti-deposit bill.

The defeat of the above measures leaves the industry secure against adverse legislation for two years, till the next session of a legislature.

Dragnet for Thieves

National Association’s Committee Active—Films Recovered in Chicago

The National Association reports that a dragnet for film thieves is now being drawn throughout the country and that during the last 30 days ten arrests have been made in four cities, a large number of stolen films recovered and clues developed that are expected to lead to the arrest of a large number of print burglars.

In Cleveland a few days ago, W. C. Hawkins, special representative of the Film Theft Committee, caused the arrest and indictment of Julius Watt, alias Jimmie Flannigan, on a charge of theft and sale of “The Mark of Zorro” and “Beautifully Trimmed.”

In Chicago last week the arrest and conviction of John Mikolins and John Ferns have put a stop to a long series of film thefts. Films were stolen from delivery wagons, practically all of the companies operating in Chicago reporting such thefts.

It was learned that a St. Ann, Ill., exhibitor had rented the picture from John Ferns, who formerly resided in St. Ann, but had moved to Chicago. In the cellar of Ferns’ home a large amount of stolen film was found by which he said he had bought from John Mikolins. After the arrest Mikolins made a full confession, admitting that he stole many cases, including the theft of film from trucks and sold them whenever he could find a market. In court Mikolins pleaded guilty to grand larceny and was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. Ferns pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods and was fined $250 and costs. A number of films were recovered.

Other arrests in connection with the theft of film have been made in Boston and New York.

He leaves a widow and five children. He was but 47 years of age.

Important Italian Films To Be Seen Here—Transaction Was Closed in Rome

One of the most important deals of the year has been closed between Goldwyn and the Unione Cinematografica Italiana—the U. C. I. or Italian Film Trust, as it is more familiarly known—whereby the important U. C. I. productions will be released in the United States by the Goldwyn organization. The deal was closed personally by Samuel Goldwyn when he was in Rome some weeks ago.

The announcement of the consummation of the deal will no doubt prove to be the most notable news of the day in Paris and London. (Continued on Page 2)

Goldwyn-U. C. I. Deal

a general surprise to film men in New York who have been watching the international situation closely.

The statement issued yesterday said that the greatest spectacles made by U. C. I. will be shown world wide. The first two will be "The Revolt" and "The Ship." The first has been variously hailed as the most tremendous spectacle ever produced in an American studio, and has been about two years in the making. Ambrosio, the producing unit which made "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria" is responsible for this picture. "The Ship" is founded on Gabriel D'Annunzio's novel, "La Nave," and was directed by the poet's son. It was about a year making and in it appears Ida Rubinstein, the famous Russian dancer. The Goldwyn statement has it that neither of these two pictures has been publicly shown anywhere. As a matter of fact, the London International Film Trades Co., Ltd. London, England, has trade shown "The Ship." But no mention is made of any other pictures. Other important Italian made films are "The Bridge of Sighs" produced by Pasquali; one episode of "U. C. I. will be shown world wide," Paris Raguamuffin," and a third is said to be extremely elaborate. The name of this is unknown and definite information regarding the nature could not be learned yesterday. The story is based on Aztec rule in Mexico.

Another man who is in close touch with the situation abroad stated yesterday that it seemed logical that Goldwyn would not go back farther than NIB to pin pictures for American showings. He estimated that there were not more than five or six really worth-while Italian pictures available for showing in this country. The bulk of the product, he said, was of a distinctly Italian flavor, and of a type that would not prove suitable for American exhibition.

The Goldwyn deal is significant in that it means the introduction in this country of more foreign pictures and for the first time since "Cabinia" of Italian films. It was pointed out yesterday that a national distributing organization such as that maintained by Goldwyn, in conjunction with the theater properties operated by Goldwyn could insure a number of showings for the pictures, whereas foreign films introduced by individuals might die because of the lack of theaters in which to show them.

It will be recalled that when Goldwyn came from abroad last week he advised American producers to watch carefully the foreign market, saying that if the American market is opened up, foreign noteworthy productions were to come from Europe, where they would be the product of Italian producers.

The transaction evidently puts the German Film Withdrawn from Miller's Theater, Los Angeles—House Picketed

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—"The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," the futuristic film produced in Germany and distributed in this country by Goldwyn, was received with such protest here that the engagement at Miller's theater has been cancelled and another film substituted.

The theater management attempted to put out on the production despite the protests lodged by the American Legion, the Motion Picture Directors' Association, the Assistant Directors' Association, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators. Pickets from these organizations as well as wounded veterans of the war carried banners admonishing the public not to patronize the theater and in general picketed the theater. The demonstration was continued in front of the theater from the opening time on Sunday until 8:30 at night, when it was announced that he would start another picture.

WID'S DAILY learns that up until six o'clock about 75 persons entered the theater and that less than that number attended the evening show. The demonstration in front of the theater attracted thousands to the vicinity. Patrons leaving the theater were jeered but were not otherwise molested. No violence of any kind was reported.

Various picture organizations both here and in the west have gone on record as opposing the further importation of foreign-made pictures. The occurrence in Los Angeles, however, is the first to crystallize in any definite manner.

Independents Organize—A Suggestion Which Meets Approval Among Leaders

Could Put the Business On a Sound Basis—Drive the “Short Roll” Operators and “Gyps” Out of the Field and Put Conditions On a Real Basis—Some Reasons Why It Is Needed

Why not an organization of independents-buyers as well as sellers?

Why not an organization which would put sound business methods in this field, driving from the field those operators who have from time to time been working on “short rolls” and who have given the sellers all kinds of trouble?

A prominent member of one of the largest concerns in the independent field, when asked about such a move, said: “We have talked about such an idea very often. There are only about half a dozen large operators located in New York, and when we have had any reason to question any buyer we have talked it over. But there is no reason why we should not be organized, and I will be very glad to talk it over.”

The head of another large concern declared that such an organization would be “of inestimable value” to the independents. “We need such an organization very much,” he said.

The distributor who is sponsor of the idea: “When you think of what the distributors in the independent field are up against,” said Sameth, “it can easily be seen why such an organization should exist. A buyer comes in and makes a deal. We order the prints from the laboratory and tie up possibly $1,000. Then what happens? The prints go out, and the advertising matter as well. That is our money. Then if this man is ‘wrong’ he refuses to accept the express package and it gets into the ‘on-hand’ department, where it can easily be lost. If we fail to push the transaction through the package rests in the express company and that is the end of it. If by chance we have sold all the rest of the country and this buyer fails to take up the package, it means we are absolutely stuck. If there is some territory open we still have a chance of using those prints.

“But why should a business of this importance and size have such problems to meet? If you take a signed order by a recognized business concern in any other field to your bank you can do something with it. It means something. But in this business an order is meaningless.

“This is only one of the problems which an organization can work out. The organization should include the buyer as well as the seller and by getting together occasionally and straightening out our difficulties we can put this business on a footing that is safe and sound. Let’s do it.”

Advertising ideas poorly executed are wasted dollars. Make your advertising dollars—“fighting dollars.”

We will send our plan to any reputable Exchange buying independently.

The first release features Kay Laurell, one of the most beautiful girls in the world, the second another female star, and there will be three with one of the most popular male stars of the day.

Our plans include a series of productions from the stories of a famous author whose picture successes have set a new standard for outdoor productions. The female star identified with this author’s latest work will be featured in our series.

Each picture is produced by a seasoned and tried organization, with a successful story approved by the public in a play or book form.

Home For Ind'p'dts?"

St. Louis Men Thinking of Erecting First Run Theater to House

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

St. Louis—Would it pay the inde-endent film exchanges and inde-ent theaters in a metropolitan district to construct a first run the-er to be devoted exclusively to the showing of first run independent productions?

That question is being seriously considered by certain independents here, and it is not beyond the realms of possibility that a large theater of this nature may be erected in the Grand Avenue theatrical district or in one of the downtown shopping districts.

It has been estimated that a modern theater with a seating capacity of from 1,500 to 2,500 could be constructed at a cost of $200,000.

The tentative locations have been selected on Grand Ave., between Olive St. and Morgan St., or on the Seventh or Eighth St., between Locust and St. Charles Sts.

A present the field is largely controlled by the Paramount and As-to First National interests.

William Fox has his own first run, the Liberty. The real independents have found it practically impossible to land a premier showing.

So Educational Sales Manager Finds—Back from Extensive Tour

Harry Ginsburg, domestic sales manager of Educational, has returned from a trip to practically every section of the country. The trip was made with the purpose of holding sales meetings, getting views on our individual products and their sales possibilities for the next year. All the districts surrounding the following cities were studied: Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, Denver, Omaha, Minneapolis, Chicago, Indianapolis.

In the majority of territories it was found that the exhibitor was in a very good frame of mind. Although much talk of depression and loss of attendance was heard, the reports indicate that it is realized by the fact that we are coming back to normal times. Of course industrial conditions in some of the very small towns are forcing the exhibitor to cut down the number of days that he gives his shows and in some instances have forced him to discontinue operating altogether.

A Big Improvement Over Star’s Recent Pictures

Eileen Percy in “BIG TOWN IDEAS”

Fox

DIRECTOR .................. Carl Harbaugh
AUTHOR ..................... John Montague
SCENARIO BY ............... John Montague
CAMERAMAN ................ Otto Brautigam
AS A WHOLE.......By far the best thing the star has had of late; some good comedy, especially in first half

STORY......Amusing situations with story laid in the “sticks”; several individually good sequences

DIRECTION.......Good; gets considerable fun out of depot lunchroom

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS .................. Fair CAMERA WORK ............... All right
STAR............Does good work, especially as waitress

SUPPORT.......None conspicuous, but all adequate

EXTERIORS .................. Satisfactory
INTERIORS .................. Suffice

DETAIL.....Titles slangy, but get over some comedy

CHARACTER OF STORY......Small town waitress with big ambitions rounds up a band of crooks and saves innocent man

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION....... About 5,000 feet

Eileen Percy has been running in hard luck of late in the stories provided for her, but in “Big Town Ideas” she has something a whole lot better. A good atmosphere of the “sticks” and some clever comedy business is obtained from the sequence dealing with a depot lunchroom. Miss Percy is made up regardless with a high pompadour, long earrings and general small town attire. She does her best work in this bit.

John Montagne’s story isn’t a knockout, but Director Harbaugh has done well with it and made the most of what comedy possibilities it contained. There is considerable implausibility which is obvious, but at the same time isn’t a serious fault, and even though the plot is thin throughout, it serves as a basis for the comedy that registers first rate. Director Harbaugh has done his best work in the first half of the picture.
The last half is mostly chase stuff with the star doing some acrobatic stunts that may or may not be the real thing. At any rate, the most laughs are in the first couple of reels, where the star makes flapjacks in a station lunchroom.

There a great many titles, mostly conversation, which are often funny despite free use of slang and some pet phrases popular with the tougher element.
The supporting cast is adequate, though everyone is kept pretty much in the background so that the star will shine. A slight evidence of poor cutting may be noticed once or twice.

Fannie is employed as waitress in the depot lunchroom of a small “hick” town. But her ambition is to go to New York. Fannie overhears two men and a woman talking and from the conversation Fannie learns that they are crooks and have had an innocent man “framed” for the theft of bonds which they stole.
A sheriff with the innocent man, Alan Dix, stops in the lunchroom en route to the penitentiary. Fannie promises the prisoner she will help him. She secures a job with a show company that gives a performance at the prison. Fannie helps Dix to escape and later joins him. They are followed by the prison officials, but eventually Fannie secures the stolen bonds from the real crooks and takes them to the Governor. Alan is pardoned and the crooks captured.

Some Good Comedy With Small Town Atmosphere

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You will be glad to get “Big Town Ideas,” for it is much better than anything Eileen Percy has had for some time. The story isn’t a wonder, but Director Harbaugh has given it a thoroughly adequate production and made the most of what comedy opportunities it afforded. It will be especially well received in smaller communities and the title itself should be enough to interest your folks if you are located in a small town.

You can promise them they’ll like this one and tell them the star plays the part of a waitress in a cheap depot restaurant. Stills of Miss Percy in her lunchroom regalia will attract attention. Her work in this comedy role is the best thing she has done in some time. Catchlines could read: “Fannie was a small town waitress with ‘Big Town Ideas,’ Were they realized? Well, see for yourself in Eileen Percy’s feature for Fox.”
A Striking Indictment Against War But Much Too Long

DIRECTOR .................... Abel Gance
AUTHOR ........................ Abel Gance
SCENARIO BY .................. Not credited
CAMERAMAN .................... Not credited

AS A WHOLE...... As title indicates, an accusation against war and all the horrors developing therefrom; questionable whether message told will particularly appeal to Americans

STORY...... Based upon novel of same name; while containing love incident, probably stressed with too much war incident to prove especially entertaining

DIRECTION .................. At times excellent PHOTOGRAPHY...... Usually good; some excellent effects LIGHTINGS...... Occasionally are not used to best advantage

CAMERA WORK ................. Very good
PLAYERS....... Severin-Mars gives one of the strongest performances ever noted on the screen; Marise Dauvray excellent; Romuald Joube capable EXTERIORS .............. Chiefly war sequences
INTERIORS .............. Satisfactory
DETAIL...... War scenes dominate; fairly well carried out

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Questionable whether or not American audiences want entertainment so heavily impressed with war incident

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.... About 10,000 feet

When “J’Accuse” appeared as a novel during the height of the World War, it created a tremendous impression, condemning vigorously, as it did, war and its subsequent effect upon peoples and nations. In its present form as screen entertainment, it is questionable whether American audiences will particularly care for it chiefly because of its length. Almost from the very start, with the exception of a few thousand feet, war incidents and sequences so completely dominate the production that in all likelihood it will become tiresome to the average audience. If this was cut to possibly six reels, the interest might be sustained to greater advantage. But then it is a question whether the continuity could be maintained.

There is a love story spread throughout but at times it is so thin that it fails to hold interest. The heroine, who, though the wife of one man is in love with another, becomes the mother of a child of a German. This, of course, is due to the ravages of war. In turn the jealous husband imagines the child is that of his wife and her lover. In the end the lover becomes insane. The husband dies and there is a general air of depression at the conclusion.

Toward the end of the picture the director has sounded a tremendously strong appeal when the poet-lover in his madness, summons all of the villagers at ten o’clock at night to receive a message from the soldier dead of France. In this Gance has tried, and very effectively shows, how the people of France need a message from their heroic dead and the manner in which the dead arise from the battlefield and stalk before the horrified villagers is a striking sequence. Unfortunately this was so long and arrives after such a tremendous overwhelming mass of war material that it falls somewhat to register as definitely and as powerful as the idea deserves. During this sequence Gance shows an unusually clever manipulation—the lower half of the screen being occupied by the horrified villagers, while the upper portion shows the straggling dead in review before them.

Leading actors of this country might well see the performance given by Severin-Mars. It is one of the finest pieces of acting ever shown on the screen. Marise Dauvray also gives a striking performance. Huge masses of extras are used excellently for the war scenes.

If Your People Like War Pictures, All Right—Otherwise Be Careful

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You know better whether your audience will stand for war pictures and you must be the judge of whether “J’Accuse” will please them. The love incident and the anger of the jealous husband is hardly strong enough to carry the picture from that angle, and the fact that neither the husband nor the lover participate in a happy ending is another matter for your consideration in view of the more or less general liking of American audiences for the happy ending.

It is a serious question whether the message delivered to the people of France by the heroic dead will appeal to the average American audience, even though Americans might well heed this and consider the preaching as coming to them as well. The average audience in America does not like to be preached to through the medium of the screen. If, however, war pictures are liked in your neighborhood, you can play “J’Accuse” with certainty that it will draw because the war incidents are usually well handled, sufficiently so to please. If the production is cut so that it can be run in the average house and not necessarily as a road show, you may be able to get away with it nicely. In its present form it would be difficult because of the footage.

You will have as a possible asset, the popularity of the book during the period of the war. That is about all inasmuch as the members of the cast are practically unknown to your patrons.

CHARACTER OF STORY . . . . . Wife takes her child and goes away with another man, realizes her mistake and eventually returns

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION . . . . . 6,497 feet

Competition in regard to eternal triangle themes is keen on Broadway this week. William DeMille’s “The Lost Romance” and Albert Capellani’s “The Wild Goose” are the contestants. The two stories are similar in the way of characters. Both have the young married couple, the child and the “other” man, also the good woman who brings about the reconciliation. The exception is that the home-wrecker of “The Wild Goose” is killed.

Gouverneur Morris’ story makes very poor entertainment for several reasons. In the first place it contains nothing that is new, some of the situations are utterly foolish and the dramatic sequences so impossible that at the Rialto the audience greeted them with laughs. The husband of the woman who tries to patch up the marital troubles of a man whom she has always loved is a most implausible character and the story would have benefited considerably by his absence.

The direction is generally satisfactory but there are some noticeably bad bits especially the handling of the more dramatic moments. They lose almost their entire force by small slip-ups that might have been avoided. This is especially true in the last reel when the husband realizes his wife’s infidelity. Also in this sequence there is considerable over-acting by Holmes Herbert, the husband, who is nevertheless a good actor. Mary MacLaren is unconvincing as the wife, and Dorothy Bernard adequate as the peace-maker. The titles throughout are too numerous and usually poorly written.

Frank and Diana Manners are happy until Diana is gently chastised by Frank for spending too much on clothes when they can’t afford it. For this she starts a flirtation with Mr. Fenn and spends much time with him when Frank is called away on business. Diana confesses that she loves Fenn and when Frank refuses a divorce, she takes her child and goes away with Fenn. Mrs. Hastings is a friend of the Manners’ and has always loved Frank, but who is true to her own husband “because it is her duty even if she doesn’t love him.” Mrs. Hastings, in trying to bring about a reconciliation between Frank and Diana makes her husband jealous, and she admits she has always loved Frank. Mr. Hastings solves the situation by inviting Mr. Fenn for a ride in his machine and dashing off a cliff. Both men are killed, Mrs. Hastings is a widow and Frank and Diana decide to live together again especially for the sake of the che-e-ild.

Little To Talk About In Announcing The Showing

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There isn’t much to talk about in announcing “The Wild Goose.” It won’t do to make any promises so if you are booked for it, it would be better to confine your advertising to the title mostly, and also use the name of the author. He is well known and his name mentioned in connection with the picture might attract attention. If your folks are acquainted with Mary MacLaren—they may have seen her in many Universal pictures—you might use her name. Tell them it is a Cosmopolitan production.

If your audience is partial to eternal triangle themes you might make use of catchlines such as, “If you were in love with a married man and his wife sought a divorce, would you even sacrifice your own husband to bring about a reconciliation between the man you love and his wife? It happens in ‘The Wild Goose.’” Various other lines can be used and it might be well to explain the title in some way. The Paramount press sheet will suggest a means.

Average Business For Showing But Won't Do For A Run

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

William DeMille's production
"THE LOST ROMANCE"
Paramount

You can play "The Lost Romance" without any serious effects in the way of kicks. There's nothing to kick about. At the same time there's nothing that will serve to benefit it in the way of word-of-mouth advertising. It is adequate for one time showing but not worthy of a run. The main objection to "The Lost Romance" is that it contains nothing that distinguishes it from other pictures so similar to it, either in story or production.

It has little box office appeal although the title may prove to have some drawing power. It is somewhat attractive. Also the names of the more important players may attract particularly if your folks liked "Midsummer Madness." Average business should result from the showing but that seems to be the most favorable forecast. If you think the theme would interest your patrons (it might the women), use catchlines in your announcements.

EXTERIORS ............................. Very beautiful
INTERIORS .............................. Good
DETAIL ............................. Titles poor CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Romance of the north in which good triumphs over evil

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 4,106 feet

The regular weekly release of Universal offers a really beautiful picture in "Wolves of the North." The locations secured are of scenic interest in themselves, several in particular are rare. There is one shot showing a snow covered cabin at the foot of a mountain while a little further in the background a great waterfall comes rushing over the cliff at an unusual height. Throughout the feature the scenic atmosphere is the dominant keynote.

Norman Dawn's story is along conventional lines of the Northern romance with the hero fighting a good and a bad influence, the Puritanical heroine who brings about his regeneration and the customary saloon scenes and the usual dance hall girls. There is a bit too much prominence given to the latter. "Wolves of the North" isn't very new as a whole and it lacks some good action. One fight is about all the action there is and the romance might have been given better play, leaving out much of the dance hall business.

Whoever wrote the titles for the picture seems to have been carried away by the beauty of the settings for he has worded his captions with flowery adjectives and they are intent upon preaching. For a time the spectator is led to believe that the story will take on a twist familiar in one of the Curwood stories, that of the wolf-dog, but the dog is introduced evidently for the sole purpose of comparing him to good and bad in the man.

Aurora Thresk lives up North with her father. She is loved by David, a weakling, and by "Wiki" Jack, a degenerate. While "Wiki" is benefited by Aurora's good influence, David mistakes her rejection of his proposal, thinking that she refuses because he (David) doesn't know enough of the world. He sets out to prove he can be worthy by mixing with the dance hall girls. In the meantime "Wiki" battles with good and evil and eventually good wins out. Aurora journeys to the town where David has gone but it is too late. An avalanche of snow destroys the cabin saloon and David is killed. Aurora marries "Wiki."

Good Program Picture For Any Theater

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Because the picture is so good to look at folks are sure to overlook a somewhat weak story in this instance. You can go the limit on promises regarding the settings and Northern atmosphere generally. Stills of the prettier scenes posted in the lobby will attract attention. Universal will probably furnish you with stills of the scene showing the falls and the one of the avalanche.

If the star is a favorite with your patrons use her name and tell them she is seen in a new role. Catchlines might be used but they may make the story sound too familiar, so it would be better to base your promises and exploitation mainly on the Northern atmosphere telling them about the locations and scenic effects. Perhaps Universal can furnish you with interesting paragraphs relative to the filming of the picture.
Some Short Reels

Screen Snapshots No. 25—C. B. C.—State Rights

Type of production...........................................1 reel magazine

Jackie Coogan is in this one. So is May McAvoy, and other people of interest. It looks off with a fashion show by Universe and Christie girls. We next hear devoted to Mrs. Ralph Sack, Lucille, sister of Anita Stewart, who displays some new costumes. Edie Kenton, who directed "A Small Town Idol," is shown at work in the studio, with Louise Fazenda, who is further up than she sometimes succeeds in being in actual stuff; and with Chester Conklin and the juvenile, John Henry, Jr. May McAvoy's departure for the West is next. Barbara Castleton and Director Tom Walsh bid her good bye. The hit that follows shows Walter Hiers in the studio and includes business of giving drinks of water to three or four extra girls. Some double exposure stuff that is not up to standard gives good suspension before the showing of Jackie Coogan on his visit to New York, getting a hair cut, buying clothes, walking along the street followed by a crowd; and talking to Marcus Low, Babe Ruth and Mayoral Hylan.

The shot that follows from making love to some pretty natural tiny girl child of about his own age has big human interest.

"Monte Carlo"—Paramount-Burton Holmes

Type of production...........................................1 reel travelogue

This is the story of the ultra-rich and the bounteous of Fortunes thrill-seekers is shown in this standard Burton Holmes. Birds-eye shots from the hills reveal the city nesting like an amphitheatre on the shoulders of the mountains of the borderland. Closer, the streets are shown, circling the water and climbing steep grades under Italian Renaissance: arches, by churches, office buildings, palaces and hotels. The cameras are centered on the Casino, Orleans, the shot of the tables at Nice. The strong sharp faced gamblers is shown instead of the board. Outside faultlessly dressed marksmen are shown shooting live birds as they leave the traps. This is a particularly good bit. The rest is scenic.

"Three Jokers"—Vanity Comedy-Educational

Type of production...........................................1 reel comedy

This is the story of an irate father who forbade his daughter to marry until she had received three proposals. The daughter, Irene Dalton, and her lover, Earl Rodney, scheming out the additional suitors very shortly. They accumulate a cabinet habitue and a nervous individual with large spectacles who is already engaged. The cabinet bound braves the old man in his den with the result that he is summarily dismissed after a success of acrobatics. The spectacled youth is not easy to persuade, but at length is led to try his luck. Father at this juncture discovers the scheme, and at the point of a revolver forces his daughter to marry the wrong man, taking care that he gets an actor to take part of the clergyman so the contract will not be binding. Earl Rodney attempts to break up the ceremony, first disguised as a cop, and then in a widow's weeds. The jam ending is good.

"The Eagle Man"—Star Ranch Western—C. B. C.—State Rights

Type of production...........................................2 reel western

This is the story of a girl art student who went west with her convalescent brother, to win back health to him. She rescues him from the pranks of a gang of roughnecks in the little western town and wins the admiration of their leader, who is stirred by her to shave and dress up and desert his old comrades who are scheming to rob the stage. After, on horseback, he wows the boys and they get their work in the fields below. He is uninvitingly used as a model by the girl, who calls him "the Eagle Man." He saves her from the attack of a desperado at the time when the stage is being robbed. The brother is innocently implicated, but when Hatton captures the real highwayman, and has the brother freed he wins the love of the girl, who is Catherine Craig. The erstwhile round-about pins on the star of a deputy sheriff and stays in town instead of going back to the ranges.

"The Merry Little Put-Put"—Bruce Scenic-Educational

Type of production...........................................1 reel scenic

There are some unusually well chosen shots in this scene which is excellent advertising for a type of motor that may be attached to the rear of a row boat. Two men start a tour of Thomas Bay and LeConte Bay, Alaska, in a small boat. They encounter rough water in a heavy wind over the face of the lake, and head into a little river at the end of the bay. The ice breaks up when the tides lift the king-bergs off the bar and the boat shoots out into open water. The story in this scene, while vague and lost at times, helps materially to make it interesting.

Pathé Review No. 103

Type of production...........................................1 reel magazine

For a magazine, this Pathé may be thought to be rather below the standard, but it is nevertheless interesting. It begins with some shots of macarooning, showing the various processes used by the mill surgeons in their tasteful work. There follows some good speed camera stuff of a pony canting in a figure of eight, revealing in a satisfying way the speed of the movement of a thoroughbred. The next number is excellent propaganda for girl's camps; it shows a number of vacationists of the fair sex canoeing under a bright sky on the far-reaching bosom of Lake Otsego; participating in Indian dancing and prayer; returning to camp on skis in a swaying porch-swing in the moonlight. A few shots of turtles and tortoises recreate some color stuff of the Indre river.

"Let Me Explain"—Christie-Educational

Type of production...........................................1 reel comedy

A good average slapstick in this Christie comedy, though it is certainly not new in story. Earl Rodney is married to Viora Daniel and they star on their honeymoon. Earl is the holder of a job as manager of the affairs of his uncle, who is a woman hater. The uncle arrives in town and breaks up the honeymoon, but not before the newies have encountered Josephine Hill and her new husband. Miss Daniel makes believe she is Rodney's maid when the uncle comes to visit. The uncle makes love to Miss Daniel, but Earl Rodney is in making excuses and in explaining, brings in his pal to act as her husband while he is forced by circumstances to represent himself as the fiancée of Miss Hill. The old situation is amusingly suggested and should go over. The snap ending comes when the uncle admits he knew all the time of the state of affairs in the beginning, and that he had long ago ceased to hate the fair sex.

"Constantinople and the Galata Bridge"—Paramount-Burton Holmes

Type of production...........................................1 reel travelogue

All the races of the earth passing in their respective garbs across the bridge of Galata, over the Golden Horn, between Stamboul and the European section, are shown in this up-to-the-standard Burton Holmes. Here and there in the cosmopolitan crowd are variously uniformed soldiers of the Allies; French Senegalese Negro troops, British Gurkhas and Punjabis, from India; Italian carabinieri and others. Unveiled Turkish women pass by. Natives wearing the old fashioned flowing robes and billowing trousers follow their modernized one homed store ties, derbies and walking sticks. Through the crowd pass strong porters bearing ponderous burdens with oriental fortitude. Beyond the toll-takers at the bridge's end rise the minarets of a great mosque, and the crowded shipping at the docks and the forest of masts.

Action!

Experience has taught the exhibitor that the picture that gets the money is the picture that keeps things on the jump.

"Wet Gold" has the universal appeal of action—spine-tingling, hair-trigger action!

Things get started in the first hundred feet, and never let up till the final fade-out. And it's action that means something, with an unusual story, fine acting, and some of the most remarkable under-water photography ever taken.

If there ever was a picture that sounded like a clean-up, "Wet Gold" is its name!

A human torpedo launched into mid-ocean from the tube of a submarine.

A hair-raising horse-race at the Havana Race Track.

A hand-to-hand fight between an unarmed man and a man-eating shark.

Exciting struggle for life in quicksands on the floor of the sea.

Censorship

A Fact in New York—Governor Miller Signs Bill—Northern Jersey

Situation Interesting

Governor Miller signed the censorship bill on Saturday before leaving for Atlantic City. When he returns in about two weeks, in all likelihood the personnel of the Censorship Board may be announced, although this may be held until later. The act is effective August 1.

An interesting development with regard to the censorship bill is the fact that prints for Northern New Jersey will be affected. The exhibitors of that section are supplied from the New York exchanges. This may necessitate an entirely different set of prints for New Jersey in lieu of the censored prints used in New York.

There is some talk in film circles that the censorship bill will be attacked immediately on the grounds of its being unconstitutional. This, following the lines laid down by former Justice Jenks in the brief he filed with the Governor in opposition to the bill. No definite information was, however, obtainable on this point on Saturday.

Brunet Sails

Very unexpectedly Paul Brunet sailed on Saturday on the Olympic for Paris. At the Pathe offices no information was obtained relative to his sudden departure.

It would not be surprising if some interesting developments occurred almost immediately Mr. Brunet arrives in Paris. As indicated exclusively in this publication, Mr. Brunet may resign as head of the American company unless there is a decided change towards the operations of the American company by some of the members of the board of the parent (French) company.

New Pathé Series

Playgoers Pictures, Inc., will release several independently made productions through Pathé, the first to be "The Butterfly Girl," starring Marjorie Daw. It will be released on June 12th.

Charles O. Weston, the producer, arranged for the release through the office of Arthur S. Kane. Negotiations are under way for the release of another picture acquired by Weston, and it is probable that a series of such releases for Playgoers Pictures will be announced in the near future.

Knoles Sails

Harley Knoles left for England on Sunday aboard the Olympic.

Censors in Mass.
Governor Cox, Expected to Sign Measure Bringing Censorship to the Bay State
(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Boston—Film talk here who have been active in the fight against the proposed censorship act have about given up hope. The bill which finally passed the Senate late Friday night will go to Gov. Cox for action, and even the most optimistic here have little idea that he will not sign it. As a matter of fact everyone confidently anticipates he will sign the bill. The act becomes effective Jan. 1, 1922. It is possible that a hearing will be arranged in behalf of picture interests prior to the Governor signing the bill. Jack Connolly of the National Association was here on Saturday regarding this.

There is some interesting talk here of why a number of legislators changed their attitude with regard to the bill.

The bill provides that all film shall be submitted to the State Department of Public Safety for approval. The inspection fee is to be $2 per reel of 1,000 ft. If a picture with 3,000 ft. is submitted the fee will be $8. An appeal from decisions of the department will be heard in public hearing before the commissioner, and if further appeal is desired before the Superior Court. First offense will be subjected to a $50 fine and each succeeding offense to a $100 fine.

Just Moved, That's All
Clark Irving phoned this office on Saturday to say that Max Linder was still here. All that happened was that Linder and Irving packed their belongings and moved from the Commodore across the street to the Biltmore.

Linder is here with his second picture, "My Wife," which will be released through Robertson-Cole.

First National Men Arrive from All Points—Some Interesting Announcements Expected

The second annual convention of the exchange members of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., will open at 10 o’clock this morning at the Park Hotel. There will be two business sessions today: one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

Present plans call for the termination of business at 5:30 o’clock each day. The branch managers, 38 in all, will be here today, tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday for general discussion of sales policies for the fall season, while analyses of business conditions in all sections of the country will be made. Most of them arrived in New York over the weekend, although several of them reached town late last week. The incoming trains yesterday from the Far West and Middle West, however, brought in the majority of them.

It is expected that First National officials will make important announcements to make from day to day regarding additions to the production schedule. It is the first that important franchise holders are here for the convention, among them Robert Lieber, president of the circuit; E. V. Richards and Julian Saenger of New Orleans, Sam Katz of Chicago, N. H. Gordon of Boston and A. H. Blank of Des Moines.

ALL THE CARDS ON THE TABLE
An English Producer anxious to gain a foothold in the American Market, has placed with us for State’s Rights Distribution, a delightfully charming modern picture called starring VIOLET HOPSON, one of the most beautiful women in England and STEWART ROME—one of the best known actors on the English stage.

“A DAUGHTER OF EVE”

For quick action we are offering this picture on a straight 60/40 basis, with a slight advance. Also the option to purchase outright at territorial percentage of $25,000 fifteen days after the first run showing in individual territories. Do not judge the picture by the price.

This is one of the most unusual and liberal offers ever made to the States Rights Buyer, and it means quick action.

It is our belief that “A DAUGHTER OF EVE” has big box office value and is a most unusual opportunity to make a lot of money.

Meeting Planned
N. A. M. P. I. Executive Committee to Discuss Censorship Situation—Test Case Talked Of

The executive committee of the National Association will meet today, possibly, to discuss the censorship situation.

As indicated yesterday, there is a strong possibility that a test case will be made to test the constitutionality of the law. The matter, it is understood, will be discussed at that meeting.

There was considerable interest manifested yesterday in the statement issued by Almet F. Jenkins, of Jenkins and Rogers. Judge Jenkins, it will be recalled, filed a brief with Governor Miller before the Clayton-Lusk bill was signed in which he questioned the constitutionality of the measure. Gabriel L. Hess, chairman of the N. A. M. P. I. Committee, likewise issued a statement in which he said the legality of the law is undoubtedly "one which the courts will pass upon." Some of the New York papers commented editorially on the.

This Speaks for Itself!

Here's Every Word of the New York Tribune's Review
By One of the Leading Critics of America—It's Worth Money to Every Exhibitor to Read It

By Harriette Underhill

Reviewing "Gypsy Blood" at the Strand Theater will prove to be a convert to the love of the Ain. We wish that it had been made right here in America, so that we might exhaust our list of adjectives with a clear con-est for it. It is one of the best pictures we have seen, and American directors and actors would do well to go and study the methods of these foreigners who produced it. Picture. To our way of thinking it is even better than either of its predecessors ("Passion" and "Deception") done by the same director, Ernest Lubitsch.

Never have we seen such realism on the screen and Pola Negri is a powerful actress, who is fascinating, beautiful in a way that has character for its foundation, and intelligent. As Carmenita in "Gypsy Blood," she gives a goruous performance.

Not in the five years that we have seen pictures have we been so soothed with the performance of an actress on the screen and she is the first one we ever felt that we wanted to write to and say: "I think you are a grand actress. Will you kindly send your photograph to above address?" But Pola Negri can be interviewed by us any time she wishes.

This thing which distinguishes her work is noticeable in the performance of every one in the cast. We doubt very much if any of the scenes have been rehearsed. One, who gave a per-bance worthy of the picture gave the excellence to Mr. Lubitsch. We had been feeling strongly on the subject of this importation of German films, but "Gypsy Blood" has convinced us. We wouldn't have missed it for the world, and if American producers were wise it will set a new standard for pictures.

The story unfolds so naturally on the screen. There are no cuts to interrupt the continuity. The star is not brought into the foreground all the time. She does not make a spectacular entrance; she is simply introduced walking a parade with a lot of other cigarette girls. The play is a slice of life; the camera discovers the characters doing ordinary, homely things and records their actions on the film.

You can't imagine the director saying: "Now, all ready! Camera!" The actors talk and laugh and turn their backs to the camera and the picture goes on, beginning at the beginning and without any cuts. Motion with Carmen's death at the hands of Don Jose.

The presentation is full of fire and dash, and this version of Carmen we like much better than Bizet's version.
Also there never could be another Car-mens like Pola Negri. When Geraldine Farrar and Theda Bara appeared simultaneously as Bizet's heroine we missed both pictures, but we are quite sure, from what we read of them, that both interpretations were quite different from this one.

They said that Miss Farrar was an altering Spanish beauty and that Miss Bara was a vampiro who expressed passion by winking her eyelashes very fast. But Mme. Negri is just a hot-blooded peasant girl, slovenly in her manner and her walk, with a face to be beautiful nor vampirish; she is bold and vulgar and bad and Carmen, the gypsy girl, every moment.

Others in the cast were good, too.
There was Don Jose, who gave a per-bance which ranked almost equally with Mme. Negri's. Ernesto Dessi (Don Jose of the opera) and Rodriguez, all gave noteworthy perform-ings.

When we go to see the picture again
we shall leave before Carmen's death.
It is too realistic to be wholly enjoyable. Now, if Pola Negri were only to come over here and become an American citizen our joy would be without alloy. The story has been adapted from the original French story by Prosper Merimée.

to co-operate

an organization similar to the National Association is now being formed in Canada. Its membership will include all the important branches of the industry in the Dominion, each province forming a division of the association. Temporary headquarters have been established in 21 Dundas St., Toronto, the headquarters of the Canadian M. P. Distributors' Association, of which Col. John A. Cooper is chairman of the advisory board.

Col. Cooper, when in New York, called upon Frederick H. Elliott and inquired the plan and scope of the organization. The film distributors of Canada are already well or- ganized. Their organization, the Canadian M. P. Distributors' Ass'n, will be the nucleus around which will be structured the larger association.

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Louis—Dr. George Mandelaris, who is associated with Harry Koplar in the Lafayette theater and Rus- sardome, has filed suit in the Circuit Court against Koplar for an ac- count of $3,000.

Mandelaris alleges he had $2,000 in the theaters; that Koplar in- duced him to agree to the transfer to Famous Players' Missouri Corp., ceding him $2,000 for his stock and raising him more should there be any possible profit. After the sale was final- ized, he further alleges the stock sold for $5,000. The entire loss is $12,000.

M. P. T. O. To See President Harding Today—Plan for National Convention

(By Long Distance Phone)

Washington—The Motion Picture Theater Owners of America will offer the screens of the country today to President Harding, to be used in whatever fashion the President may deem advisable. A conference has been arranged with the President at noon.

The forthcoming national convention was discussed yesterday. In all likelihood it will be held the week of July 4 in Minneapolis. The executive committee and officers will meet previous to the general convention, about July 1, while the convention proper will undoubtedly open July 6. There is no opposition voiced here against Sydney S. Cohen.

The discussions were held under way yesterday morning at the Hotel Washington. On Tuesday, all of the officials were at the races at Pimlico, Md., where they all lost money. From there they came to Washing- ton.

The executive committee went into session yesterday morning at 11 o'clock and at 4 o'clock in the after- noon was still meeting. The general legislative program was given. Additional topics will be discussed today. The program will call for a revision of the 5% rental tax, the adoption of a more equitable contract with distributors, the music tax, etc.

The complete roster is as follows:

Sydney S. Cohen, New York, President; C. C. Griffin, Oakland, Vice-President; Joseph Hopp, Chicago, 2nd Vice-President; W. C. Patterson, Atlanta, 3rd Vice-President; C. W. Gates, Aberdeen, S. D., 4th Vice-President; E. T. Peter, Dallas, Treas- urer; Sam Bulluck, Cleveland, Ex- ecutive Secretary, and M. Van Prag, Kansas City (Ran), Recording Secre- tary.

The executive committee: C. L. O'Reilly, New York; W. H. Linton, Utica, N. Y.; S. Kanter, Nor- theast.

Adors Opinions

"Through the Back Door"—United Artists—Strasberg Edition

TRIBUNE—It is so silly and so cheap that we found it difficult to place the blame where it belonged and pass over our sentiment to Mary Pickford, the star.   The photography is perfectly beautiful.

"The Idol of the North"—F. P. L. Raitt

TRIBUNE—To be quite fair, a lot of people said that they thought it was a great picture, and we are glad that they did, because we like to see people please.

EVENING WORLD—In this role she displayed her versatility and fascinates by her beauty and vivacity.

"Boys Will Be Boys"—Goldwyn Capital

WORLD—In Irving Cobb's play, "Boys Will Be Boys," Mr. Rogers finds a scenario which is more to his taste than anything into which he has been placed by the Goldwyns in recent months. His picture is interesting and sensible.

POST—The picture, "Boys Will Be Boys," is well filmed by Goldwyn, and Rogers fits itself well into the Cobb character.

The Second Day

The second day of the First Na-\,tional convention was not marked by any development of unusual impor-\,tance. The discussions were continued all during the day. In the evening the visitors and circuit offici-\,als were the guests of Hope Hampton, who entertained at dinner at the Clare.

On Broadway

Rivoli

The Rivoli orchestra has selected "Merry Wives of Windsor" as the overture this week. A Post Nature scene, "Treet--A Noble Folly," is the second number. "Serenade" is then rendered by Miriam Las, Nathalie Jackson, June Wynn and Susan Clough. The Rivoli Pictorial is then shown and is followed by "Shane," starring Ethel Clayton. The Rivoli orchestra after the feature plays "Old Timers' Waltz." The comedy is "The Hayseed" with Al St. John. It is from the Fox-Sunset studio. "Fantasia" is the concluding organ solo.

Strand

Patrice Carey at the Strand sings "My Hero" from "The Chocolate Soldier," accompanied by the Strand orchestra. The Topical Review is the next number and is followed by the Strand Male Quartette. The feature is "Through the Back Door," starring Mary Pickford. The comedy is "The Skipper's Scheme," one of the Toonerville Trolley series. "The Melody of Peace" is the organ solo, which concludes the performance.

Capitol

Selections from "Faust" are rendered this week at the Capitol as the overture. The Capitol Review is the second number and is followed by a repeated engagement of "The Runaway Train," by Lyman H. Howe. Erik Rye and Maria Samson then render a duet from "Pagliacci." The Capitol News is the next number. It is followed by Ballet Divers, composed of two numbers, "Narcissus" and "The Flatterer." "Love's Idyll" is his third reeler.

Rialto

"Dance of the Hours," from "La Gioconda," is the overture at the Rialto this week. The comedy is "Hit Rebo," produced by Christie. The concluding organ solo is "Marche Pontificale." "The Birth" Banned in Boston

Boston—City officials have suspended the license of the Shubert theater where "The Birth of a Nation" was scheduled to open Monday night. The decision was reached after a private showing given because of the protests lodged by a delegation of 10 negroes earlier in the day.

The Pathé offices report a renewed demand for "Daredevil Jack," the Dempsey serial. Zukor has secured the services of Markiewicz to be in charge of the studio activities and has also acquired the large plant at the Zoological Gardens in the West End of Berlin. A subsidiary company known as the E. F. A. Studio Co. has been formed.

What of Negri?
(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Berlin—Now that Adolph Zukor has his own organization in Central Europe, will Pola Negri go to America as has been often stated?
The difficulties of making pictures in America with Miss Negri are obvious, since she does not speak English. If Ernst Lubitsch should direct her—and it seems logical to assume that he will—matters would be facilitated by continuing production here in Berlin, where Lubitsch is thoroughly familiar with production methods.

Goldwyn Closes Foreign Contracts
J. H. Hoffberg of Goldwyn's foreign sales department has closed two contracts, this time in Japan, Cuba and Porto Rico, calling for the distribution of Goldwyn's fourth year product in these countries. This follows the announcement of a new contract in Mexico, covering in addition to the fourth year pictures, the first series of Booth Tarkington's two-reel "Edgar" comedies.

Some Talk in Rome of Important Italian Combination Under Way
— Confirmation Lacking
(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Rome—There is considerable talk in trade circles here that an important combination of film interests in Rome and Turin is under way to operate in opposition to the Unione Cinematografica Italiana—the U. C. I. The report as discussed here is that the new trust will be backed by an influential Italian bank, which has, so far, not taken any active interest in films.

Negotiations between the U. C. I., and Fert Films for an amalgamation of the latter with the U. C. I. have fallen through. It may be that Fert Film will head an entirely new combination of producers to be affiliated with the U. C. I.

Budapest, Hungary—A film club has been formed here with a capitalization of 1,000,000 crowns. It will have its own club house.

Germans Top List
(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Berlin—Figures covering the importation of films into Czecho-Slovakia have been received here. They show that the Germans are in control of that market, having exported to that country 54% of the total in 1920. France supplied 21% and America 13%.

A screen version of David Belasco's famous play, "The Heart of Maryland," is scoring a great success at the Rialto.

This thrilling story of the struggle between the North and South is too well known to require repetition.

The production and cast are exceptionally good, and the picture is certainly one of the best that has been shown here.

Catherine Calvert, a remarkably handsome girl, presents a most picturesque and attractive appearance as the patriotic young Southerner, Maryland, and her performance is admirable throughout.

Crane Wilbur, who is very popular in this city, gives fresh proof of his histrionic excellence by the natural and manly manner in which he plays the hero. The remaining characters, down to the very smallest one, are in competent hands.

The fact that the picture was filmed in Maryland and is an accurate reproduction of the localities in which its story is laid imparts to it an extra charm.

Drastic Fire Rules
Provided For in Ordinance Now Pending—Brady Confers With

A drastic ordinance covering fire hazards in exchanges, laboratories and studios in Greater New York is now pending before the Board of Aldermen. The provisions of the ordinance are so severe, that, it is the contention of the National Association, many exchanges, and other film establishments who are affected by it would be forced out of the city.

William A. Brady, as owner of the Paragon laboratory, members of the Fire Prevention Committee of the N. A. M. F. I., and Albert De Roode, who represents the association in fire prevention matters, had a conference yesterday afternoon with Fire Commissioner Thomas J. Brennan regarding the measure.

This move followed a meeting of the Fire Prevention Committee of the National Association held on Tuesday at which exchanges, laboratories and studios were well represented.

Building requirements called for in the measure would necessitate the complete reconstruction of expensive work in connection with the storage and handling of film—work that has already been done with the approval of the Fire Department.

It is the contention of the N. A. M. F. I., that ample safeguards have already been placed around the housing and handling of film and that while the laboratories, studios and exchanges are heftily in favor of cooperating thoroughly with all reasonable commitments of the Fire Department, the proposed restrictions would seriously impede the rapidity and economy of conducting their business without materially adding to the safeguards from the standpoint.

To Offset Fires

Nat'l Fire Protective Ass'n To Consider Ban on Inflammable Film

A matter of considerable importance to the trade in general will be discussed at the forthcoming convention of the National Fire Protective Association, to be held in San Francisco. It has to do with a resolution which has been brought up before the organization relative to the use of inflammable raw stock for the production of pictures and their later exhibition in theaters.

The resolution provides for the elimination of all inflammable material and the substitution of a non-inflammable stock, so as to decrease the fire hazard in theaters.

The National Association has been invited to send a representative to the convention which will take place June 14-16. The association, deems the matter one of importance. There is now pending before the Board of Aldermen an important ordinance that would seriously affect the local situation as far as storage of films is concerned. Details will be found in an adjoining column.

The Independent Market

Why Organization Is Needed

Views of one of the most important distributors in the independent field, as to why an organization is needed in that branch of the industry.

Because in organization there is strength—and we need all the strength we can find.

Because it is the one sure fire way of raising the tone of the independent market.

Because it is the surest way of attracting producers of merit to make for us the sort of pictures that count.

It will drive from the field the wrong type of men who, infesting it in parts, lower the whole tone of the market.

Because by common understanding we can reach a definite position—and this is badly needed.

Let us get together some time in July. Why not in Minneapolis when the M. P. T. O. are meeting. We could do a number of things to co-operate with the exhibitors, and is there a better time? Incidentally, we might be able to talk real business with the exhibitors.

We might be able to show the exhibitors that without us they are constantly at the mercy of the more important producers, and that by working with us they could keep the market open—something they need as much as we do.

The American Business Corp., offices at 1780 Broadway, will develop a series of exchanges throughout the country. The first one has been secured: the Magnet Exchange on the 8th floor of the Godfrey Bldg.

"Let's Correct The Wrongs", Says Distributor

Tells What They Are Says Operators Take Every Advantage When They Can—Some Facts

"Let's correct some of the wrongs of the independent market before we talk about an organization in that field," said one of the largest and most important of the distributors. "Let's call things by their right name; let's get somewhere."

"Here are some facts."

"Fully 40 per cent of the country, so far as the independent field is concerned, is in the hands of men who take every advantage they can, and who practically make it impossible to do business. At all events they operate in such a manner that there can be no profit in any transaction in which they are involved. This seems like a big figure, but it gives names and places if necessary.

"These operators know they have practically no opposition in the independent field which they are covering. They calmly offer you $1,500 for a big feature when they know that on a normal basis the feature should bring $10,000 at least from the territory. And they let you know that they don't care whether you take it or leave it. When you put it up to them that they are keeping real, valuable, worth-while productions from the independent field by such methods it fails to move them. Yet at the same feature, if handled by one of the larger distributing organizations, goes in their territory and gets a big batch of bookings—all of it business they might have had, but they were too short sighted."

"Sometimes I wonder if these men aren't deliberately trying to keep the general tone of productions in the independent field down to their own level."

"We all know that if a man had his own money invested in business that he works harder and better than if it is on salary for some one else. All of us know we can get real money for our product on this business, but how many stand up for a price? Sometimes, too often, realizing what he is up against, a distributor will take a very low price at all, and is glad to get it, but this only hurts the field generally."

"Let us have as one of the big ideas of this field this slogan: 'live and let live.'"

Osborne To Lecture

Toledo—Thomas Mott Osborne has made arrangements to deliver a series of lectures before clubs and societies here next week when his picture, "The Right Way," is shown at the Pantheon.

The Producers Security Corp., which handles the film has received word that the picture has passed the Ohio State Board of Censorship without a single cut.

A stirring tale of one of the most interesting periods of American history is told in "The Heart of Maryland," the picture version of David Belasco’s famous stage success, at the Rialto Theatre.

The play is filled with action, suspense and dramatic situations, while at the same time there is a vein of humor, which relieves the more tense situations. The film shows all of the big scenes, including the bell tower spectacular, where Maryland clings to the clapper of a swinging bell to prevent it ringing and giving the alarm of her lover’s escape.

The settings for the play are particularly interesting, and ring true. Windy Bill Manor, where Aaron Burr was concealed; the Briars, the famous mansion used as General Grant’s headquarters during the Civil War, and other historic spots were used in the picture.

Chaplin Sure to Please

According to a copyrighted cable published in the Times, Shakespeare would have delighted in Charlie Chaplin, declares George Bernard Shaw in giving his support to a scheme for using the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon for cinema performances.

The cable continues:
"Some opposition is being shown to the project, which originated with the governors of the memorial the-er, and The Bookman's Journal has asked the views of well-known men.
Professor Saintsbury writes that the proposal set him to thinking what an excellent night club St. Paul's Ca-tedral would make. Edmund Gosse regards the scheme as an instance of fragrant and shocking vulgarity.
"John Drinkwater, while granting that the arguments for and against motion pictures are weighty on both sides, thinks that no sort of experi-dience can make the decision anything but a regrettable confusion of issues. Sir Sidney Lee, like Shaw, upholds the governors' scheme."

In the Courts

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has decided that the Vitagraph Company must pay a judgment of $3,000.00 to the Brooklyn Majestic Theater for breach of an agreement that the film, "Womanhood," would not be shown in any theater in Brooklyn for six weeks before or five weeks after it was exhibited at the plaintiff's theater. The plaintiff wanted to show the film again several times after it was first presented and the defendant said that other theaters in Brooklyn had had the suit brought. The defense was that the clause in the contract under which the plaintiff sued referred to the exhibition of any other film showing the same cast, and not to the same film.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Platteck gave a verdict for $8,375 in a suit of L. G. Vacek Co. against the Filmart Laboratories, Inc., to rec-cover a balance due for raw film sold amounting to $8,375.

A default judgment for $629 has been filed in the City Court by John

World Reports Federal Investigation

The World publishes the following dispatch from Washington:
"Complaints that the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., of New York, is a combination in restraint of trade in the motion picture field have been under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, is learned to today. A preliminary report on the complaints was made some weeks ago, but the commission has taken no action.

"Concerns in the South preferred the complaints. They alleged that the Famous Players Corp., as produc-

obtained a stranglehold through the South, coming into control of virtually every theater there. This, it was added, was brought about through the Jesse Lynch Co., the system followed being essentially this:

"A profitable or promising field with a theater already established would be visited by a Lynch agent with an offer to buy. The offer would be refused, and the owner would then be impressed with the fact that the Lynch organization

Dover, Del.—Sherry Pictures, Inc., have formed here with a capitalization of $4,125,000. The Corporation Trust Co. of America acted as attorneys for the new corporation.

The office of William L. Sherry in the Godfrey Bldg. refused to talk about the plans of Sherry Pictures, included, its offices, on the interview. Mr. Sherry was out of town and that in his absence no one could talk for him.

There has been some talk in the past few weeks that Sherry, who was the organ of the Faris Film Corp., had an important deal under way, but it has been difficult to ascertain what the nature of the transaction is. He did deny last week that it had to do with the operation of a chain of theaters, as had been reported. It would not prove surprising if Sherry entered the distributing field again.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Los Angeles—Purl Wilkerson, producing director of the California, devised a unique prologue for the presentation of Will Rogers in, "Boys Will Be Boys!"

Wilkerson divided the huge California stage into three sections. On the left side was a big barn set, in the center a boat landing scene and on the right an old Southern home drop.

Three blackface and one white character made up a quartette which sang old plantation numbers before the barn set and the boat landing scene, while a mixed quintette sang a medley of old songs in front of the old Southern home drop, and a male trio sang the duel scene from "Faust."

A clever Southern clod dancer stopped the show at nearly every performance. Will Rogers in "Boys Will Be Boys," drew capacity audiences to the huge theater all week.

Toledo, O.—Hal Olver, Goldwyn's representative in the Pittsburg, Buffalo and Cleveland territory, had himself swung up to a wire stretched from the top of a hotel to a building on the opposite side of the street and there, suspended head down from the wire, released himself from a straight-jacket in which he was encased. He wore a black mask. This was worked while "What Happened to Rosa" was at the Alhambra.

The newspapers gave considerable space to the stunt and large crowds were attracted to the theater while Olver was pulling the stunt.

Utica, N. Y.—Hathaway of the Alhambra, Utica, put dash cards on 175 street cars and 350 hangers inside of the cars for "A Small Town Idol." He also had a contest for newboys to boost the circulation of the Observer carrying his display advertising. The boys wore each a quarter sheet just tag board. Hathaway also enlarged a telegram 18 by 4 feet and hung it under the marquee.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Hal Olver, Goldwyn's man in Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo, came here when "Prisoners of Love" was at the Isla there. After a week of teaser ads, Olver got a crowd into Campau Square to see him play a searchlight on a suddenly unfurled banner. It attracted considerable attention.

Omaha—"The Faith Healer" was recently put over here by R. C. Cary, who sent a cameraman downtown in an automobile and impressed the crowd that they were being shot. He did take some pictures which were shown at the Rialto. The car bore a banner which read, "We Are Looking for the Faith Healer!"

could prevent the present owner from obtaining any picture he had shown yesterday, he was told that unless he agreed to sell, a new theater would be erected near that he owned. A resolution was then given him to think about it and to make an offer.

"It is alleged this system has been used particularly in those cities known as 'key' cities, which are the points from which distribution of pictures for a given territory is made. In the first run theaters of these cities, controlled by the Famous Players, through the Lynch company, only pictures made or distributed by the Famous Players are exhibited. The result here, it is said, is that there is a saturation of pictures throughout that territory. The head of the Lynch enterprise, it was also complained, is such a heavy stockholder in the Famous Players-Lasky Co., that it has been rumored that within a year he, himself, may head the Famous Players Co.

"It is further stated that in New York there are only five first run picture theaters, the Rivoli, Rialto, Criterion, Rivoli and Capitol. The first three are controlled by the Famous Players, the last by Fox and Goldwyn. Another first run theater is to be built in New York within the year, it is said, to be owned by a Philadelphia man 'who has done for the Famous Players what Lynch has done in the South.'

Note—The "Jesse Lynch" company referred to in the World dispatch of yesterday, is, of course, the S. A. Lynch Enterprises which control the Paramount circuit in the Southern States for a long period of years. The dispatch also states that Fox controls the Strand, which is undoubtedly the city's first National house.

It will be recalled some time ago that WID'S DAILY stated that Famous Players-Lasky was under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission. At that time, E.R. Ludwig stated that it was true the company was being investigated, but added that there was no special significance in the fact since the government was looking into the affairs of a number of large corporations.

An effort was made to secure a statement from the offices of S. A. Lynch in the Bokrak Bank. Mr. Lynch is not in town, however, and his office first learned of the World's dispatch through WID'S DAILY. It was stated a clipping of the article would be secured and sent to Atlanta immediately with a request for a statement.

E.R. Ludwig, head of the legal department of Famous Players, stated yesterday afternoon that he had asked his Washington correspondent whether the commission had filed any complaint against the company and that the correspondent had answered in the negative.

Jesse L. Lasky could not be reached for a statement. The World quoted him as saying, "There are some 15,000 or 16,000 theaters in the country and we have under contract 16,000 pictures."

Independence
Several members oppose such a move at this time, arguing that the time is not ripe. A number of resolutions are being drawn up for the Minneapolis convention and all of the committees are being drafted. The personnel of the committees will be made public shortly.

One resolution which it is expected will be adopted condemns the further exhibition of 'The Shadow of the Dome' on the ground that it is propaganda against the Government, inasmuch as it shows Federal officials and Congressmen accepting bribes. The picture was made by David G. Fischer for the Fox-Fischer Photoplays and is now being shown here at the Belasco theater.

Convention Over
The second annual convention of First National officially came to a close last night. The sessions were originally scheduled for Wednesday, but pressure of business was so great that it was decided to continue for another day.

John McCormick, publicly representative for the circuit on the coast, will be the guest at an informal luncheon today at the Astor.

Ryan Back
Phil. L. Ryan, franchise manager of the Associated Exhibitors, Inc., has just returned from a three weeks' trip, during which time he visited the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Co., that it has been rumored that within a year he, himself, may head the Famous Players Co. He was very much impressed, and has returned very optimistic of the future. Ryan thinks that the fall of this year will see big business throughout the country.

Note—The "Jesse Lynch" company referred to in the World dispatch of yesterday, is, of course, the S. A. Lynch Enterprises which control the Paramount circuit in the Southern States for a long period of years. The dispatch also states that Fox controls the Strand, which is undoubtedly the city's first National house.

Federal Censorship Plans Now Under Way

Senators and Congressmen, Upset Over "In the Shadow of the Dome," Take Swift Action—Bill Expected to Be Presented Within the Next Few Weeks

(Special to WID'S DAILY)
Washington—Two and possibly three bills seeking Federal control of films, or Federal censorship, are now being planned. It is anticipated that one of these will be presented both in the House and in the Senate some time within the next few weeks, and it would not be surprising if the first reached the Senate some time next week.

This unexpected action is due in no small manner to the feeling of Senators and Congressmen over a picture, "In the Shadow of the Dome," which was put on here at the Belasco Theater—a legitimate house, and which portended to show how some political characters behaved. Incidentally the picture showed a Senator becoming drunk in a brothel, and in another sequence some Congressmen and Senators accepting bribe money from under the plates at a dinner. The entire tone of the production was such that it angered the Senators and Congressmen considerably, so much so that when a delegation of the M. P. T. O. in session here recently called on several Senators they were informed of the picture mentioned, and asked what they intended doing about it. As a result the theater owners passed resolutions condemning the picture and calling on all exhibitors not to book it.

These resolutions reached every Senator and Congressman in the mail on Thursday, but this could in no manner check the activities of several Senators and Congressmen who, believing that Federal censorship was desirable and necessary, immediately started the preparations of measures seeking to stop the exhibition of such pictures as had defamed them, and their colleagues. It is understood that these bills will be rushed to completion and filed immediately. Seven or eight Senators have already asked for copies of the Randall bill (Federal censorship) to he used as the basis of their legislation. It will be recalled that this bill died in committee last year.

A real estate operator named Fox is said to have financed the production which was made by David G. Fischer. It is said here that Fox was much upset over the action of a Congressional committee dealing with property in which he was interested, and financed the production to "get even."

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellows know how you cleaned up.

Elyria, O.—Using a stunt suggestion featured in the advertising and exploitation book put out by Metro in promoting “Someone in The House,” the management of the Colonial Theatre, was able to effect a surprisingly successful tie-up with nine prominent merchants during the showing of the picture in Elyria.

The theatre made use of the idea to enlist all stores for the tie-up, and the merchants were quick to see the splendid possibilities of linking up with the theatre and their respective goods. Results proved their forethought justified. In the issue of March 2, of the Chronicle-Telegram, there was a full page headed “In The House” Wrants To See You About Something in Our Store.” The center of the page, a space six by ten inches, was devoted to a two-column advertisement of “Someone in The House.”

Surrounding it on each side and on the bottom, were the merchants’ ads. Each uniformly began: “We Want ‘Someone in The House’ To Know—then came the specific sales talk, a clever idea which elicited the showing what was to be known.

Lynnhurst, Va.—When Goldwyn’s “Earthbound,” was shown at the Isis, at the part where the wronged husband shoots his closest friend, the entire house was plunged into darkness and from the pipe a human voice was released, and a lyric tenor sang Massenet’s “Elegie.” The organist used the Vox Humana stop, playing in unison with the singer so that the audience was unable to tell which was singer and which was organ. This was worked out by Guy Barret, manager, and W. R. Ferguson, Goldwyn exploitation man.

Ferguson used in the lobby the mammoth globe which he had constructed in Washington to exploit “Earthbound” in that city. In Washington it was mounted on top of the marquise; in Baltimore it was placed upon a motor truck, with a man strapped to it, and carried around town.

A number of local music and phonograph shows are conducting a tie-up window campaign with the Fox picture, “Over the Hill,” attracting in this way a great deal of attention to the song, “Over the Hill,” and the phonoplay which inspired it.

One of the first shows to fall in line was that of A. H. Maysers at 52d St and 9th Ave., not far from the Park where the picture is now in the ninth month of its New York showing.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Floyd Hopkins of the Victoria recently held a Chaplin impersonation contest. He gave away mustaches.

La Crosse, Wis.—When “Heliotrope” played the Rivoli, Bob Rhenius booked-up with a department store which held a “Great Heliotrope Sale,” of “Heliotrope Specials” in various kinds of merchandise. He got the store to mount a tie-up with poster alone, the remainder were tie-ups. Five dollars was given to the child who spelled the largest number of words with the word “heliotrope.” He used an open letter to the mayor, lauding the police, 300 perfunctory cards were distributed. Prizes were given to the first blonde in line, and to the largest family.

Los Angeles—A Chinese set was built by Paul Winkerson at the California for “A Tale of Two Worlds.” The Oriental prelude staged in front of this drop was well handled, and “Sui Sen’s Birthday Party.” A dramatic soprano impersonated the Sui Sen of the Morris photoplay and sang the Chinese Lullaby from “East Is West.” Five Chinese dancing girls

Amarillo, Tex.—The D. F. and R. Enterprises use a 24 sheet permanent ad, to advertise the picture showing at three local theaters. One three sheet for each house is posted on the front door, having in the lettering of the name of the theater, its location and the time of its program. It is possible to put three sheets on a big board, and it’s a good idea should be of value to theater chain operators.

Toledo—The Rivoli recently showed pictures of the opening game of the local team at Louisville. It sent a cameraman to the field. This idea is said to have originated in England where before the war pictures of the first classics when the classics were played on don music halls on the day of the races. The stunt is said to have been successful in packing the house.

Minneapolis—When “Black Beauty” played the New Lyric, Manager Prescott among other things had a drawing contest for school children, and a prologue in which a horse like the one in the picture appeared. Singers in hunting costume sang old English hunting songs.

Lexington, Ky.—The Strand is doing co-operative display advertising with merchants here. When “The Riddle: Woman” played the Strand two Curtola stores took adjoining space.

Chicago—Barbee’s Loop exploited “The Devil” by getting two young women art students to paint the figure of a devil on the exterior of a building at State and Monroe Streets. The police had to arrest the girls to get the traffic moving.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reports $500,000 worth of film was exported to 14 sign countries during March, is more than $2,394 ft.

Los Angeles—New moves in the fight of the M. P. T. O. of this city and the two tax laws were in the recent meeting of that organization.

Sascha Jacobsen, who will open at the Capitol next week, was booked at the theater by H. S. Kraft, the New York Concert League.

In the Courts

In an injunction suit filed in the Supreme Court by Jack Cohn of the B. & H. Photoplay Corp., owner of the theater at 1943 Third Ave., to discharge the rent, James Roddy to foreclose a mortgage for $8,000. The defendant said that the property is worth $40,000 and that the other mortgage is one for $15,000. Samuel Bergoffen, president of the company, said that the foreclosure suit was brought not for failure to pay interest, but because a tax of $184 against the property is uncollectible. Justice Tierney said that the property does not appear to be sufficient security to pay the existing liens and those about to be filed.

A suit by Angie H. Mattoni against the Cort Film and Ben Wise for $10,000 damages because she was injured on May 14, 1915, when a platform on which she was standing in "The Melt- ing Pot" at Bayonne, N.J., collapsed, was dismissed in the Supreme Court because the case was not brought to trial.

An answer was filed in the Supreme Court by the Fox Film Corp. in a suit by Daniel G. Tomlinson for damages he received when discharged as general manager in France at $150 a week. The answer alleges that Tomlinson engaged in extracurricular activities in violation of his agreement, was incompetent and failed to engage competent assistants.

A default judgment for $1,576 has been filed in the City Court against Chester Beeroft in a suit by the Peter H. White Co. to recover a balance due.

DIRECTOR ............................. Tom Terriss
AUTHOR ............................ David Belasco
SCENARIO BY ....................... William B. Courtney
CAMERAMAN ......................... Tom Malloy

DETAIL .............................. All right

CHARACTER OF STORY......A romance of Civil War period in which Southern girl chooses between duty to the South and love of her Northern sweetheart

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......About 6,000 feet

David Belasco's play of the Civil War has been a favorite for so long that a picture bearing the title "The Heart of Maryland" of itself is enough to attract attention. But that is not all. Tom Terriss has made a thoroughly fine picture that will bear comparison favorably with several of the so-called specials that are being released, although his production is not claiming such prominence. William Courtney's scenario was well prepared in the first place, but it remained for director Terriss to make it a reality. He has retained Belasco's original story, and presented it with a deftness that makes the picture first class entertainment.

First of all a delightful Southern atmosphere and real Southern backgrounds are to be found, the old colonial mansion, the costumes and general air characteristic of the people, all add to its realism. The general production values are all splendid. The story moves along smoothly and surely, to a definite conclusion. There are no interruptions to break the well sustained interest. There are no long battle sequences to bore, only an acceptable number of short flashes, and then no actual bloody combats are used.

Catherine Calvert typifies excellently the character of Maryland Calvert, and her work throughout is interesting. Crane Wilbur, as her Northern sweetheart, plays with sincerity and good discretion. The minor characters are all suitable and do good work. The player impersonating Lincoln bears little resemblance to the Emancipator, and one or two other soldier make-ups might have been improved upon.

Alan Kendrick, at the outbreak of the Civil War, an officer in the U. S. Army, is forced to choose between serving the North or remaining true to his Southern sweetheart, Maryland Calvert. Alan chooses to serve the North, and the engagement is broken. Alan is captured by the Confederates and held prisoner in a church near Maryland's home. When Maryland learns that Alan's life is endangered she risks her life to save him and when the bell which announces Alan's death does not ring Maryland is found hanging to the clapper to prevent the sound. The girl is arrested and condemned as a traitor. In the meantime she assists Alan to escape.

Major Thorpe, a traitor to both the North and the South, holds Maryland a prisoner until Alan returns with evidence which causes Thorpe's arrest and gives Maryland back to her lover.

Should Make Your Box Office Feel Good
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you want to show a really worth while feature, secure "The Heart of Maryland," and you will be sure to satisfy your folks with it. The fact that it is a war romance should not detract from its appeal since the romance is the prominent feature, with the actual war scenes few and not numerous enough to displease even those who balk at war pictures. You have a genuine Box Office title that shouldn't require further exploitation to get them interested.

Tell them they'll be well pleased with Tom Terriss' adaptation of David Belasco's stage play, and you can promise them a fine piece of entertainment. For those who may suspect long battle sequence be sure to tell them there are but few war scenes, and above all, no long shots of actual combat. Advertise the showing well in advance with large posters bearing the title.
Story of the Big Out-Doors. Needs Cutting

"THE RIDER OF THE KING LOG"
Associated Exhibitors—Pathe

DIRECTOR .................. Harry O. Hoyt
AUTHOR ..................... Holman Day
SCENARIO BY ................ Not credited
CAMERAMAN .................. Eugene French

AS A WHOLE.....Interesting outdoors atmosphere maintained in production that needs cutting to enliven interest

STORY......Based on battle for supremacy of big men and important business interests in Maine woods

DIRECTION......Allowed some sequences to drag; generally satisfactory

PHOTOGRAPHY......Some very beautiful outdoor shots

LIGHTINGS .................. Averaged good

CAMERA WORK .................. Good

PLAYERS......Frank Sheridan practically dominates early portion of production; Richard Traverse has insufficient role as hero; Irene Boyle weak as heroine

EXTERIORS ......Some magnificent shots

INTERIORS ................. Satisfy

DETAIL..................Fair; some titles too long

CHARACTER OF STORY......How daughter of lumberman fights Wall Street capitalists successfully after father's death

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 7,000 feet

Holman Day's story, "The Rider of the King Log," has a most alluring title which fairly breathes the idea of the big outdoors. From the very mention of the title one has a definite idea that they are to see something big, climatic, gripping; all because the title gives that idea. Unfortunately the production fails at times to carry this atmosphere across the screen. There are some bits of direction which leave much to be desired, and, considering what might have resulted from this type of production, leaves one somewhat disappointed. There are, however, some excellent sequences which in a measure atone for what the director missed, and in all likelihood the average audience is liable to like this.

The story takes you up to the Maine woods, and some of the locations were excellently chosen. Outdoor stuff is always liked, and this should be particularly so because it gets away from the usual love stuff that is often thrown in. There is a love story, of course, but it doesn't get started until after the fourth reel and it is hardly an important part of the picture, except that in the end the daughter of one of the lumber kings marries the son of a business enemy, uniting the forces of the business world. But there is a powerful sequence introduced of a camp boss starting to dynamite camp, workmen and everything that happens to cross his path when he is deceived by the arch villain, who spreads a report that the wife of the man is "wrong." It's a bit unusual to see a man start so much damage on the unsupported rumor of such a kind, but just the same they manage to work in some big wallops with this as a basis.

Some of the story is incongruous, and Director Hoyt plants the daughter of the Wall Street magnate and her friends on their way to Alaska, and they never are heard from thereafter. But these slips can be overlooked and probably will be removed through the cutting process which, incidentally, is much needed in spots.

The cast is capable and there are some well known names in the production, including Frank Sheridan, Richard Traverse, Arthur Donaldson and others.

Should Prove a Good Attraction for Hot Weather Especially

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a bird of a title. You should be easily able to get them in with anything that rings as strong as "The Rider of the King Log." Especially if you use some of the stills and the paper which has been prepared for this by Associated Exhibitors. Besides the author, Holman Day, is well known, especially among book lovers, and his New England stories have been very popular a long time. He has had a number of his works filmed, including "King Spruce" and "All Wool Morrison," and if your people liked these they should easily be convinced of the value of this, his latest screen production. You have some good thrill stuff to talk about and the dynamiting incidents are worth using in an endeavor to attract your crowd by something unusual.

If you use catchlines stick along the idea that this is a story of the big outdoors, and talk about the unusual types that are an important part of the production.

DETAIL ..............At times too much of it

CHARACTER OF STORY ....Little Belgian girl deserted by mother later becomes a maid in her mother’s home until she is recognized

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......7,000 feet

For the first half of the picture Mary Pickford is her old self, curls and all. She is a little Belgian girl living happily with her old nurse. Up to this point nothing very much happens, except what occurs around the little village where Mary gets in some kid comedy that registers. Her floor-scrubbing episode in which she puts the large brushes on her shoes and “skates” around the floor she has flooded with soap and water, provides the main fun of the feature, and later her efforts to persuade a young mule to carry her home, which he does in cake-walk fashion after she promises him admission to the carrot bed, is the second best laugh.

No author is given screen credit for the piece, but it has been adapted by Marion Fairfax. Whether or not Miss Fairfax is responsible for “Through the Back Door” is not disclosed. At any rate it would be expected that the situation with which the star has to do would be made the most prominent, whereas considerable footage is given over to subordinate sequences, which, though part of the story, are given so much footage at times that they cause the interest in Mary and her plight to drag noticeably.

Two directors are credited with the piece, but the result would seem to recall the old adage that “too many cooks spoil the broth.” And while the cooperation of Alfred E. Greene and Jack Pickford has by no means spoiled Mary’s picture, still it is apparent that there were an over abundance of suggestions. They take altogether too long to reach the conclusion, and the spectator is tantalized by continual occurrences, which keep putting in their appearance just when you expect things to come to a head. The development is smooth enough, but too prolonged.

When Jeanne’s mother married Mr. Reeves, the little girl was left in the care of her Belgian nurse while her mother came to America. The war breaks out and Jeanne is sent to her mother, who had previously been told by the jealous nurse that the child was dead. Jeanne arrives, but the fashionable Mrs. Reeves refuses to listen to the little girl’s story, until some time later when Jeanne, who is working in her own mother’s home as a maid, overhears the plan of some “guests” to fleece Reeves. She gets her chance to tell who she is besides exposing the crooks and there is a general reconciliation.

Would Be Much Improved By Cutting

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The fact that it is a Mary Pickford production should be sufficient excuse for booking “Through the Back Door.” Mary is just as beautiful as ever, and her admirers will be thoroughly pleased with her in her latest picture, especially in the early reels. She has had much better stories than this but that shouldn’t hurt the box office particularly if the star is well liked by your patrons. You can promise them a picture good to look at, and, if you think they’d be interested, might mention that Miss Pickford’s brother assisted in directing it.

Secure stills of Mary first as the little Belgian girl, later on her arrival in the United States, then as a maid in her mother’s home and finally as the sweet-heart of Billy Stokes. Catchlines relative to the story can be used if you think well of it, but the star’s name in lights should be enough to get them in. The feature is a bit long perhaps and can stand cutting if it is done by someone who knows how.
The trade papers agree with Mr. Bacheller's statement printed in last week's advertisement—that "KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE" is a big picture." It is a picture that will please anywhere—a picture providing clean, wholesome entertainment—with all the charm of Irvin Bacheller's book faithfully reproduced.

This, the first of Irvin Bacheller's books to be pictured, marks a great step towards worthier pictures—a real answer to all censorship problems.

EXTERIORS ......................... Not many INTERIORS ......................... Splendid
DETAIL ......................... Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY ............. Jealous wife brings much misery upon herself by imagining her husband is untrue to her
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 5,164 feet

Lois Weber's latest production closely resembles some of the recent DeMille pictures both in story and production, in that it deals with the marital troubles of two young couples, the troubles in themselves being slight excuse for a story, but by careful direction and attractive presentation offer satisfactory entertainment of this kind. Miss Weber's story is lacking in incident, but she makes up for it in the way she has handled it generally.

"Too Wise Wives" contains a wealth of interiors, if you may put it that way. There are numerous sets representing the home of a wealthy man. Many are so extensive that they look like the real thing, and quite likely many of them are. The photography, too, is first rate and, all told, production values are splendid.

The direction is excellent inasmuch as Miss Weber has managed to hold the interest throughout despite a very slight story that consists of but really one situation upon which the whole picture is based. There is an obvious inconsistency in the earlier reels which doesn't seem justified in view of what follows. The jealous young wife, who imagines her husband still in love with a former sweetheart, hesitates to purchase a gown and further indicates limited means by acting as her own chauffeur, but her home, clothes and maid do not look as though she should have to worry about buying one more dress.

Louis Calhern and Claire Windsor are the young couple who, of course, understand each other and are happy ever after at the end of reel five, while Phillip Smalley and Mona Lisa are the other couple, the latter the former sweetheart of Calhern and of whom Miss Windsor is jealous. Miss Lisa wears some "vampy"- looking costumes, especially a negligee with a paradise at the waist.

David Rand is not wealthy but in love with his wife,
Marie, although she secretly believes him still in love with Mrs. John Daley, wife of the rich John Daley and a former sweetheart of David's. The truth of the matter is that Mrs. Daley is the one who still retains an affection for David and is doing her best to have him reciprocate, even to inviting David and his wife to spend a week-end at her home while her husband is away. Marie is suspicious, but decides to accept to confirm her sunderse. Mrs. Daley's plan to vamp David fails, and Marie is ashamed of herself for mistrusting David, while Marie's confession shames Mrs. Daley and she realizes she loves her own husband.

You Can Satisfy Especially Those Who Like Society Dramas

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can play "Too Wise Wives" and give immediate satisfaction, and manage to keep them interested until the end. Small town audiences especially like society dramas with a good display of showy homes and lavish appointments generally. You can promise them an unusually large number of attractive settings in "Too Wise Wives" and stills in the lobby should attract them.

Use the producer's name and recall any of her previous pictures which you may have shown successfully.
Perhaps there aren't any names in the cast well enough known to your patrons to use, but if they want to know the players you might include the four names given above. Catchlines ought to interest them. Say: "Are you a jealous wife? There are many 'Too Wise Wives' who can be cured by seeing Lois Weber's latest picture at the blank theater."

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Daughter of fugitive father who dies and leaves her to fight for her life among ruffians

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,802 feet

It looks as though the director missed out on this one for J. Clarkson Miller's story seems to be pretty fair material, and might have been made into a good entertaining picture. As it is director Neill has gotten in some good action in the way of fights, but there's too much sameness to the whole thing. General composition of scenes is very poor. The dance hall set is used time and again, and in each case the scene is so overcrowded that it is difficult to even locate the spot upon which the interest is supposed to be concentrated. Altogether too many extras have been used. Camera work in this connection is always below par and the interior lightings frequently bad.

Miss Dalton's performance is quite creditable and the manner in which she portrays the wild-cat type of girl who is forced to earn her living in a cheap dance hall, and protect herself from the ruffian patrons holds the attention throughout. There are some evidences of cutting which are obvious, but probably remove a lot of tedious and unnecessary detail.

A much better Northern atmosphere, especially in exteriors would have added considerably to the picture's appeal. There is too much sameness in the settings and noticeable repetition throughout, not only in bits of action, but in general detail. Contrast has not been given careful attention and the cameraman neglected to use variation in shooting the scenes. The best work is done by Miss Dalton with adequate support rendered by Edwin August, E. J. Ratcliffe, Riley Hatch, Jules Cowles, Florence St. Leonard, Jessie Arnold, Marguerite Marsh and Joe King.

Collette Brissac's father had died a fugitive from justice way up North where he had been in hiding for seventeen years. His death threw Collette upon her own resources and finally she became a dancer in a cheap cafe in Totem City, but Collette soon proved that she was able to take care of herself. There is a gold rush on and one of the prospectors, Lucky Folsom, proposes to Collette, but is refused, as are all like comers. The miners hate the girl's independence and plan to get even by forcing her to marry Martin Bates, an engineer. Bates is drunk at the time. He is taken ill and out of pity, the dancer nurses him back to health and eventually they come to love each other. In the meantime Folsom has married a New York girl who deserted him when he lost his money in Wall St. Folsom returns to Totem City and learns that his wife, formerly a sweetheart of Bates, is trying to persuade Bates to leave Collette. The result is a general reunion of both couples.

You Can Probably Do Average Business with Miss Dalton's Latest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Perhaps if Dorothy Dalton is well liked by your patrons they will be satisfied with "The Idol of the North," but it's quite likely that everyone will agree on one point—that Paramount usually turns out much better made pictures than this. And that is the main trouble with "The Idol of the North." It is not well made or perhaps it has suffered from the operations of the film doctor. The cutting would indicate this.

You can use the Northern atmosphere for a talking point and the performance of the star, using lines telling about her fight to live a clean life in a land of ruffians. Say it is a story of the gold rush days and use the lines: "In 'The Idol of the North,' a woman actually falls in love with her own husband. But see how he came to be her husband. It is a story of the gold rush days and the fight of a girl left to her own resources."

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION 5,700 feet

Pauline Frederick's most recent production to be released by Robertson-Cole may be said to have considerable appeal and there are points in its favor despite some absurdities that at times detract from the interest. The production is satisfactory and photography very good. The work of Miss Frederick is undoubtedly the biggest attraction, and Ralph Lewis and Milton Sills have shorter roles which they handle adequately. But the star's performance is the outstanding feature. There is one long sequence which she plays alone in a dual role with the exception of little Helen Stone. Her make-up as the dope fiend mother is a splendid contrast to that of the woman craving for the happiness of having her own child. As usual, her performance stands out above all the work of the supporting cast. Raymond Hatton plays a fake cripple whose place in the story is never definitely established.

Any fault that is to be found with "Salvage" will be in the story. The author has made such a forceful plea for sympathy and endeavored so strenuously to inject a strong mother love into his theme that he has neglected to consider such things as plausibility and coherence. Perhaps it is the fault of a poor continuity, but certainly the director might have improved upon it and the title writer, too, might have cleared certain facts that remain hazy in the mind of the spectator.

A situation that is not made clear is that dealing with the rich man's disposal of his crippled newborn babe. Apparently the child was given into the care of Raymond Hatton, who poses as a deaf and dumb mute and wheels around on rollers in very unconvincing legless fashion, since you can see his feet doubled under him. Just why he found it necessary to use this deception is not evidenced.

Bernice Ridgeway leaves her wealthy husband because he has sent away her crippled baby. She soon finds happiness in caring for little Ruth Martin, whose mother, a dope fiend, kills herself, and whose father is in prison. Bernice takes the place of Mrs. Martin while the papers report the suicide under the name of Bernice Ridgeway. Martin returns to his home after being pardoned and eventually tells Bernice that he is Ruth's father. The woman's love for his child plays upon Martin and he asks Bernice to marry him.

In the meantime Ridgeway learns that his wife is alive and on his deathbed sends her, restores her child to her and leaves her his fortune, then dies, leaving the way clear for Martin and Bernice.

You Might Appeal Particularly to Women Patrons

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors have two good talking-points to work with in showing "Salvage." The mother love theme which is uppermost all the time and the name of the star. These two points should give you sufficient material to use in your exploitation and advance notices. With regard to promises you can talk about Miss Frederick's performance and assure them of her usual good work and tell them about the dual role. Stills of her in the two parts should attract attention in the lobby.

If you find catchphrases arouse interest you might use: "Which is the richest woman—she who has wealth or she who knows a mother's love? See the answer in Pauline Frederick's latest Robertson-Cole production." The title doesn't tell very much, so it would be well to explain what it's all about through the use of explanatory lines.

CHARACTER OF STORY .... Husband who neglects wife for his business realizes his mistake before it is too late

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,000 feet

Despite a not altogether attractive story which she is given in "Closed Doors," Alice Calhoun, Vitagraph's newest star, makes a decidedly pleasing impression and appears to have a charming personality. She is really beautiful and screens excellently. The part provided in "Closed Doors" does not call for much display of her acting ability, but it is to be hoped she can act as well as she can look pretty.

To be sure Miss Calhoun is the most attractive feature of the picture, even though director Von Seyffertitz has done well from a production end with a too familiar theme. The neglected wife formula has already been overworked to such a degree that it would be difficult to make it appear new or original no matter how sincere the effort, and the general presentation of "Closed Doors" indicates sincerity on the part of those who had the making of it in their hands.

The picture holds the interest well enough and doesn't become tedious, which helps a lot. Harry C. Browne is adequate as the husband, but he is not the type best suited to the part, nor is Bernard Randall, the villain of the story. Both do satisfactory work but appear to be miscast. A short prologue might better be connected with the main plot by a more explicit title. The connection is not quite clear until the ending—or perhaps it is so intended.

Dorothy Brainerd marries Jim Ransom, a man much older than she. After a honeymoon trip west, they live in a beautiful Long Island home where Dorothy has everything money can buy, but her busy husband leaves her alone most of the time. Dorothy meets Rex Gordon, a society crook, by accident. Rex's first thought is to further the friendship for his own purposes. Later he changes his mind and decides to persuade Dorothy to leave her husband and marry him. She refuses, and then Rex plans to rob her home. Rex picks a night when Dorothy's husband is out of town, but the latter returns in time to find his wife protesting against Rex's intrusion. The husband, of course, misunderstands, but the would-be burglar's pal happens to remember the husband as the man who once saved his life, and he tells the truth.

Get Them Interested in Miss Calhoun. They'll Like Her

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Your patrons are sure to like Miss Calhoun, and if you are in the habit of booking Vitagraph pictures you should be able to please your folks with their latest star. It would be well to concentrate in the main upon Miss Calhoun's name, and use stills extensively in the lobby. Get them interested in her and the rest should be easy, especially if you will show her future productions.

Perhaps it would be just as well not to say too much regarding the story because of its similarity to previous pictures bearing the same theme, although if you can work catchlines so that they won't make the story sound too familiar you might interest them in this way. You could put it this way: "Never hesitate to do a good deed. You can never tell when it will be repaid. See how a good deed, done years before, saved a man's happiness at a most critical moment. It happens in the latest Vitagraph feature starring Alice Calhoun."
Big, genial, straightforward TOM MOORE — Washington's most successful exhibitor—as shrewd as they make 'em—writes this letter about Priscilla Dean in her latest, greatest Universal-Jewel "REPUTATION." Read every word of it. It tells you more about the value of "REPUTATION" than anything Universal could put in print. And when you've read it, book the picture. There's only one theater in your town that can show "REPUTATION" first—so make that theater yours—right now, today. Just as TOM MOORE says:

You'll be showing the greatest actress on the American Screen.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION……About 6,000 feet

May Allison’s latest for Metro is a story somewhat different from anything she has had lately, and while it is essentially a murder mystery, there is nothing gruesome or the least offensive about it. It has been adapted from Maxwell Smith’s Saturday Evening Post story, “Dated.” The present title is more pertinent and has a good drawing power. The director has employed a really effective means of relieving the tension of the dramatic influence by injecting a splendid series of mother love touches, that are sure to appeal to any audience.

“The Last Card” is the first picture directed by Bayard Veiller, best known as the author of “The 13th Chair” and “Within the Law.” Because he has been responsible for such successful mystery and drama as these, it is natural that the director has provided Maxwell Smith’s story with a fine suspense that holds the attention to the end, even though at times in creating it, the spectator is somewhat lost in the maze of incidents. The audience knows all along who the real murderer is, but you are not shown how he managed to hide the body in the snow, nor do you see, how days later, he plants evidence on the murdered man, casting suspicion on his friend.

Tom Gannell, expert criminal lawyer is jealous of Sorley, a college student, who takes care of the furnace. Gannell kills Sorely while he is at work in the cellar of Kirkwood, friend and neighbor of Gannell. Gannell makes it appear that Kirkwood murdered Sorely and then accepts the place as lawyer for the defense. Gannell’s guilty conscience betrays him in the presence of Kirkwood’s wife who reads in a book on criminology something that prompts her to confirm her suspicions. She invites Gannell to her home, while the police listen in on the telephone. By clever strategy, Mrs. Kirkwood plays upon the murderer’s conscience until he cries out his guilt and the husband is freed.

May Allison in
"THE LAST CARD"

Metro

Metro has a good audience picture in their latest with May Allison. Melodrama of this type has a big following, and besides using the name of the star, tell them about the story, centralizing upon the mystery element. You can assure them nothing offensive with regard to the murder business. Suggestion is used excellently throughout, thereby excluding anything which might be objectionable.

The title is a good one and can be used effectively in connection with catchlines such as "Her husband was about to be convicted of a murder which he did not commit, but see what happened when the wife played 'The Last Card.'" Or, you might go at it from another angle and get them interested in the subject of criminology by talking about the effect of conscience and the voluntary confession which criminologists say the guilty one will give when confronted with implements or circumstances connected with the crime.

CHARACTER OF STORY .... Small town "character" inherits a fortune which "shyster" lawyer isn't clever enough to relieve him of
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 4,028 feet

To secure stories suitable for Will Rogers must keep the Goldwyn scenario department busy, but it must be admitted they are consistently good and the latest choice, Irvin S. Cobb’s “Boys Will Be Boys,” provides the portrayal of “rube” parts with a vehicle accordant to his own distinct style, and while Cobb’s story isn’t unusual and doesn’t brag of a wealth of incident, it gives Rogers a part that allows him plenty of opportunity to get over the “humanness” for which he is known.

But running the star a close second for honors in this feature are the sub-titles. If they aren’t the author’s own, it’s a wrong guess. But some of them certainly sound like him, while other bears the humor of Will Rogers’ “Iliterate Digest.” At any rate, they are all great, and the fact they are numerous doesn’t matter. They get some of the biggest laughs of the piece. A little colored boy works some good comedy in conjunction with the star for one short sequence. Some more fun is gotten out of the situation in which a twice widowed female tries to ensure Will for a third husband after she finds he has inherited a fortune.

Director Badger has provided an attractive Southern atmosphere, and the story is given attractive backgrounds generally. The cast is well suited and gives capable support. Besides Irene Rich it includes Sydney Ainsworth, Ed Kimball, Mae Hopkins, Cor delia Callahan, Nick Cogley and others.

Peep O’Day (Will Rogers) is a familiar character in a small Southern town, who has never had any boyhood, and the most money he has ever owned at one time was eighty cents, so when Judge Priest tells Peep he has inherited a fortune from an uncle in Ireland, Peep decides to be a boy. Sublette, the town “shyster” lawyer, plans to relieve Peep of his money and presents Kitty who poses as Peep’s niece. Mrs. Hunter, a widow, is jealous of Lucy, a young school teacher, who takes an interest in Peep’s education, and she finds a way of having Peep arrested and at the same time Sublette, through the niece, presents a plea of insanity for Peep, and suggests that Kitty be given control of the money. But Kitty “double crosses” and exposes the whole scheme. The case is adjourned and Peep is free to spend his money.

Show Them This Goldwyn Comedy and Let Them Enjoy Laughing

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There is little doubt about their being satisfied with “Boys Will Be Boys.” In fact it seems too short, but you’ll be offering quality instead of quantity, and they surely won’t kick at that. If you have shown the star’s pictures previously, it won’t be hard to get them in to see “Boys Will Be Boys” if you just mention his name. And then, too, you have the title of Irvin Cobb’s well known book and the author’s name as well to use.

They will know pretty well what to expect with Will Rogers the star, but in case they are not acquainted it would be well to use some of the paragraphs from the press sheet which Goldwyn will furnish. Promise them a real wholesome, clean and delightful comedy picture that isn’t long, but has enough laughs to satisfy everybody. And if they don’t laugh, they’re not human.

CHARACTER OF STORY.....The book girl un-

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,895 feet

The sum total of this entire picture is expressed in one of the flashes—"If you want to keep her off the rocks, she's got to know where they are." Like the traditional minister's son, daughters, too, may be kept in ignorance of the real world only at their own peril.

"Sheltered Daughters" is a good story that brings home a powerful moral. The presentation is in every way ably and well planned. The dramatic events pile on in good sequence and lead up logically to a splendid climax.

While the story itself has not the elements of great drama, still it is handled and directed to ably that a splendid picture is made thereof. The photography and lighting too, add a good deal to the success of this picture.—Another case where the director's work contributes materially to the putting over of the idea.

Justine Johnstone, as Jennie Dark, plays her part well in her own quiet and charming way. Miss Johnstone is not an emotional actress and does well to keep away from violent roles. Her strength lies in simplicity and charm—quiet roles. Her facial work is also very subtle, so much so that at times it does not register, and unless the lighting is carefully adjusted its best effects are lost. Her characterization as the innocent girl is well done and little exaggerated.

The story deals with an underworld plot to collect money for the French orphans and make a getaway.
Jenny Dark, who greatly admires Joan d'Arc wife of a supposed French officer, and at a banquet collects two hundred thousand dollars for the French orphans.
But Jenny's father is a plain clothes man, so the crooks do not get away. The big scene in the picture is where Jenny's father goes to arrest the imposter and finds his daughter in the same room. Then all is explained and a near tragedy is avoided.

Helen Ray as Adele, and Charles Gerard as French Pete, both add greatly to the support and success of the picture. The settings and costumes are all carried out with great care and detail.

A Picture With a Moral for Parents and Daughters

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You will be glad to get "Sheltered Daughters," for it carries a message that can be taken home by your audience. It will cause talk and discussion and draw the crowds. It is timely and a well pictured film ably directed.

You can promise your people an intelligent and logical drama based on an alive and appealing subject.
Catch lines could read: "The ignorant girl is not necessarily the safe girl," or "There is evil in ignorance."

The star, Justine Johnstone gives a satisfying performance. Reallart could probably furnish you with some attractive posters and lobby displays.

If possible, obtain some big photographs of Miss Johnstone, who is one of the handsomest women on the screen. You should be able to obtain considerable local publicity by working up a good story that she has just left for Europe, where she intends making a big special production.

Hampton Brings Another Zane Grey Story to Life

"THE MAN OF THE FOREST"

CHARACTER OF STORY... Protege of rich westerner plots to secure the ranch for himself when it should go to nieces

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION... 5,880 feet

With the story by Zane Grey and a villain like Robert McKim you may be sure to expect things to happen, and they do in Benj. B. Hampton’s latest production, “The Man of the Forest.” At first the action is just a bit slow, covering the introduction of the characters and the establishment of a premise, but the latter reels contain all the excitement that anyone will expect in one picture, with a smooth-running story that accumulates suspense as it goes, finally reaching a genuinely effective climax. There’s much shooting and bloodshed, to be sure, but then it’s a real Zane Grey western and you expect it.

The actual incidents that make up the plot are not absolutely original, but that doesn’t make any difference in this case. The interest is new and holds straight through to the end. The plot in the main deals with the efforts of the villain to secure for himself a large ranch, which will eventually belong to the owner’s nieces. There’s nothing new about that, or the fact that the villain tries various known means of getting what he wants and in the end, just getting what he deserves. It’s the action and suspense, together with good acting by a capable cast, with effective direction, that makes up for any familiarity of story.

A first rate western atmosphere has been obtained and the backgrounds are good. The director would have added considerable to the atmospheric charm though, by some long shots of the country. Perhaps he just forgot it. Robert McKim plays the rascal in his customary excellent fashion, while Carl Gantvoort is adequate as the hero. Others are Claire Adams, Jean Hersholt, Harry Lorraine, Eugenia Gilbert, Frank Hayes and Tote du Crow, who plays a small Indian part.

Harvey Riggs, protege of Al Auchincloss, plots with Lem Beasley to get possession of Al’s ranch. Auchincloss, in failing health, sends for his two nieces, Helen and Bo, to whom he intends leaving his property. He also sends up into the mountains for Milt Dale, for he feels that Dale can help him. Meanwhile the girls arrive and Helen falls in love with Dale, a fact resented by Riggs, who purposes to marry Helen—and the ranch. The girls are kidnapped by a gang under the leadership of one of Beasley’s henchmen. Lone Wolf, a faithful Indian, tracks the girls to the cabin where they are held, notifies Dale, who gets a posse and sets out to rescue the girls. In the fight which ensues Riggs meets his death. Beasley is killed by one of Dale’s men while trying to murder Auchincloss, leaving the way clear for the lovers.

Among the Best Western Attractions Out

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With such successes as “Desert Gold,” “The Westerners” and “The Sagebrusher” already on the list, you should merely have to refer to them in announcing a showing of “The Man of the Forest,” Benj. B. Hampton’s latest production of a Zane Grey story. You can make promises for the action and good suspense if you think it necessary, but if you have already played the pictures mentioned, it probably won’t be necessary to resort to promises to get them interested. The author and producer should be sufficient. If, however, you have not been lucky enough to have played them, it’s a good time to start and you ought to do big business with the latest.

Talk to your men patrons particularly. Tell them it’s a story of the west, of a conniving “slick article” who wasn’t as slick as he thought. Catchlines will attract them and it is likely that Robert McKim is a well enough known screen villain to warrant using his name. The author’s name in lights outside the theater should help get them in.
Some Short Reels

“The Acrobatics and Mimicry of Insects”—Kineto Review
Type of production: 1 reel magazine

The best bit in this clever and interesting reel is a fight between a praying mantis and a scorpion, both clinging to a twig with several pairs of legs and carrying on the death grapple with the others. The mantis with its strong forelegs gets the best of the scorpion and quickly ends the battle by stinging the head. It is brief but thrilling. Other insects shown are a drone fly, stick insects, a hawk moth, caterpillars, grass-hoppers, and wood ants. Apparently by trick photography, the insects seem to perform various acrobatic stunts. This reel has very high value for its kind and is sure to prove mighty interesting to almost any kind of an audience.

“Big Game”—Pathe
Type of production: 2 reel comedy

Snub Pollard’s latest starts out with a really up-to-date situation when a man and his bride from Wichita Falls land in the country of “the sultan,” but the continuity is broken here to introduce Snub Pollard as a Fort being pushed up a tremendous slope by the little negro who acts with him. The remainder, while full of action and sure to amuse to a certain extent, is below the average and contains little new stuff. In spite of all this, the ensemble is recently done by another producer in which two hunters strike many odd poses while on the trail of their game, and are frightened by a strange negro. In this scene, the comedy of the confined space proves very interesting. There are some conventional harem sets and the usual array of veiled and pantalooned women.

“A Polynesian Odyssey”—Paramount-Burton Holmes
Type of production: 2 reel travelogue

Here is one that is better than the average. The picture is taken on the island of Bali, adjoining the island of Java, in the South Seas. Its high light is a shot of some mysterious ruins in the interior; crumbling pillars of intricately carved stone work that point to a higher form of civilization far in the past. Next in value are the shots of the harvest festival, wherein the simous Polynesians girls in bird-like dress and with painted faces are seen doing a strange, slow, half-spiritual dance. The remainder is devoted to building up atmosphere. It shows the surf, with out-rigger canoes being hauled ashore by half-nude brown men; a village street with slim, top-heavy palms in the distance.

“Prague”—Paramount-Burton Holmes
Type of production: 1 reel travelogue

A nice impression of the strange capital of the Czecho-Slovakia is not without some sections in the streets and by-ways of the little republic. There are two or three shots of returning soldiers marching through the streets closely crowded by the rejoicing populace. The rest, beside a closeup of the president and of the statue of Huss, consists of a series of clearcut and carefully chosen views of old buildings, chiefly interesting for odd elongated gables, five steeples and cupolas, great carven doorways. There is the old Charles bridge and the peaceful sliding surface of the river there. The cathedral of St. Vitus, the old imperial palaces, and the government buildings on the heights are all interesting.

“The Thinker”—Century-Universal
Type of production: 2 reel comedy

“The Inventor” would have been a better title for this one, which contains a certain amount of new material. Liege Conley is the man with the mind. His automatic hat that provides a different haircut with every tip, his mechanical nutcracker and various other brain-children, will each one get a laugh. Liege is courting Edna Gregory. His rival is Bud Jamison, a “Boy Friend.” There is much falling in and out of a well dug between two gateposts, that may be thought to be funny. Bud steals the girl, house and all. Then follows a chase over residence roofs and through the streets. The well-browned lobum is brought in. There is a good number with a dwarf that is amusing. The new stuff in this comedy qualifies it as up to the standard.

Tony Sarg’s Almanac
Type of production: 1 reel cartoon

A decided novelty and a comic piece is offered in Tony Sarg’s Almanac which is being shown at the Criterion. The first edition is called “The First Circus.” The picture is on the life-size form of a cartoon circus, commencing in the housethe. The present day circus is compared to the Stone Age circus when the lady tight rope walker used a snake for a rope and did acrobatic stunts on the back of a prehistoric animal. The Almanac is well received and through perhaps not a full reel is a pleasing novelty.

“The Fight of the Age”—Picture Trading Co.—Rialto Prod.—State Rights
Type of production: 2 reel magazine

Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier and other associated with the puglistic game are shown in this newy film, which is a resume of incidents preceding the big ring battle. Both athletes are shown training and in civilian clothes. Carpentier is shown wearing one of his jazzy collars. Dempsey is shown offering with a fighter named Benedetti, and a huge pugilist called “Jamaica Kid.” The picture tends to give the impression Dempsey is a back to the farm advocate, for he appears pitching hay and performing various other routine farm labor. The camera gets inside the cow and the chicken. Freddy Welch, Jim Corbett and Jeffries are run in.

Pathe Review No. 105
Type of production: 1 reel magazine

This number of the Review is varied in its contents and is up to the standard of the other reviews. The first section of this film shows in detail the process of rotogravure. We see the photograph prepared and developed on the finely ground surface of a copper cylinder. The etching process is clearly demonstrated and in the end we see the cylinder turning on Sunday picture sections of the New York Times. There follows some good speed camera work showing seagulls in action. The next number is a review called “Silly Summer,” and takes us through the various diversions of Coney Island. We “Shoot the ships” and “bump the bumps,” etc. The review ends with some fairly good color work showing the weaving of baskets and the various uses for straw in Africa.

“Save Your Money”—Pathe
Type of production: 1 reel comedy

The theme of this comedy is the difficulty that arises from figuring out one’s income tax. A very effective setting is provided in the first part of the reel which consists mainly of the income and by-numbers. Even the coal in the scuttle. This gives one a fair idea of the state of a man’s mind while he is in the act of filing out his income tax blanks. Then starts the slapstick work which is not above the average. The police, the moving men, the jail, park scenes, etc. Nothing startling. Income tax evaders are shown living the life of “Riley” in a jail, where they are provided with all the modern conveniences of club life.

Harold Lloyd in “NOW OR NEVER”—Associated Exhibitors—Pathe
Type of production: 3 reel comedy

He of the tortoise shell-rimmed glasses is offering his latest comedy on Broadway this week. It is called “Now or Never,” but the title is the least important factor of Lloyd’s three reel offering. He is as funny as ever and provides a lot of old hokum which he draws up anew, he has a lot of new comedy gags that sent the Capitol audience into roars of laughter. Incidentally this is the comedy star’s first three reeler and it’s brim full of laughs. As usual he makes a spectacular entrance, this time in a speeding automobile. There’s a great bit which takes place on the bunkers of a moving train. Besides being funny it provides a good thrill. More comedy is presented in the railroad train sequence. This is not altogether new but Lloyd has found some new tricks and his maneuvers in the sleeper are great. Also his efforts to dress a little girl left on his car is one of Lloyd’s favorites and perhaps a bit better because it is longer and contains more incident than his previous pictures. By all means get it.

Turner and Dahnken Still Retain First National Franchise in Northern California

(Special to Wid's DAILY)

San Francisco—Turner and Dahnken still retain the First National franchise in this territory. All deals are off, at least for the time being.

Herman Wobber, representing Famous Players, has been negotiating, but it is understood that too much money was involved. Something like $1,700,000 is said to be necessary to swing the transaction and this kind of money isn't lying loose in this territory.

Although officials at First National have refused to discuss the reported deal which might have allowed the company to purchase some of the largest territories in the United States, Turner and Dahnken in the franchise which gives the company the first right to re-purchase franchises. In other words, the Turner and Dahnken franchise under the clause, would have been offered to First National before being marketed elsewhere.

Almost 'Fifty-Fifty'

Almost. That's where we stand. On censorship. At least. That's where we will. When Cox signs in Massachusetts. In other words almost one half of this country will see censored films.

Surprised? Don't believe it? Well; take a look. Or two looks. One should be enough. Massachusetts is rated at 4 per cent territory. New York from 12½ to 15. Pennsylvania about 11. Ohio about 9. Maryland about 2. Kansas about 2. All these states will have censored film. The percentage totals about 42, averaging New York about 14 per cent. This has nothing to do with contiguous territory. Which may be fed with censored film. In some cases at least. Over 40 per cent surely. Yet the howl continues. Don't want censorship. And the fanatics laugh. And say: "What you gonna do about it?"

Joining 'em for a minute. Just to ask one question: "What are you going to do?"

"VAMPIRES, AHoy"

Title. Of rather interesting story. In McClure's. About kids and movies. The kids playing vamps. Four year old youngster vamped by eight year old siren lisps to his mother: "Kith me, you fool." All of which is funny. But not so much so. When you think it over. It's this kind of stuff that brings damage.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send:

LeRoy, N. Y. — Saturday:

"Outside the Law," made a tie-up with the Valloje Evening Times and a local department store, and arranged the appearance in the store window and on the streets of the cities of three masked girls wearing tams. While in the window the girls would wear the masks. Then they would slip out into the streets, minus the masks, and promenade up and down. One of them was designated as the "Mystery Girl." It was announced that the first half dozen Valloje women who could recognize the "Mystery Girl" on the street, and who would escort her to the Times office would get a Lotus Dean Tamm. This lucky woman also got a weekly pass for the Virginia.

So boys, be warned. Get out the old pickaxe. And ye battle axe. And mustard gas. And the Big Bertha's. And be prepared to slaughter old National Booking. Whenever it appears. Which may not be so far away. Thirty days or so. And what's 30 days in this business.

SHIRTSLEEVE STUFF

Down in Washington. With the MPTO. Otherwise exhibitors. Who came from all over. Started work on Tuesday. Finished Saturday. Day and night stuff. Union rules barred. Shirtsleeve stuff in order. Had check to jowl talks. With senators and Congressmen. Also the President. Who was kind and gracious. To the end. Also saw some Government pictures. Through aid of Dr. Holley. Then back to work. Deserve a lot of credit. Why? Because during all the time there wasn't the mention of a card game. Or the roaming Africans. Nary a bit of hooch. In other words; they worked.

Exceptions: Charley O'Reilly almost missed meeting the President. Had to buy a hat. Couldn't get his size. Says mebbe the New York league presidency has swollen it already.

And H. H. Lustig of Cleveland. Who packed his own bag. Refusing aid of friend wife. And came East minus soft collars. And lost some of his religion consequently.

REELS OF REELS

Used during Educational's week. Say 12,000 reels. Totaling 12 million feet. Were distributed. And could have used more. Of, or, a headache. With all that used. Yet missing some business. Who is yelping. About hard times?

SAVING PENNIES

Down Dallas way. Texas Exhibitors Circuit. Have quite a scheme. Only one in this country. Save lobbies and lobby photos. Sent back to circuit headquarters. Old stuff thrown out. Otherwise put in stock. And rented. And re-rented. To other members. At 25 per cent saving. Half of which they pay. Other half accredited to their dues. In circuit. Saves a lot of money, Says E. T. Peter. Who should know. It's his idea. And it's a good one. Who'll do it next?

THE PRICE

A million. In franchises. This will about satisfy Associated Exhibitors. If they can sell franchises to this extent. Then all will be sweet and pretty. It's an idea. In these days of tough financing. Still a million in franchises? Is it so much? Ask Harry Schwabbe. He takes more than that away from First Nationalites. Every time he sees 'em. And they like it. And come back for more.

WELL, WELL!

Our old friend. Captain F. F. Stoll. Remember? "Determination," etc. Bobbed up in Racine. Out Wisconsin way. Taking a half interest in a theater. Where a summer stock company was at work. Was to furnish all funds. According to newspaper reports. Then left town. Then the sheriff arrived. And attached what was left; $179.

Well, well!

Newspaper Opinions—"Snowblind"—Goldwyn

AMERICAN—"Snowblind," like most of the Goldwyn productions, brings sturdily plotted thrillers to the screen. The capital this week.

"Snowblind" is the cast in "Snowblind" in excellent.

HERALD—It is a typical Barker production, a study of a small town through which filter occasional clumps into absolute darkness, and is a real thrill, for it has emotion based on the story.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The picture is not particularly dramatic possibilities, a few of which are rather conventional, of which are half realized, and most of which are lost in the melodramatic melodramas and subsidiary simplifications of the plot.

WOODWARD—The photography is exceptionally well made, its different scenes of mountain landscape being especially fine. Russel Simpson, Paul Starke, Paul Starke, Allen have a noticeable role. At the most frozen North, and an extremely interesting picture of life in the middle of frozen, and that which is so uncommon these days.

TELEGRAPH—"Snowblind"...has a story of dramatic possibilities, a few of which are rather conventional, of which are half realized, and most of which are lost in the melodramatic melodramas and subsidiary simplifications of the plot.

"FOOLISH WIVES"
In the Courts

An attachment for $5,811 against the property of the Alliance Film Corp., Ltd., a British corporation, has been filed in the Supreme Court by Gustavus A. Rogers for legal services. He alleges that he gave advice to the defendant concerning contracts with Associated First National, George Irving, Leon D'Uttassy, and Adrian Johnson, and also concerning the formation of an American company. He said he received $1,000 and that when Harley Knox left here recently he gave a check for $2,500 to his attorneys for Mr. Rogers, but the attorneys refused to give up the check unless he accepted it in full payment.

He said he received $1,000 and that when Harley Knox left here recently he gave a check for $2,500 to his attorneys for Mr. Rogers, but the attorneys refused to give up the check unless he accepted it in full payment.

"The Miracle" Here

Max Reinhardt's "The Miracle," said to be one of the most spectacular films ever made, is in New York and is being handled by Joseph Menchen of the Celebrated Authors' Society, with offices in the Columbia Theater E11g.

It is not known how the picture is to be released but one of the interesting angles on it is the fact that lithographs prepared for the picture near the line "A. H. Woods presents." The Woods offices claim to know nothing about the matter.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Des Moines.—With "The Gilded Lily at the Strand, a herald was placed on the counter informing the public that the picture was held up to the light, for on each side only broken letters were printed. The herald was widely distributed.
It is said to have been effective.

St. Louis.—When "Black Beauty" played at the West End Lyric and the New Grand Central here, an indorsement of the local Humane Society was obtained. The letter of endorsement was used with display advertising in the newspapers.

Omaha.—Finding, as all managers have done, that a great many people in the lobby to ask questions about what picture is showing, or what music is playing, or what time vacation plays, he decided to drum up business in a different way.
Manager R. S. Ballantyne of the Moon, has adopted the idea of writing off copies of his schedule each week, and giving a copy to each employee. Copies of each schedule are kept on the telephones for instant reference when prospective patrons

call up. He says the plan is showing great results, because people are in-pressed by the importance of his work, and can answer any question promptly.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Colored motion pictures, giving the effect of showers of blossoms, are the background to dances being put on with Tchaikovsky's "Nut Cracker Suite," and the "Overture Miniature," played this week by the Brooklyn Mark Strand Symphony orchestra.

Managing Director Henry designed the "Nut Cracker Suite's" stage effects and Paul Oscar, the ballad features. The opening scene revealed a cymbalom opened at top center with a体系e, while drums and horns played the music with the orchestra.

Omaha, Neb.—When the Dramatic League of this city after long rehearsals had prepared to perfom a one act drama entitled, "The Dregs," intending to be presented in a Folk Theater, the theater did not materialize. Manager Harry Watts, of the Strand theater invited them to put on the show at his the-
er. His invitation was accepted and for one week, for the first time in the history of the Strand, the company performed a one act play on the program at the Strand. The plan worked wonderfully, according to Manager Watts, and the plays may become a permanent asset to the Strand program. There were from thirty-five to fifty telephone queries each day about the act and it helped as much or more than the picture in drawing crowds.

Fischer Explains

ago, and talk of censorship in a big way had not then developed. Frankly I never thought of the harm this might accomplish from a censorship angle, but I was afraid of what Congress might do to it.

“I am a director and producer. All my interests are in this business. It would be ridiculously inconsistent for me to make a picture that might help bring about censorship.

“When I informed Fox of my fear of Congressional action he said that would be all right, that he had it all arranged for a Pennsylvania Congressman to direct the attention of Congress to the picture, order an investigation, get a lot of publicity for the picture, and then this Congressman was to have the investigation order pigeonholed. It looked like a fine chance for a lot of first page publicity and he introduced me to a man named Reamer, who was supposed to have a lot of weight with Congress, and Reamer assured me of the same event happening. On this basis I agreed to go ahead and direct the picture at a cut in wages which was made up by stock in the Fox-Fischer Corp. I finally finished the picture, eliminating, however, some of the ideas Fox had. One for instance, showed a view of the Crucifixion with Congressmen praying before it, and this was to dissolve and show the real God that Congressmen prayed to, a figure with a huge lot of money pouring from his mouth. I wouldn’t stand for that and cut it out. Finally the picture was finished and I had a hard time to get my money. It took some weeks to cut and when finished was shown to First National and Robertson-Cole with the idea of obtaining a release. Both rejected the picture, and when Fox became angry at my inability of securing a release he said he would take care of that end of it.

“I heard nothing further about it until about May 10, when I was informed by Mr. Willis of the National Alliance that the picture was to be shown in Washington. I immediately wired the manager of the theater suggesting that the picture should not be shown, but he said Fox refused to consent to this.”

Yesterday morning Fischer visited Sydney S. Cohen and found a meeting of the Executive Committee of the M. P. T. O. in session. He told them his story and was thanked by the Committee for his visit.

It is understood that the German picture is now in this country.

The Outlook
First National Questionnaire Surveying Industrial and Theater Conditions Brings Specific Promise of Business Revival in Fall.

General business revival is definitely in sight.
It will have its reflection in motion picture theater box offices.
It will be national in effect and get under way immediately after the summer vacation.
Present slump felt by some theaters due entirely to external conditions.
May be expected to rebound with resumption of industrial activity.
Some of the signs of returning normalcy on the business horizons, are:
Reopening of coal and metal mines, advance orders to western factories, brilliant prospects for cattle, wheat and other crops, eastern plants loading up with raw stock and pledged to early return to full-time operation.
These facts, dealing with outside influences in their relation to the film business, are part of the analysis of a survey made last week by Associated First National through the medium of a questionnaire submitted to exchange managers at their recent convention here.
"Internal" facts revealed by the analysis are:
Exhibitors generally will hold to present admission prices, though in some cases there may be slight reductions to meet readjusted wage scales.
New theaters are projected or under way in virtually every portion of the U. S. and Canada.
Film rental prices will generally hold firm to lower.
No inc increase likely.
Exhibitors favoring longer runs.
Big specials sought whenever possible at equitable rentals, but average features with good stars have not been seriously affected by them.
Proposed $2.00 circuit of A. H. Woods, planned to play super-pictures for long engagements, will help rather than hurt regular film houses.
The questionnaire, embracing nine distinct subjects affecting the picture business internally or externally, was voted upon by 31 delegates, representing as many sections of the United States and Canada. These men were divided, territorially, as follows:

Burr Wants Board of Trade To Solve Problems for Buyer and Seller

Charles C. Burr of Affiliated Distributors and other organizations, operating in the independent field, has some interesting ideas which he presents in the following article. It is well worth reading.

Burr says:
“The distribution problem for the independent producer is a serious one, but not half as serious as the problem of securing products bids fair to become to the distributor. The independent producer in making a picture is faced with the problem of gambling the cost of production, or if he inures against this by contracting before production is made with a National distributor, for a negative advance, he must wait the distributors pleasure, to say nothing of his ability to get a profit. The independent method of marketing appeals to the independent producer, because he can make a quick turnover, even if smaller profit (perhaps) and hold together the organization he has built up and continue his producing schedule without engaging the tremendous amount of capital necessary, under the plan, which would be necessary if he were to market his product through the good distributing organization who will not advance any cash either during the course of production or when the negative is delivered.

“The producer is glad to accept much less profit in order to get the profit more quickly under this plan.

“If the independent distributors properly grasp this essential, which is their strength, they will not only be driven out of business, but they will encourage the upbuilding of the independent producer to a point where good productions are specifically made for the independent distributor instead of the old method whereby productions were offered to the independent market only after the picture had been rejected by all the National distributing organizations, or was made cheaply in the first place for the so-called ‘States Righters.’

How Burr's Board of Trade Would Function

The Details

In almost every case we have taken into consideration the National Exchanges many of the producers of which buy independently. Therefore, figuring one exchange in each territory as a National Exchange, take the independent exchanges that are left and you will find many territories in which you are not buying from the National franchise holder or else concerning yourself. So, therefore, the producers can now carry on an independent franchise holder offers him or, as one man told the writer ‘eat it.’

There are several small exchanges in these territories which it would be proper to associations throughout the country can be built up into a good support from their particular sections which would be of lasting benefit to the independent market.

Burr's Organization Plans

The company is in a position to correct the very unsatisfactory condition prevalent, we would gather together the Independent Exchanges in the following manner:

1. Firstly, this organization must be fostered and created by three or more proprietors of large and territorially independent exchanges. They should form an organization with a meaningful name, such as Independent Exchange Owners Board of Trade. The First National elect their officers and establish the executive office. The president should be a recognized officer of the organization; and acknowledged vision. The organization should employ a counsel, probably a well known legal authority, and also an advertising lawyer. Executive offices under the supervision of a paid secretary should establish a general clearing house for advertising material and the membership issues of the organization.

2. This office might well be located in the producing center of the country so that the independent producers, who make up the organization, might at all times be in very close touch with trade conditions.

3. The membership of the Board of Trade will be restricted to reputable exchange owners, a qualification for membership being a deposit of a bond of $5,000 guaranteeing the absolute fulfillment of their obligations as members of the Board of Trade.

4. An important function of the Board of Trade will be to establish a credit standing for the independent exchange owner, a member of the Board. In order to do this, it will become necessary for the Board of Trade to guarantee the fulfillment of its members contracts entered into between them and the various producers from whom they purchase their films. This can be accomplished in the same manner as the Independent Exchange Owners Chamber of Commerce is effecting the obliation of advances to film rental contracts; by a central guarantee fund of sufficient size to guarantee the terms of the contracts by its members to the various exchanges which are members of the organization.

5. The second service that the Board of Trade can accomplish for its members is the maintenance of a publicity department which will help its members sell their product to the theater owners after the producer has ceased his advertising. The necessity and value of this service is perfectly obvious.

"The Board of Trade can, thirdly, invest the new money proposition on the market and verify the producers statements. Forthwith, the value of the co-operative purchasing, which has an economic value both to the Exchange or distributor, is an important consideration.

"These, and innumerable other services, should make a Board of Trade very attractive to the independent exchange owner, who intends to remain in the business. It accomplishes at once the co-operative value of combined resources and effort, and permits its members to maintain their independence in purchasing.

"The cost of maintaining the Board of Trade can be made either by a surplus of a percentage of the cost of tariff rights as each sale is made, sufficient to defray the expenses of the organization or by an advertising charge for membership sufficient to carry the central office. It would not take long before a Board of Trade so constituted and controlled over its membership, would be recognized by the industry and the production for its field encouraged.

"There is no more effective way by which the independent field of distribution is the most protective to the independent theater owner because of the possibility of an open market that is ‘open,’ and the independent buyers need only to realize that the big pro-ducers wait at its door, if it will only organize properly and demonstrate to the industry that it is ready to do business on a business basis and upon business ethics.

New Burr Unit

C. C. Burr has formed another production unit to be known as Mastodon Films, Inc.

It is understood that Mastodon Films, Inc., has been organized especially for the making of the recently announced Johnny Hines features. Present plans fix the number of these at three, but provision has been made and it is reported that the coming season will witness the release of a larger number of Hines features than originally contemplated. Direction will be through Afliliated Independents, Inc., as representative. George A. Berenger has been added to Burr to direct the series which is tentatively "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes."

Bulls Dallas Exchange for $100

Texas—The assets of the Texas Ass'n. Co. went up a hammer for approximately $200. Practically everything was bought by C. W. Griffin of Bristow, who has held a first mortgage of $500. The sale was conducted by Barron C. House, Real estate.

The business will be operated in the same manner as the old company. Approximately 1,500 tons of advertising matter value runs into thousands of dollars in advertising contracts and about 300 film cans of various sizes going out of Griffin.

Wanter's, Says Levine

Nat Levine, president of Photoplay Pictures, Inc., is back in New York this week to get a new picture for the new edition of the company. He states that he has found a trend on the part of independent producers to acquire product in a series rather than one at a time so that they were assured of a dependable supply of film. He adds that conditions are generally on the upward.

The Outlook

exhibitors will stand pat on adjusting the admission to the theory that a difference of two, three or even five cents, one way or the other, is not enough to induce or diminish attention of the theater. This would appear as the logical view for them to take on the chance that who can afford to pay 17 cents for his family to see a picture could also afford to pay 25 cents or if he couldn’t afford 25 cents, he could no better afford 17 cents.

5. What is The Attitude Towards Longer Runs in Your Territory?

"Favored," "Gaining Favor," "Longer Runs Coming," are some of the replies to this question, on which the positive votes were in a majority. The key to the situation would seem to be the return from Kansas, which reported that "exhibitors glady extend runs. This would point would be a desire on the part of exhibitors to change their programs as circumstances demand, but it is obviously impossible for the man with a small population to draw from or to adopt the policy and reports on these one-day houses are abundant. The saving in gross advertising and exploitation expenses is a year, as the result of longer runs, is a strong argument in favor of the plan and many houses of limited seating capacity are reported going in for it.

6. Are New Theaters Being Planned in Your Territory?

Emphatically "yes" in 28 of the 31 districts represented, a tally which would seem to epitomize the general opinion conveyed by the First National’s survey as a whole. Louisville apparently is displaying the greatest amount of building activity, at least 20 new theaters being projected or in course of construction.

7. How Does Volume of Business at Theaters Compare with Last Year?

In varying proportion, it is off in many areas and in every case is bad to the economic slump. But the picture houses have not suffered so far as proportions to the larger auditoriums of the country.

8. How Far Has the Big Special Affected Booking of the Average Feature Attractions?

Majority opinion holds that exhibitors want big specials at equitable rental prices whenever practical and that the feature has not suffered to any great extent. In one instance, it was asserted that the pictures have helped business, and from another source comes the suggestion that they have been limited to one month.

9. Will the $2.00 Circuit Project or A. H. Woods and the Los Angeles

Shuberts Affect The Regular, Motion Picture Theater?

Answers were unanimously in the negative, opinions generally being that the Woods chain will not be able to get any better product, usually, than the regular houses and that the latter would benefit through comparison of admissions and admission prices.

Gordon Leaves for Coast

Robert Gordon left for Los Angeles yesterday to play the leading role in "The Rosary," which Jerome Storm is making for Selig-Rork.

Vignola on Vacation

Robert C. Vignola, Cosmopolitan director, has gone to Hot Springs, Va., on a six weeks’ vacation.

Bringing Fight East

Los Angeles—The Loyal American Film League has decided to send a representative to three Eastern cities, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., and New York, to explain the situation. This will point would be a desire on the part of exhibitors to change their programs as circumstances demand, but it is obviously impossible for the man with a small population to draw from or to adopt the policy and reports on these one-day houses are abundant. The saving in gross advertising and exploitation expenses is a year, as the result of longer runs, is a strong argument in favor of the plan and many houses of limited seating capacity are reported going in for it.

Suing K. C. Theater

Los Angeles—W. B. Worsley, director for Goldwyn, has been brought to the Katherine MacDonald Co. to direct Miss MacDonald’s next feature.

Changes at Riesenfeld Theaters

The features at the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion for next week have been changed. The Rialto will show "The Woman God Chastened," now at the Rivoli; the latter theater, "A Wise Fool," a George Melford prod., and the Criterion, "White and Silver," starring Thomas Meighan, which was originally scheduled for the Rivoli.

Working Together
Nat'! Review Board co-operates with Owensboro, Ky., and Birmingham, Ala., in Film Control
The National Board of Review reports that Owensboro, Ky., and Birmingham, Ala., have been looking into the problem of picture regulation with the result that both cities have decided upon a form of co-operation with the Board and passed ordinances prescribing the methods of control.

That in Birmingham follows closely the lines of the ordinances recommended by the New York Conference of Mayors and other city officials when, in February, 1920, it rendered its report opposed to state censorship and favoring municipal cooperation with the Board of Review.

These ordinances cover the regulation of advertising and of the films themselves. The City Commission of Birmingham further included a provision which is copied after the Boston plan of regulation, whereby in the event of a picture being sent to Birmingham in which changes asked for by the board have not been fully carried out, the city inspector shall confiscate the questionable portion of the film.

The Owensboro ordinance, adopted on the recommendation of the Chamber of Commerce, carefully outlines the method of checking up exhibitions with the reports of the board. It prohibits the showing of any picture not submitted to the board unless it meets the approval of the board in Owensboro, composed of five persons appointed by the mayor or to serve one year without compensation.

The actual work of checking up by the board's bulletin will be performed in the office of the Chamber of Commerce, which receives each week from the exhibitors an advance list of their bookings. The theater owners are actively co-operating in the plan.

Famous Shuts Studio

Two Weeks' Notice Served—May Be for Six Months—Important Stars Going West

Notice was served at the big studio of Famous Players at 6th and Pierce sts., Long Island City, yesterday that he plant would shut down in two weeks. It is understood that the shutdown will be for a six-months period.

At the present time there are four companies at work in the plant: one with Brady, one with Binney, one with Meighan and one with Wallace, Todd and Elise Ferguson. The last is making "Peter Ibbetson" with George Fitzmaurice directing. Meighan is away on location making "Cappy Ricks."

It is planned to transfer the last to the important stars and direct the unimportant productions. All important productions will complete here and then the artists transferred.

A persistent report yesterday round the studio which employs between 500 and 600 people had it that the plant would be closed to reduce head overhead and make way for the shift of a number of foreign-made productions. It was pointed out that the company's recently formed European Film Alliance planned to produce actively in Germany, where pictures can be made cheaper than in this country.

In some quarters there was talk that the Actors' Equity Association could take up the matter and that difficulties for Famous Players might result, insofar as labor unions were concerned. It is known that the Actors' Equity has been looking into the importation of foreign films from the point of view that domestic labor may be affected by the introduction of foreign pictures in quantity.

Hunting Out

Gardner Hunting, supervisor of production for Realart in the East, is no longer acting in that capacity. The move was taken, it is understood, in pursuance of the general cutting-down policy which Famous Players is inaugurating regarding Eastern production.

Monday, May 30, Decoration Day, being a legal holiday, there will be no issue of WID'S DAILY.

Heavy Taxes

For Foreign Productions and Raw Stock Suggested by Ways and Means Committee

Washington — The Ways and Means Committee of Congress wants foreign productions and imported raw stock taxed. It is reported here that the committee has recommended that the new tariff bill carry a 60 per cent ad valorem tax on foreign productions and a tax of between 25 and 30 per cent on imported raw stock.

These suggestions will be taken up in committee with the findings of the Senate Finance Committee and may be enacted into the proposed tariff law.

While it was impossible for some important executives to confirm this report yesterday, many believed that this would be taken up with the Senate Committee.

The National Association has taken no steps in regard to either favoring or opposing taxation on foreign productions or stock. The attitude of the Producers and Distributors division with regard to this will be found elsewhere in this issue.

It is known that while a number of important producers and distributors favor taxation, that many others oppose, and a number of briefs will be filed with the Finance Committee on both sides within a short time.

The Washington information carries with it the report that the 60 per cent duty will be based on the appraised value of the production based on American standards.

Just how this appraisal was to be determined seemed indefinite from the Washington report.

Gilbert To Star

The list of screen stars is shortly to have an addition in the person of Jack Gilbert, whom William Fox has signed. He will make his debut in a Fox production, plans for which are now under way. One look at "Shame," recently made at Hollywood and which will be screened in New York shortly, convinced Fox officials that in Gilbert, who plays the lead, they had stellar material.

Gilbert spent a year with Maurice Tourneur as lead, co-director, writer and cutter.

"Editorial Committee" Will Review Pictures For National Association

Appeal Committee Also Named to Consist of Executives of 15 Leading Companies Should Producer Object to Findings. Of Original Body Association Also Takes Action Regarding Objection to Foreign Films and Imported Raw Stock.

At a meeting attended by the largest number of member since its inception, the Producers and Distributors' division of the National Association took several important steps on Thursday night at Delmonico's.

It was decided by an almost unanimous vote that an "Editorial Committee" should be appointed to pre-view pictures before release. An "Appeal Committee" was also named to which producers should have appeal in case they objected to the findings of the "Editorial Committee."

This action is to become effective July 1.

The chief points on which pre-views will be based are that so-called fourteen points. Anything appearing in a product contrary to this will be eliminated.

Saigar as is known no action can be taken by this Editor Committee with regard to productions made by members of the Association.

It is planned to have a title card used on every print similar to that appearing now with regard to the production being passed by the National Board of Review. It will, of course, watering to the effect that the picture has been approved by the Editorial Committee of the N. A. M. P. I.

It is understood that the action of the committee will have no effect on that of the National Board of Review which, heretofore, will continue in operation.

There was a majority vote against the proposition to place a tariff on foreign raw stock, and also the distribution of foreign-made pictures, but later it was decided that the vote was close that it should be forgotten and each company is to act as it pleases with reference to these two matters.

"This "Editorial Committee" is going to be a fine thing," said one of the men present late; "it is going to help us 'clean house.' It is a question of clean pictures or legislation, and of the two I think all of us in the business prefer to have clean pictures."

It is understood that each company is to appoint a first class reviewer to serve on the Editorial Committee. This committee will see each production of each company that belongs to the association.

Just what will happen to the productions of Vitagraph and Pathé, who are not members of the Association, and who refuse a considerable volume of pictures, is not known.

An important official of the Pathé organization when questioned relative to the action of the Producers and Distributors, said yesterday: "Pathé is opposed to censorship of all kinds. We cannot object to legal censorship, but we do to any kind, self-imposed or otherwise. Pathé will not submit any of pictures for review to any committee and will take any steps necessary should any effort be made to box our productions."

An effort was made to secure a statement from Vitagraph, but Mr. Quinn, general manager, could be reached.

Editorial Committee

Each company in the association is bound to make corrections demanded by the Editorial Committee. Therefore, in the case of an appeal by a special committee, should the producer or distributor object to the suggested changes of the Appeal Committee in a film, the Appeal Committee is to consist of all the managers of the five leading companies. A quorum of five will be sufficient to act, with a majority of four.

This Appeal Committee will have final jurisdiction. Once they have passed upon a production that ends it, and there can be no court appear further.

It is understood that there was considerable discussion relative to this point, the objection being voiced that it was very difficult to get a half dozen executives together at any time for very important matters, much less what, in the course of time, may become the permanent, more important than anything in the industry, and that there would be no difficulty in having a quorum of the Appeal Committee meet once a week at least and more frequently if it was necessary.

The Fourteen Points
The so-called 14 points on which productions will be reviewed are:

1. No pictures showing sex attraction in a suggestive or improper manner.

2. Pictures dealing with 'white slavery' will not be presented.

3. Stories having as their basis a theme or an illicit love affair will be avoided only if they convey a moral lesson.

4. Nakedness will be banned.

5. Inciting dances will be eliminated.

6. Unnecessarily prolonged passions or love scenes will not be shown.

7. Stories predominately concerned with the underworld of vice and crime should not be produced.

8. No picture should be shown that involves the element of gambling or gambling attractive.

9. Pictures dealing with gamblers or drunken should not be presented. The illegal and seamy side of life may certainly be shown, but it should not be the sole objective of a picture.

10. No picture should be made which might be considered illegal or moral.

11. There should be no incident shown which would offend the smaller audiences.

12. Unnecessary details of bloodshed will be avoided.

13. Unnecessary depiction of bloodshed is to be avoided.

14. Saulo pictures. Depiction of the actual taking of life should not be avoided. Stories dealing with these subjects should not be presented unless the scenes of the taking or the action involved an essential conflict between good and evil.

Kinema Plans Innovation

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Beginning with the appearance of Geo. Beban in a sketch, "The Sign of the Rose," in conjunction with the showing of his picture, "One Man in a Million," at the Kinema, this theater will inaugurate the policy of presenting the stars of the pictures it shows in an accompanying act.

Allen Holubar will probably stage personally to his "Man in the Woman—Marriage," when it plays at the Kinema in June. Colleen Moore and David Butler will give a special act at the Strand, King Vidor's pictureization of "The Sky Pilot."

F. Richard Jones, who is directing Mack Sennett's production of "Molly O.," says the picture is now 50 per cent complete.
Shows For Kiddies
As a demonstration of the plan of the National Board of Review for neighborhood and city cooperation in community pictures, the following two examples are quoted by the board:
Harry Crandall, owner of some 13 theaters in and around Washington, has taken the leadership in a plan for young people's matinees on Saturday mornings during the spring and summer. He discovered that the city school playgrounds were to be closed this summer for games because of lack of the $7,000 necessary to keep them opened and supervised. He was satisfied that two services could be rendered at one time, namely, supplying selected entertainment to boys and girls and furnishing the net proceeds of such shows for the play-ground budget. He called the representatives of women's societies together and proposed his plan. They agreed to review and endorse fine entertainment pictures which Crandall selected, to help in supervision and to build up neighborhood and school support.
The 'Tivoli in Chattanooga' has made a success of young people's entertainments in that city. The management gathers from 1,500 to 2,000 boys and girls and treats them to the best pictures obtainable. The entire group associated with the theater—doormen, ushers, orchestra—all are helping Urragis. The teachers also aid with stories and the ministers with talks as short and pointed as arrows. The success is due in no small measure to E. F. Rogers of Southern Enterprises and R. L. Park, the manager.

Big Outing June 5
The Famous Players' home office staff, the studio force and the New York exchange will have an outing at Forest View Grove, near Hastings, on June 5. There will be athletic games, a dance contest, etc.

Walker the Guest
At Special Meeting of T. O. C. C. on Wednesday—Public Officials Expected
Senator James L. Walker, national counsel for the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, will be the guest of honor at a special meeting of the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce, which has been called for the Hotel Astor on Wednesday.
Walker has been touring the country on behalf of the M. P. T. O. and conferring with territorial exhibitor units on matters of national importance to the exhibiting body.
Ex-Governor "Al" Smith will be present as will Commissioner of Licenses John F. Gilchrist. Mayor Hylan may attend, although that is not definite as yet. Of course Sydney S. Cohen, as president of the M. P. T. O., will be there and other officials of the exhibitor body.

More from Skinner
Robertson-Cole, in a statement issued yesterday regarding Otis Skinner, said in part: "Mr. Skinner's popularity with motion picture audiences who have seen 'Kismet,' a Robertson-Cole special, has been so widespread that he realizes it would be foolish indeed to quit the screen for good. Although he is not ready to divulge his plans, it is understood that the future will see him quite active in pictures."

WID'S DAILY reported from the coast recently that Skinner would probably continue his picture work.

Going In for Features?
(Fancy to Write DAILY)
Los Angeles—Mildred Davis, leading woman for Harold Lloyd, will complete her contract with the comedian June 2nd. According to Miss Davis, she has received an offer from Hal Roach to appear in comedy dramas under his supervision.

The second series of one reel Sport Pictorials which Arrow recently announced they had acquired is now ready for release.

Famous Players are about to offer the film rights to "The Pion," "Le Bercue" and "The Title.

Clara Kimball Young In Interesting Picture

“CHARGE IT”
Equity—State Rights

DIRECTOR ...................... Harry Garson
AUTHOR ...................... Sada Cowan
SCENARIO BY ............... Not credited
CAMERAMAN ..................... Jacques Bizuel
AS A WHOLE.....Excellently produced and contains good domestic appeal; provides star with interesting role

STORY.....Rather a new light on the eternal triangle situation; is very well told

DIRECTION.....First rate; holds the attention very well and gives an attractive presentation

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Very good
LIGHTINGS ...................... Usually all right
CAMERA WORK .................. Standard

STAR.....Gives a thoroughly convincing and appealing performance

SUPPORT.....A well known and exceptionally capable cast that lifts the pictures above the ordinary

EXTERIORS ................. Pretty garden scenes
INTERIORS .................... Very good

DETAIL ....................... Satisfactory

CHARACTER OF STORY.....Young married couple are very happy until wife gets the “Charge It” habit

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,900 feet

You would almost be inclined to have a sneaking suspicion that a few husbands of “Charge It” habit wives were promoting Clara Kimball Young’s latest Equity production from an original story by Sada Cowan. At any rate the picture is interesting as well as “instructive,” and it isn’t likely that it will be considered “preachy,” because the interest is well sustained throughout and, while there are a few long titles, they aren’t deliberately persuasive, but they do present some cold facts—many that will give friend husband opportunities for “I told you so’s.”

Seriously, Sada Cowan has cast a rather new light on the old triangle, and for the most part the old facts are made interesting. Much credit is due to the excellent direction of Harry Garson, who has given the story a wholly attractive presentation both in the cast he has selected to support Miss Young and in general production values. The settings, photography and technique are all very good.

The production could be cut slightly to its advantage, especially the bits devoted to a valet’s daughter, who drifts into a cabaret life. This sequence doesn’t seem a part of the story and might just as well have been omitted. Even though you know Julia and Philip Lawrence are too happy to have it last, still there’s considerable appeal in their cheerful domestic surroundings prior to the break.

With the cast including such names as Herbert Rawlinson, Betty Blythe, Nigel Barrie and Edward Kimball, “Charge It,” has another splendid feature in its favor. All do splendid work and add to the picture’s enjoyment.

The man in the case is Dana Herrick, a rich idler, who believes marriage is good for his friends but not for himself, and so he makes love to Millie Gareth, wife of Tom Gareth and then to Julia Lawrence, who repulses all Dana’s advances, until Phillip persistently admonishes her for her habit of charging things which they cannot afford. When Julia can stand it no longer she leaves Phil and goes to Dana who happens to be entertaining Mrs. Gareth that evening. This brings Julia to her senses and after considerable hardship she meets Phil and he takes her back.

You Should Please A Good Majority With This Theme

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is about the most interesting picture which Clara Kimball Young has had since “The Eyes of Youth” and she should delight her admirers and the public in general with “Charge It.” Besides the name of the star you have at least three well known players’ names to use, Nigel Barrie, Betty Blythe, who is now appearing in the Fox production, “The Queen of Sheba,” on Broadway, and Herbert Rawlinson.

Exploitation possibilities with this picture are numerous and both the title and story can be made good selling points. Catchlines ought to go big if properly used. Say: “Husbands Attention! Bring your wife to see ‘Charge It’ and Clara Kimball Young will give you a lesson which should prove mutually advantageous.” If you care to go to a little expense you might have posters printed reading: “Why pay cash? ‘Charge It’ at the blank theater.”

CHARACTER OF STORY... Mischievous young college girl’s father has her marriage annulled; though later she marries again

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........... 6,460 feet

The trouble with “Scrambled Wives” seems to be a prevalent picture disease of the moment—excess footage. The stage play, which was fairly well received, but did not have a very long run on Broadway last season, provides Miss Clark with a fairly attractive story that has been given a satisfactory production, but is only mildly amusing, mostly because it is much too long. Many situations are fussed over, padded and generally prolonged to such length that it loses considerable of its comedy value. This is particularly so toward the last reels, when the heroine discovers her former husband a guest in the same house as herself. Her feigned illness is carried to almost tedious extremes.

The story is along bedroom farce lines inasmuch as quite a bit takes place in the heroine’s boudoir but there is none of the risque usually thought of in connection with this type of story. This is the first release starring Miss Clark, made by her own company. The little comedienne is as vivacious as ever and will probably be welcomed by her many old admirers. She is quite the life of “Scrambled Wives.”

The production end has been taken care of satisfactorily. There is a short sequence of colored photography that is decidedly novel and quite pretty. The star does some dances wearing Benda masks. The whole “Scrambled Wives” will be fairly well received but will be greatly improved by liberal elimination.

Mary Smith gives a party in her room at college and when John Chiverick is found in attendance, he feels obliged to marry Mary because he has “compromised” her. Immediately after the ceremony Mary’s father has the marriage annulled and sends the girl abroad. She returns in two years only to meet her former husband at a Long Island house party. Just why she should throw such a fit isn’t very clear, since no one but her chum and the former husband know the secret, and just what disgrace it would be to have it known is one of the extenuated circumstances and the chief one to occupy the six reels and over. At this same house is a young fellow very much in love with Mary who believes her a widow. While trying to escape from the embarrassment of having her marriage and annulment made public, Larry overtakes Mary. She confesses and then accepts his proposal.

Re-Appearance of Marguerite Clark May Attract Them

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The fact that this is the first picture that Marguerite Clark has made in over a year, will bring out her many admirers who have been wondering at her absence from the screen, so if her pictures formerly were well received you should interest them by the announcement of her return in “Scrambled Wives,” an adaptation of the stage play of the same name. The show played on the road, so if it came to your town your folks will be all the more interested in the picture.

Your women patrons will be more amused than the men folks, who will probably be inclined to think it a bit silly at times. You might make a special appeal to your girl and young lady patrons with catchlines such as: “Warning: College misses! Beware! Be careful who you invite to parties. See ‘Scrambled Wives’ with Marguerite Clark and you’ll know why.” The star’s name in lights should interest them after her long absence.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... East Side girl rises to fame through a panic in an East Side theater, and wins the heart of a settlement worker

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,820 feet

Life on the East Side of New York is well shown in "Cheated Love." The Ghetto atmosphere is well drawn and the characters nicely balanced. However, this picture by no means reaches the standards set by "Humoresque," and is open to a good deal of technical criticism. Poor continuity may often be helped by good titling, but in "Cheated Love" the flashes are poor and meaningless, and greatly help to retard the action of the story.

The dramatic incidents do not follow one another in any logical sequence and it is hard to explain why it is necessary to have a panic in the theater in order to show that the girl is made of true stuff.

Carmel Myers takes the part of Sonya Schonema, the star of "Cheated Love." She is very apt to overact and play loose with the part, devoting more attention to artificial manners than to true characterization. There are, however, several characters in the play that are ably presented.

The story is about Sonya, an East Side girl who arrives from Europe to join her father. Her affection and savings are given over to Mischa, a medical student, in spite of her father's protests. Sonya becomes an actress at a Yiddish theater and rises to fame through a panic caused by the explosion of a boiler in the cellar. The audience at one moment panic stricken, is shown at the next moment returned to their seats and held spellbound by the singing of the girl on the stage, while the fire rages below. Such an event has been staged several times of late, and shown in several first class pictures, but its effect is ever unconvincing. Sonya at the end sees the mistake she has made with the medical student and goes to her true lover, David, a settlement worker.

There are several outstanding bits of character work in this picture. Mme. Rose Pollard takes the part of the Polish actress with ease, and John Davidson does a good piece of character work in the part of Mischa Grossman. This picture could be greatly improved by a little careful cutting and retitling.

A Good Picture Particularly for an Alien Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If your audience is of mixed nationalities and not too high-brow, they will like this picture. In presenting it to them play up the Ghetto scenes rather than the title, which is bound to disappoint, although its drawing power cannot be denied.

The name Carmel Myers may also be known to your patrons, and should receive a due proportion of the advertising display.

While you cannot promise your people a second "Humoresque," you may safely say that this Ghetto picture carries a message of its own in a setting full of realism and atmosphere.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Young society girl very much in debt should marry the rich man, but she loves the poor one

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,888 feet

Paramount is running low on stories for Ethel Clayton it would appear from the selection of "Sham." There is not enough to it for a five reel feature, and it is minus real situations for the most part. And the ending is obvious from the moment the heroine meets the hero, and he accepts her Canadian dime in exchange for two nickels. But despite the shortcomings, Director Heffron has made a fairly interesting picture, that is at times amusing and easy to look at. The settings are good and he gets considerable out of the heroine's financial plight and her petty gold-digging.

As usual, Ethel Clayton's personality dominates the picture. She is always best when the part doesn't call for too much emotional acting. She wears some charming gowns in "Sham." Walter Hiers is the fat rich man in love with Miss Clayton. He either doesn't try or wasn't given the opportunity to be very comical. Some comedy business from him would not have been amiss. Clyde Fillmore has a short role as hero.

Some well written titles, many of them very funny, add considerably to the feature's interest. They are quite numerous, but their good influence is felt. The women will be better pleased than the men with this story of a society grafter who almost found it necessary to marry a rich man when she was in love with a poor fellow. It's the sort of thing that appeals more strongly to the women. In the cast other than those mentioned are Théodore Roberts, Sylvia Ashton, Helen Dunbar and Arthur Carewe.

Katherine Van Riper is an extravagant young society girl who is head over heels in debt, and her rich aunts and her uncle refuse to give her any money, so that Katherine is almost desperate enough to marry the rich Monte Buck, although she is in love with Tom Jaffery, a westerner, who claims to have little money. Finally Katherine decides to sell the famous Van Riper pearls, pay up her debts and marry Jaffery. But upon examination it is learned that the jewels are paste, and that Katherine's father had sold the genuine jewels long before his death. Monte is assured by the aunts that Katherine will marry him, and so tells Jaffery, who is almost ready to leave town. When Katherine's uncle comes to the rescue, pays the bills and leaves his niece free to marry Jaffery.

If They Like Ethel Clayton That Should Be Enough

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Admirers of Ethel Clayton will probably be pleased with "Sham," so if you usually show her pictures you needn't be afraid of disappointing them. Appeal particularly to the women members of your patrons and tell them Miss Clayton wears some very pretty gowns in this. This always arouses their curiosity. In connection with the story talk about the female society grafter who lived a limousine life with a trolley car pocketbook, and use catchlines such as "How did she do it? She lived extravagantly but never paid her bills. It was all 'Sham,' but it didn't last forever. See how it works out in Ethel Clayton's latest Paramount picture at the blank theater."

The story is not known and the title isn't over attractive, so you had better exploit it with the star's name and explanatory lines. The Paramount press sheet contains some of the titles that are good comedy. You might reprint some of them if you distribute programs.

is all about. The title gives it away, because nearly everyone knows that "Get Your Man" is the motto of the Canadian Mounted. But the give-a-way shouldn't stop them from coming in because the majority of audiences, male members particularly, will be well pleased with the feature.

Your Men Patrons Particularly Will Like It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You ought to be able to please a large majority of your patrons with Buck Jones' latest picture. It is a good deal different from anything he has done of late, and especially to the men you can make good on promises. Talk about the action in the mine and stress a point on the mine cave-in, and tell them that it is realistic. You can also talk about the scenes and action in the North. These scenes are studio sets, but it's ten to one the audience won't know it. The blizzard effect is certainly real.

They'll surely like Buck Jones in this. Both as the miner and as the Mounted Police officer he does splendid work. Stills in the lobby should attract, and you can interest them with catchlines although the title itself will indicate what the story is really about.
Use: "His instructions were to 'Get His Man' alive.
And he did. See how in Buck Jones' most recent Fox production at the blank theater."

The Rider of the King Log

A HIT—Arthur James

RINGING the out-of-doors within doors, transferring the life of the woods with all of its vigor, reality and freedom to the screen so that it inevitably is believed, and developing a drama inseparable from this atmosphere—this is the real triumph of the new production “The Rider of the King Log,” which Harry O. Hoyt, with a genius for direction, has contrived out of Holman Day’s story into a picture of real value. Oh, we can say that we don’t like titles in verse—which we don’t—and we can find a fault or two here and there, but when we are through with small criticisms we return certainly to high praise.

Associated Exhibitors have chosen well in selecting this picture to lead the way for others. If it is a standard, the standard is so high that they can write success on their stationery forthwith. “The Rider of the King Log” is a vital story of the logging camps and offers a refreshing change from the eternal social whirl with which the screen offerings are so well supplied. It develops strong characters so vividly that they are living, breathing things, rather than players of parts. It brings the forces of nature into its story and tells a tale of right and wrong with clean, sharp-cut contrasts that ring true.

We would say it had been built with a dramatic structure so sane and at the same time so simple and direct as to banish all suggestion of tricks or devices. Its great power is its strong legitimate appeal to the hearts and minds of men. The detail of plot recital we shall leave to others as our purpose is to record that this production is worth the careful consideration of exhibitors everywhere. It will freshen the atmosphere of any theatre.

CHARACTER OF STORY....... The scenario of this story would make a better novel than a picture, for it lacks action and the kind of comedy that is transferable to the screen. "The Butterfly Girl" does a lot of flirting and some of it leads her almost to ruin

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 5,000 feet

It looks as though the director had more faith in his story than any of the company, for the idea of a frivolous flirtatious girl and her undoing is certainly not well brought out. The idea is a good one, although it has been done before. The great difficulty in handling this sort of a story is to assure the star a good share of sympathy no matter what foolishness she may do. Her character must be lovable—she must win you from the start, otherwise she is lost.

You meet the Butterfly Girl setting out for a career of love and adventure. The first scene is a railroad station. Her first flirtation takes place on the train with the cousin of a friend. If you were shown the real honest-to-God girl in her own home before she set sail into her eventful world, it would have helped root for the star, no matter how unreal or silly a part she played.

Marjorie Daw takes her part with a good deal of ease and carelessness. The continuity is very choppy and she does her best to hold it together with more or less consistency of acting.

The camera work is on a higher plane than either the interior lighting or the titling. The entire production could be improved by judicious cutting and retitling. The titles are much too long and too many in number; so much so that the play is more of a reading story than a screen production.

In the end the Butterfly Girl decides to dedicate her life to charity and adopts two children and a husband at the same time. "Today has changed me—so I am not the same girl at all," says a flash at the end.

The cast is limited in number but displays a good deal of team work. They support the star in an able manner. Marjorie Daw has a pleasing manner and a good deal of charm, but she has had far better stories.

Would Do Well for a Double Feature Day

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The star has many admirers and real friends. She should be given the lion share of the advertising and well played up. It would be well to get large photographs of the star and display them in prominent places.

The title, too, is effective and would lend itself to a striking lobby display. Added to the stills of the star several catch lines that would suggest the theme of the story could be displayed. Catch lines like: "Do you know 'The Butterfly Girl?'" or "Have you a flighty Butterfly Girl in your home?" should be effective and get attention.

Another way to use this picture would be to put it into a double feature day and play up the two titles and both stars, dividing the lobby display proportionately. Or use this feature with a high class comedy and a well balanced program.

If your audiences like a pretty girl that is bold and flirts they will admire and be charmed by "The Butterfly Girl," but she should be advertised and played up from this angle.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,900 feet

In view of all the discussion and the newspaper space allotted to the present Blue Sunday movement, Wm. Christy Cabanne decided that it would make a good idea for the screen, if incorporated in a story, and so he has written and directed "Live and Let Live," a fine title to be sure, but likely to hand a disappointment. Cabanne starts his picture off in fine style, introduces his characters and lays a satisfactory premise. The opening shots especially are effective. You first meet the heroine's smartly shod feet and they are sufficient to create an interest right off. However, there had to be something more than the heroine's lower extremities, and so you meet Harriet Hammond who plays the leading feminine role.

The spectator expects a first class crook story, but the action switches to a small town called Morrisville, and the Blue Sunday business is introduced. The titles particularly contain speeches with a Blue Sunday atmosphere. They give you a shot of a resort in the town where they do the Chicago and other "disgraceful" dances. Later the story takes an "Enlighten Thy Daughter" twist when a girl commits suicide after having been reproached by her mother.

Director Cabanne has used bad taste in developing his situations in such exaggerated fashion and the latter reels are purely sensational, the sort of thing that is relished only by the cheaper class of audience. It's lynching mobs, crooks, and what-not make the atmosphere almost hysterical at times. There is no one well known among the players and while most of the performances are adequate there is no outstanding work by anyone in particular. In the cast are George Nichols, Dulcie Cooper, Harrison Gordon, Gerald Pring, Dave Winter (who is good looking and capable too), Helen Lynch, Josephine Crowell, Cora Drew and Helen Muhr.

Mary Ryan, a girl crook, assumes the identity of Judge Loomis' niece whom he has not seen in years and goes to live with the Judge, a puritanical fanatic, who preaches strict observance of the Sabbath but is finally disgraced by his son who robs a bank and betrays a girl of the town. Mary is told to leave the house because she is friendly with Dr. Randall, a young man on the Judge's black list. There are a lot of complications following, ending with Mary's confession, forgiveness and marriage to Randall.

Topic May Interest Them if They'll Forgive Other Shortcomings

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

In view of the good things he has done lately, Cabanne's latest picture is quite likely to disappoint his followers because it doesn't cater to refined taste. That is its main fault. He has spoiled a good idea by exaggeration and sensationalism. Even if he cuts considerable footage from the present length the situations will still remain, and it would be difficult to retain the continuity if they did much elimination.

If you think your folks will stand exaggeration you may show it to them and get them interested by talking about its preachment against Blue Sunday and its advocates. It may probably gather a good deal of attention if you play it up this way. There are no names in the cast that will have any value at the box office but they will recall the producer's name if you have played his previous productions.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 5,000 feet

In creating an atmosphere of suspense for mystery stories of the type of Alice Joyce's most recent Vitagraph feature, it often happens that incomprehensibility creeps in despite the director's effort to clear up.
In the last reel, the various situations and twists preceding which were used to build to the climax. That is just the case with "The Scarab Ring." Director Jose has brought the heroine to the court charged with the murder of a man, without the slightest hint to the spectator that she might be guilty. So far, so good.
But she is acquitted, and then the surprise comes when she confides in a friend that she is guilty.

The explanatory flash-back skims the surface and while it discloses the more important details there are minor incidents that, while not prominent enough to detract from the mystery appeal, they seem to put the audience in the position having to take a lot for granted. With the exception of these small matters of detail, director Jose has developed the story very well, staged it adequately, and employed a good supporting cast which renders capable support. The list includes Maude Malcolm, Joe King, Claude King and others.

Picture patrons who favor Miss Joyce will be thoroughly well pleased with her appearance in "The Scarab Ring." She wears many becoming costumes which will attract considerable attention from the women in the audience.

Constance Randall promises her dying father that the world, and her younger sister Muriel, shall never know that he was not the honest man he was thought to be. After the period of mourning, Hugh Martin, an older man, makes known his desire to marry Muriel although she is in love with a younger man. Martin informs Constance that unless she intercedes in his behalf he will tell the world what kind of a man her father was. He gives her a week to decide. At the end of the week Constance goes secretly to Martin's apartment to make sure that he holds the evidence he says he does. Martin attacks her and in self-defense she shoots, killing him. A scarab ring, known to be her's, is found in his apartment and leads to her arrest. Ward Locke, a lawyer in love with Constance, presents evidence which brings about Constance's acquittal and they are happy together even though the girl confesses the details of her crime.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 5,000 feet

The Naulty and Hunting combination have produced a nice little picture in "If Women Only Knew." It hasn't a lot of punch and the tempo rarely rises sufficiently to excite, but it is interesting all the way along, and the splendor of the production and the magnificent backgrounds make up for any of the deficiencies which otherwise might be noticeable, especially in the story.

You have a weak college boy enamored by the usual flirtations type, and finally marrying her only to discover that it is all wrong. The mother, who is never allowed to know what a scapegrace her son is, and the other girl always in love with the boy, and finally making him understand what is the right thing to do. There is an interesting and rather unusual twist at the finish which may be talked about. All in all, it is a pretty good picture.

Virginia Lee is a delightful little flirt and looks particularly charming in bathing togs. She does very well as the daughter of a rich man in a college town and flirts her way through to the finish, regardless of her husband.

Robert Gordon handles the college boy lead remarkably well. He has done better work and has had much better characterizations, though he measures very satisfactorily to the weak, indifferent, somewhat lazy type he is supposed to portray. One of the features of the production are shots taken actually in the Belmont Hotel.

Briefly, the story tells of Gordon flunking in his exams in college and at the same time eloping with Virginia Lee. He overlooks the love that Madelyn Claire rather plainly shows for him and does not realize that his mother is going blind. Madelyn sells a collection to Virginia's father for the University, and on this money they live, Madelyn all the while allowing Robert's mother to believe that Robert is sending them funds. Eventually, Robert realizes what a flirt Virginia is and what a wonderfully fine woman Madelyn has proven herself; and then comes the unusual ending which you had better see to appreciate.

Here is a nice little picture; not strong, not particularly important, but worth while. Virginia Lee may be fairly well known to some of your people and you can use her name. Robert Gordon is probably better known by virtue of his many appearances in Commodore Blackton's productions, and he has a nice screen personality. Other than this you have not a great deal to talk about, so far as names are concerned, but you can base your appeal on the charming production and the splendid photography, and tell your people that it is something entirely different from the usual run of college town stories.

If your women patrons are inclined to like pretty clothes—and most women do—you can use a catch-line attracting attention to the costumes of Miss Lee. Stills of the production will do very well for lobby display. Not great big. But your crowd may like it.

SCENARIO BY........................ Not credited
CAMERAMAN........................ George Barnes

AS A WHOLE......................... Quite well staged and directed, with some new stuff, but not over-convincing

STORY............................... Deals with palmistry and spiritualists in an interesting way, with heart appeal in a triangular love affair

DIRECTION.......................... Fair, good atmosphere and spiritual meeting well staged

PHOTOGRAPHY...................... Fair
LIGHTINGS............................ Average
CAMERA WORK...................... Up to standard

PLAYERS.................... Leah Baird does good work and Mrs. Craig as Madam Spoll does fine bit of character acting

EXTERIORS............................ Average
INTERIORS............................ Good in detail

CHARACTER OF STORY.............. Lost boy found after a twenty years search, exposing tricks of mediums and palmists. Love theme plays a prominent part.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...........5,738 feet

Spooks on the screen and the tricks of mediums form the original parts of this feature. It is quite a good entertainment and holds the interest throughout. While the story lacks dramatic material, it is built up quite logically and presents a good deal of local atmosphere.

Miss Leah Baird has a very difficult part to handle, but she does it quite well. The best scenes of this story are the shots of the medium meetings. The characters here are all finely drawn and the direction very good. Mrs. Chas. C. Craig, who takes the part of Madame Spoll, the medium, does a very splendid bit of character acting and stands out during her entire performance. Jerome Patrick, as the fashionable palmist, although overacting at times, does some good work and so does Ruth Sinclair.

There is no mystery in the story itself excepting that of finding the lost boy. The audience is let into the secret and the only interest remains in how he will be discovered by the other characters. His identity certainly could have been disclosed in a more ingenious manner. "The Heart Line" is a good box office title, but has little to do with the finding of the boy or any other theme in the story.

The direction is good and many ideas well carried out. The picture suffers generally from a poor continuity, which opens serious gaps of interest towards the end.

The story deals with the loss of a boy left in charge of Oliver Payson. The boy is lost in a strange though possible outcome of a railroad accident. After twenty years Oliver Payson consults Mme. Spoll, a fake medium, who promises to communicate with the boy through the spirit of his dead wife. The boy is an orphan of a partner left in trust with the Paysons. In the meantime, Payson’s daughter falls in love with a fashionable palmist, who in the end turns out to be the boy in question. The third party of the triangle is made up of the palmist’s assistant, who walks proudly out of his life when she learns of his other attachment.

There are some good shots of “Bohemia” and you are let into the secret of the palmists’ trade. This alone would please an audience.

The variety of social spheres is quite contrasting and adds to the color of the production. The drama as a whole is clean and wholesome and is quite good for its kind.

Title and Theme Should Attract Attention

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can promise your patrons nothing offensive in this and you can assure them a clean picture on a fascinating theme.

The title is your ace. Have a lot of hearts cut of red cardboard and run a line of hearts around your block. Advertise the catch line: “Follow the Heart Line” and you will find that the public will.

The main appeal you will find through the interest in spiritualism and occult powers. This can be advertised in many novel ways and would lend interesting material for a colorful prologue.

Posters showing the lines of the hand can probably be obtained and would make attractive drawing cards. Another good catch line for this picture would be “Spiritualists’ tricks exposed in the Heart Line.” You might also mention the love story and the romance of life in Bohemia as a drawing card.
A Fair Western with Good Old Fashioned Rough House

Franklyn Farnum in
"THE GALLOPING DEVIL"
Canyon Pictures—States Rights

DIRECTOR ............................................... Nate Watt AUTHOR .................................................. B. M. Bowers
SCENARIO ................................................ Not credited

AS A WHOLE...... An amusing though average western with a few new stunts for the star

STORY....... Old time western, a bit rambling, with a good mixture of comedy and melodrama

DIRECTION....... Fair, with one or two careless shots

PHOTOGRAPHY...... Satisfactory, with several very excellent long shots and unusual perspectives

LIGHTINGS ................................. Satisfactory
CAMERA WORK ................................. Standard
STAR....... Carries the picture and plays around it. Enjoy his part immensely

SUPPORT .... Adequate and co-operative EXTERIORS ................................. Good westerns
INTERIORS ..................... Poor
DETAIL .......................... Poor titles

CHARACTER OF STORY...... A cowboy's daring riding, quick shooting and hard fists save the ranch and rid the district of the bad men

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 5,500 feet
You don't need much of a story to make Franklyn Farnum a picture. Just give him plenty of rope, a horse and two guns and he will roll off stunts by the aid. And what is more, he enjoys doing it.

Farnum is "The Galloping Devil" and he carries most of the picture from start to finish. He beats up the bandits in the nice old fashioned rough stuff way and wins the girl in the regulation manner.

While the film version of this story follows the novel quite accurately in spirit, if not in detail, still the continuity is a little confusing and is not self-explanatory. The main comedy in this picture is caused by the delight that the star takes in his various stunts and the melodrama is sufficient to please his admirers.

The direction is not consistent. It is quite evident that too much time was not spent on the production. Many of the locations were chosen, however, with a good deal of taste and judgment.

The supporting company seems to dove-tail very well with Mr. Farnum's stunts. Genevieve Berte makes a good western type of athletic girl and displays fine horsemanship.

The story is laid on the "Flying U" cattle ranch. "The Galloping Devil" blows into camp, and finding the owner badly crippled takes charge of the situation. But the bad man took the right of way and cut off the ranch from water and graze land until the girl signs the papers. The girl signs, but "The Galloping Devil" saves the cattle, the ranch, himself, and the girl. This, however, not without several rough fights and a few hair-breadth escapes.

Title and Star Good Drawing Card

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The admirers of Franklyn Farnum will not be disappointed with this film. The star's name and the title should carry and attract. A few good catch lines could be suggested as: "You will enjoy the beating that the bad man gets," or "He was a galloping lover and a devil of a scrapper."

The picture has good riding and real western atmosphere—right close to nature—and large calibre revolvers. The star is well liked and gives a good regulation cowboy performance.

Good stills and large photographs of the star will be a help and a drawing card. A large cowboy in the lobby would advertise this and attract attention. Sheep skins, ropes, and all the other western traps would aid the display.

Use some stills of Miss Genevieve Berte, for she will attract and hold the interest throughout her splendid exhibition of riding.
Some Short Reels

"The Story of a Bad Egg"—Educational
Type of production..............................2 reel comedy

"The Story of a Bad Egg" is a novelty and departure in the line of comedy. It is perhaps the most elaborate and abund-ant short comedy ever attempted. So much so that it is open to serious criticism as well as good praise. The original features presented in this comedy are mainly the remarkable and elaborate settings, and the humor is obtained through what could be called quantity exaggeration. The story is simple. The daughter of the millionaire is a lot of cockery and furniture all among a million photographs and finds Lord Stonebrooke. The lord sends his man Friday to give the proposed bride an interview. The butler is mistaken for the Lord and before he can explain the situation to the lady, he is able to take the in the lord's name all is well when the real live lord appears. Nobody likes to see the rich ridiculed more than the poor and for this reason this picture should have a good run and be quite popular. The humor is a bit heavy, but the vastness of the production and the extent of the exaggeration make this comedy a wordy novelty. Nothing like it has ever been seen before.

Unfortunately the story of this picture is a bit misleading, has nothing to do with either the story or spirit of the film. The titles are a bit long and numerous and lack the kind of satirical humor that runs through the comedy. The history of this picture is very interesting. It was produced abroad by the same company that made "Passion." Many of the actors that played in "Passion" were retained and appear in this comedy of a rather large scale. "Passion" was painted over and decorated in a modern Viennese style and used in this comedy before they were dismantled. The film was originally in nine reels and came to this country with "Passion" and it was cut and retitled, some of the best of "Passion" has been condensed into two reels, its present form. If you are looking for something novel and new get a view of this one.

"Swat the Fly"—Kineto
Type of production..............................Popular science

"Swat the Fly" is an interesting and timely picture that would fit well in almost any program. The subject is too close to our every day comfort for any audience not to be grossly absorbed by this reel, which is not only amusing but instructive at the same time. The reel shows the life history of the fly from its birth to its death. This picture was made under the direction of F. Percy Smith, the English scientist, and the microscopic views are very well carried out. We see the thousands of lenses that compose the giant eyes of the fly and we also see how disease is carried. The message is forcibly brought home when we see the fly in one scene crawling about a consumptive's cuspidor and in the very next view we see it on the baby's rubber nipple. No audience can forget this nor fail to profit from its lesson. This reel is perhaps the most complete fly picture yet filmed, for it also shows in a practical way when the pest may be fought. Spraying traps, etc., are all shown, and also insects that catch flies, such as the spider and wasps. Get this picture for it is refined, clean, interesting and very timely. Your people will like it.

"The Path of 49"—One reel scene

This shows a clever way of handling a scene, presenting two girls motoring along the famous old pioneer road passing through the so-called "gold country" of California, made historic during the days of '49. They reach Coloma, Placerville and other points remembered from that historic day. Along the trail are wonderful scenic bits which are excellently photographed. This may be cut a trifle to advantage, but it is an exceedingly worth while and unusual short reel.

"By the Sea"—Famous Players-Lasky
Type of production..............................1 reel animated cartoon

It is hard to keep from laughing at this animated cartoon. The little "Loopy Island" girls are funny and crazy cat go to the "By the Sea" part. There is a great economy of means in this cartoon and one or two new technical tricks that are very effective and well done. The only scene that does not quite register is the one at the beach—the waves do not move in wave-motion. How-ever, this is but a minor detail. The entire reel moves swiftly and while it has nothing explosively humorous about it, still it can be relied upon to cause a long ripple of laughter. The action is brisk and the comedy good.

Ben Turpin in "She Sighed by the Seaside"
Mack Sennett—Associated Producers
Type of production..............................2 reel comedy

You can judge pretty well the location selected for Ben Turpin in "She Sighed by the Seaside" from the title, but even at that the w. k. bathing girls aren't given much to do, except Marie Prevost, who plays opposite Turpin. This is the second two reel Sennett comedy released by Associated Producers. There is some big laughs in it but it doesn't seem as continually funny as the first "Made in the Kitchen." Turpin gets over some fairly good laughs in his maneuvers in and around a seashore resort, but the best takes place in one of the number of type of photo show pictures by having you stick your head through a curtain upon which are painted queer looking bodies for which you furnish the body. When Turpin looks at the camera it falls apart. There are lots of other good laughs in the film and you will do well to give your folks a showing of it.
Short Reels

Primitive Life in Tennessee"—Kineto Review
Type of production........................................1 reel educational

There is no life in America more primitive than the life of the Tennessee mountaineer. This picture takes one back over a hundred years to the days of the earliest American settlers. To the days before the electric lights, gas or even matches. It is difficult to believe this is true, but it is. A little part of the United States where the old flint and steel is used for starting a fire. An old native is shown in this film lighting his pipe with an old flintlock. The woman of the house demonstrates before the camera how she provides her but with candles. The cords are prepared and drawn through the tin mould before the wax is melted and the result—candles. A primitive candle trimmer is used to keep the flame shining bright. Another section of this reel shows the gathering of honey from hives constructed in simple fashion. The film as a whole is entertaining and instructive.

"Bandits Beware"—Universal Type of production.....................................Western

This Hoot Gibson western contains the usual salting of western properties and the schemes and tricks of the routine cowboy story. It is not very new, but it is up to standard as a production and will undoubtedly go over. Things are vamped on this; it is a trick with this Hoot, who is in general miscast. The bandit, with a miserly old man and in love with the bookkeeper who is the conventional pretty young woman, decides to stir things up. He robs his own sale, and hides the money in a hollow tree. His room-mate comes along and swipes it. So Hoot is out of luck. The boss suspects him. The sheriff suspects the girl. But Hoot goes out and gets the thief, after an interesting bit of riding, and all things clear up right in the middle of the road.

"Money Talks"—Gayety—Educational
Type of production....................................1 reel comedy

New stuff and a lot of action make this a good comedy. Mary Wyann does some nice work in it, as the engaging heroine whose enraptured fiancé she invites by telephone to meet her and her aunt at the Country Club. The hero dashes off in his room-mate's coat, hires a taxi and lavishly invites a number of extra girls to join in on the eats. But he has left his pocketbook. His room-mate pursues him. He finds the pocketbook while he sails around in the taxi with its rapidly counting-up meter. His girl hocks the engagement ring to pay the club bill. But he is bumped into by an auto and hand-dulled $50 by the autoist before he regains his senses. This puts him out of debt. But the scheming of his friend is the only thing that puts him back into the affections of the girl. There is plenty of counter-plot. The ending is good. It contains a brief but exquisite burlesque of a feature-film fight—the kind where the hero licks a number of men bigger than he is.

"Outwitting the Timber Wolf"—Pathe
Type of production....................................1 reel reall comedy

It is a difficult and dangerous mission to capture a live timber wolf, but this is successfully accomplished by Bill and Bob, who start for the Timberlands armed with rifle and traps. While they are away setting their traps, they are visited by a bear who fills himself with their dinner. When they return to their camp, they find it almost in a state of ruin. On top of the house, they discover the animal. He is captured and chained to a tree by the register. When the hounds are released, the bear is dislodged and, by a little kindred trick, is caught by the timber wolf. The photography of this reel is not extra good, but the interest is sustained by the action of the various animals. A few close-ups of the timber wolf all tied to a pole were quite well done. The reel has good outdoor qualities though the shadows and lighting are not above the average.

"The Rent Collector"—Vitagraph
Type of production....................................Two-reel comedy

Larry Semon's latest is a genuine laugh-getter. From start to finish the comedian keeps things going, and besides a lot of the old hokum that still gets laughs he has put in some new stunts that have kept the audience enthralled. There are numerous funny bits incidental to his job of rent collector. The usual roughhouse and throwing contests are used and while it gets a bit "messy" for a while, the comedy is good. Perhaps the biggest joke is Larry playing Sir Walter Raleigh. He puts his coat over a puddle which happens to be a man-hole. The lady steps down—very much down—only to be submerged. More good comedy is presented in the basement barbershop where liquid tar leaks through a hole in the sidewalk and covers the face of a man waiting to be shaved. It's funny all the way through.

"The Greenhorn"—Mermaid—Educational
Type of production.....................................2 reel comedy

This is an unusually good comedy, remarkable because it revives some of the oldest kinds of trick photography and gets away with it, and because in its costumes and business it harks back to the days of one reel features. Lloyd Hamilton who should prove to be a receiver box-office value in the future if the work he does is as good as this; it is the twelfth of a series投身 up to a standard as high as that of any other, or)

The "Greenhorn" arrives and enters quarantine. Getting in is easy, but getting out is another thing. He makes several flying exits, but returns with equal velocity. While he is going from one department to another, like a regular immigrant, there are two assassins on his trail. They attempt to stab him, bomb him and in other ways to do away with him, but he outwits them with his lack of wits and manages, though not quite plausibly, to get into a closeup with a sweet little nurse who is kept busy around the place. Chuck Reiner directed this one.

"Society of Dogs"—Universal
Type of production.....................................2 reel comedy

New stuff and a lot doing make this a fine comedy. Get this if you want your people to laugh. The dog is good—he is almost human and what is rarer than that, he is funny. He gets the laughs. With a stone tied to his tail the dog breaks the shop windows and his master plays the part of the glazier—although this idea is not a strikingly new idea; still the situation that it leads to are original and funny. The dog knows the scared timid man avoids him, so he regains his very one will recognize as a Chaplin stunt. He drives a horse, steals a basket, and flaps mud on people's clothes all because his master is in league with a cleaner. The dog may truly be called the Charlie Chaplin of the animal kingdom. Charlie won't mind when he sees him. The lighting and photography of this comedy are even throughout, but the scenes of the cop chasing the dog are a bit overdone, and the camera worked a little too slow. You will want more pictures of this dog after you have seen this one.

"Beat It"—Chester Educational
Type of production....................................Two-reel comedy

Once again "Snoopy" appears as the hero in Chester's "Beat It," and when "Snoopy" is the hero, something is happening all the time. In this the ape with a little woolly dog finally bring joy to the little girl cabaret performer and her father by rescuing money to be used for paying off the mortgage on the house. This occurs only after a series of wild adventures, many of which are very funny indeed, and all of which are materially aided by the very clever ideas.

There is one particularly humorous hit where the father is rescued after he attempts suicide by jumping into a lake. When "Snoopy" and the daughter get him back on land, they use a vacuum pump to bring him up to earth. It is forced into his body that he finally becomes a balloon and flies into the air and is finally punctured by a crane and crashes through the roof of his own home. A mighty good laugh.
Nothing Succeeds Like Success

"Here is something really different, differently real, a genuine innovation in pictures that promises to be something more than a momentary stunt scoring only as a novelty. The Almanac, judged by its first two numbers, seems the happy product of mechanical skill and inventive imagination. There's wit and workmanship of a high order in "The First Circus" and "The Original Tooth Carpenter." There's nothing clumsy or crude about them. And they are distinctly pictorial, little cinematographic gems. The Sarg-Dawley combination looks good."

"An instantaneous success."

Motion Picture News.

"This new invention is entirely revolutionary."

New York Review.

"It doesn't make any difference how bad the feature picture may be; if Tony Sarg's Almanac is on the bill, it's bound to be a great show!"

Robert E. Sherwood in "Life"

"Immense is the one word which will do justice to the first of the animated marionette pictures to be known as Tony Sarg's Almanac. This short reel is the most artistic bit of fooling so far devised for the screen."

O. C. C. Committee at Work—Move Would Create Additional
First Runs in New York
The special committee of the Theater Owners' Chamber of Commerce which has in charge the creation of ones in Greater New York, has already reached the point and it is evident that the boundaries of the areas which will be made known will be drawn.

It is understood that the larger theater circuits in the city are cooperating with the committee in working out the plan. The idea of looking after the more remote sections of the city is that all the theaters will be divided into a number of districts, each to be run by a committee. It is figured that the move, although step by step, will be an aid to the exhibitors.

Some exhibitors do not like to be salaried men and it is figured that the move, although slower, will be on a-aid to the exhibitors.

City Fire Ordinance Will Probably

Several important conferences have

Laboratory Men Stirred Up, Organize; Fear Eastman—Brulatour Control
Visit Rochester in Effort to Determine Action Eastman Plans—Assured
He is Not Interested in "Lab" Situation; Still Feel Upset—Matter
May Be Taken to Federal Trade Commission for Investigation

Laboratory men in and around New York are upset and seriously worried.

It is understood that they fear the complete domination of the "lab" situation by either George Eastman of the Eastman Kodak Co., or Jules E. Brulatour, the Eastman representative here, and from whom all purchases of raw stock are made.

Although several laboratory men talked to me reticent relative to the situation and their plans, it is understood that practically all of the men appearing "lab"s in and round New York—including those in New Jersey—are members of the Allied Film Laboratories Association, which has been organized very recently.

It is also understood that this organization is planning some very definite action with regard to the situation, and the matter may reach the Federal Trade Commission for investigation.

The reticence of the "lab" men is explained on the grounds that they fear "being put out of business" if they talk; meaning by this that their supply of raw stock might be cut off at any time by Eastman.

It is known, however, that within the past two weeks a delegation of laboratory owners visited George Eastman at Rochester, by telegraphic appointment, to discuss with him the question of whether or not he, or any Eastman officials or representatives were interested, or intended becoming interested in laboratories. Mr. Eastman assured these men, it is understood, that he had no idea of entering their field, nor did he believe that any of his representatives were in, or intended entering that field.

When Mr. Eastman was asked whether he knew of Mr. Brulatour being in the laboratory business, or planning to enter it, he suggested the Brulatour, who was in Rochester, be asked to attend the conference.

This was objected to by the delegation who said they thought they knew what Mr. Brulatour's attitude would be,
and insisted that they wanted to discuss the matter with Mr. Eastman alone. Mr. Eastman, it is understood, reiterated what he had said previously, commented on a letter which he had issued a long time ago denying that he ever intended entering the laboratory business, and concluded by saying that had he known the laboratory men would object to the presence of Mr. Brulatour that he would not have met them. In reply to which he was informed in advance of the conference that the laboratory men had asked for a "personal and private" meeting.

It is understood that the attention of the National Association has been called to the situation in Buffalo where a number of theaters, according as reported at 12 and 15 have perfected a book of films in order to reduce the price of film rentals.

What the final decision will be with the information secured by the National Association is that the question was discussed at a recent meeting of the committee. It is not believed that the National Association will be a body voted against booking films in the area to be covered by the combine, on the advice of several of the members of the committee. It is understood, however, that various distributor members have been informed of the combine by letter, attached to which was the list of the theaters involved.

existing fire prevention regulations are, with few exceptions, entirely adequate for the protection of life and property.

Fire Commissioner Drennan, Chief Kenlon and others associated in the Fire Department, have shown a willingness to meet the representatives more than half way in a thorough analysis of the question of safeguarding the lives of employees in exchanges, laboratories and studios, and there is a strong indication that the proposed ordinance, which was originally drafted upon the recommendation of the Division of Combustibles of the Bureau of Fire Prevention, will be modified in such a way that no undue hardship will be imposed upon the film industry.

At the conference, several suggestions as to modifications were made by the Committee. Acting as spokesman for the committee was Saul E. Rogers.

The most important objection raised by the committee to the proposed restrictions on exchanges was against the requirement that the amount of exposed film be limited to 10,000 ft. Rogers suggested that this provision be amended to allow one reel of exposed film each to any number of examiners up to 15, and that all excess reels in the examining room be confined in containers. In the receiving rooms of most of the exchanges, however, he said it would be impossible to conduct the business under any such restrictions as the proposed ordinance contemplates. The latter requires that film arriving at the receiving room be immediately placed in receiving vaults or cabinets not more than 10 ft. away from the receiving table. As a substitute requirement, it was suggested that 30% of the amount of film handled in any day should be allowed to temporarily remain outside the vaults pending examination, but no instances should arise where film be outside of the regulation containers.

Several further conferences will be held in the near future preliminary to the inspection tour of Chief Kenlon and his associates.

A sale is now completed by which D. W. Griffith, Inc., obtains the exclusive film rights to Kate Claxton’s famous play, "The Two Orphans".

Talk about efficiency. That’s efficiency plus.

PROTECTING AN INFANT INDUSTRY

Ye allwise Congressmen. Who would tax foreign films 60 per cent. Lord only knows how the Appraisers will start fixing their valuation. Been trying to do it for years in this industry.
And it’s a big guess at best. Even today. After all these years.
There’s a hundred thousand a year job. For the man who can place exhibition value. And always hit it. Connick would like to have him. So would Schwalbe. And a few others.

But anyway. Suppose it can be done. Then what? Let’s see. When did humans stop being humans? Who knows where they play Biblical? And turn the left cheek. To be smote.
After they’ve been wallopped on the right jaw? In Heaven.
Yes. But where else? Certainly not in Europe. Not if you think about 1814’-18.

Well whatcha think? Suppose you were a European producer. O distributor. And suppose some country taxed your product. Until it became impossible to do business. In that country. At a profit. What would you do? Take reprisals?
Give that country some of its own medicine? Very likely. And that’s what’s likely to happen.

And then what about the foreign business for American films?
All answers cheerfully awaited.

"Lab“ Men Worried

One of the points made at this conference, it is said, was that the laboratory operators were being compelled to send their checks and trucks to the G-M laboratory in Long Island city, where it was claimed, Mr. Brulatour was making his offices.

Subsequently on returning from Rochester it is reported that laboatory men were informed that stock would be delivered to their plants, and they would not have to send trucks to Long Island for their stock.
The fact that this happened within 24 hours after their visit to Rochester has caused considerable discussion among these men in view of the statements made by Mr. Eastman.

When a prominent laboratory man, who is believed to be active in the new organization, was asked if the report was correct that the new Asdociation intended taking the matter to the Federal Trade Commission for investigation, he said he had no idea of what the Association intended doing and refused to discuss the Association or its plans further.

According to reports in circulation in the trade it is more or less com-non gossip that Mr. Brulatour is interested in the Paragon “lab” in Fort Lee; the G-M plant in Long Island
City, and he is also reported interested in the big San Toy plant now within a few months of completion in Fort Lee. This is said, will be the largest laboratory in this county when completed.

On June 27, last year, WID’S DAILY published a report relative to the Eastman-Brulatour activities with regard to the laboratory situation, and shortly after in behalf of Mr.
Brulatour a statement was issued denying the report absolutely.

A complete statement from Jules Brulatour relative to the foregoing report will be published in tomorrow’s issue.

Mr. Eastman was forwarding a copy of the story which appeared in yesterday's issue with a request for a statement.

Economy Move

F. P.-L. Believes Production in One Spot Will Be Cheaper—Reason for Long Island Closing

The following official statement was issued from the offices of Famous Players-Lasky yesterday regarding the closing of the Eastern studios.

"Famous Players-Lasky Corp. will transfer its producing units from its Long Island City studio to itsLos Angeles studio, as soon as the Paramount properties now in the making at Long Island City are completed, according to an announcement made today by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the corporation, in charge of production.

"This transfer is made in the interest of economy," Mr. Lasky said. 'We shall take advantage of the California situation, which is that the rainy season in Los Angeles is ended. We are not cutting down production but merely taking steps to produce more economically. The Long Island City studio will be opened again when the rainy season makes it impractical to continue production here. We do not believe in operating an enclosed studio, with its tremendous expense for electricity, at a time when we can get electricity more economically in Hollywood. The companies that are now being sent to the coast will return here in the fall.'"

WALKER'S BOMBSHELL

Zukor Talks to Charges Made Against Famous Players and Wall Street "Domination"

A long statement issued yesterday by Adolph Zukor replied to some charges made against him and Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Zukor reiterates his stand he made a year ago with reference to "domination," and declares that the companies are not attempting to drive their business away.

The statement is as follows:

"The statement is in accordance with the policy of the company. It is a denial of any such activity, and that it is being carried on by the Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

Famous Quarterly Earnings

Famous Players-Lasky Corp., consolidated statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies owned 50% or more) issued yesterday, reports for the quarter ended March 30, 1921, net operating profits of $1,591,947, after deducting all charges and reserves including Federal income and excess profit taxes.

Charges Powerful Interests With Combine Plans—Advocates Organization of Independents To Fight It

Senator James J. Walker, national counsel for the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, at a welcome home luncheon given in his honor by the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York at the Hotel Astor, made some sensational charges yesterday. His outstanding point was that through various machinations of important and powerful interests in the motion picture industry the business faced "trustification."

The Senator spoke for almost an hour, showing the danger into the portion dealing with the combination of big interests towards the close of his address. He stated that the belief that a danger faced independents in the business was growing on the coast, and added that its influence had not as yet reached the east.

He warned those present—and the guests included representatives of Famous Players, Select, Robertson-Cole, and Goldwyn—that the exhibitors' future in the business was seriously threatened and urged upon them a realization of their danger.

1st Natl' Denies

A prominent official of First National stated yesterday in refutation of the Walker charges:

"There is no such thing as eight directors of First National on any board. There are more than eight.

The rest of the story is as accurate as the statement regarding the directors.

"If Zukor controls any of the First National franchise holders, those men don't know about it."

"The story is apparently a revival of the reports in circulation last year when it was rumored that Zukor owned 50% of the holdings of First National franchise holders in the Pittsburgh territory and 50% of the holdings of other First National men scattered throughout the country."

Wm. M. Vogel, exporter, after an absence of over two months in various European film markets returned to his New York headquarters yesterday on the S. S. Olympic. He found his offices already fitted out for him on the third floor of the Leavitt Bldg.

May Get Together

Minneapolis Independents May Meet During Exhibitors' Convention

During the convention of the M. P. T. O. at Minneapolis, June 27-29, a large number of independent operators are expected to be present. The Federated group plan to hold a meeting in Minneapolis at about this time, and from what a number of independents say they will also be in attendance.

The suggestion was made yesterday by a man active in the independent field that this would probably be the very best time for all of the independents to get together and if possible definitely organize.

He suggested that the Burr idea of a Board of Trade could be used as the basic point from which efforts might be developed to bring about a real organization of independent operators. Starting with the Burr Board of Trade the plan could be enlarged and developed to cover any and all points which might arise.

In addition Brandt has secured rights for several pictures to distribute, but he is not ready to talk about it. Brandt leaves today for Chicago to attend the Federated convention in that city.

Mary Miles Minter, who during the past two years has become a full sized star, met the editors of the trade press and a number of other newspaper people at a luncheon given in her honor by Realart at the Baltimore yesterday.

Mary was very sweet as the guest of honor and let everyone else do the talking for her. S. Jay Kaufman act ed as toastmaster, and after several other editors of the trade papers passed the buck as speech makers, Arthur James responded nobly.

Miss Minter plans to sail for Europe on an extended vacation on Saturday. She will be accompanied by her mother and sister who were also present at the luncheon. She said that she had no idea of making pictures while on the other side.

Newspaper Opinions

"A Wise Fool"—F. P. L.

Rivoli

TRIBUNE—There is a pretty good picture at the Rivoli. "..." It starts off in rather a nice way, and it is chiefly interesting, we think, because of the excellent direction.

GLOBE—For the half of fame heroes who are fighting the demon of dullness now threatening our films, we nominate George McRobe. He is never dull, never ham, and never flabby, even when confronted by a scenario which is all of these things.

Fortunately his latest story at the Rivoli this week is as direct and convincing as his own methods.

JOURNAL—"..." screened at the Rivoli this week with all the appealing charm and patina that marked the novel.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Even laying aside the book it is hard to find much to enthusiastic about.

TELEGRAM—"..." delightful audiences at the Rivoli Theater this week.

MAIL—"..." picture is at least unusual. The screen version does not come up to the standard of the story and on the whole seems weak.

POST—"..." "The Wise Fool" is tedious, low powered, uninteresting, although it has qualities which might have made it just the reverse of all these. It is enhanced by settings of considerable beauty.

The Black Panther's Cub"—Ziegfeld

Prod.

Capitol

TRIBUNE—There are enough plot and enough incidents in it to make a 15-episode serial...

The Black Panther's Cub" is the wildest melodrama..."...

WORLD—And this is what makes "The Black Panther's Cub" an interesting, if sketchy and uneven cinema play. Florence Reed is an excellent screen actress. In emotional work before the camera she is surpassingly fine.

GLOBE—The film's strongest point is in the lucid local color as painted by the director, Emil Chautard. The most flagrant fault is in the subtitles. "..." Miss Reed's excellent work in double exposure, however, fortunately could not be injured by the text.

JOURNAL—"..." is a whirlwind of emotion and action. "..." The picture is vivid and exciting. The cast is splendid. Florence Reed does both leading roles equally well.

MAIL—As a story, this is woeful, and to add to the general despair, the subtitles are mawkishly poetic.

And this film has a cast at the highest type. "..." What a pity they could not have been given something to work in worthy of their genius and talent.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—"..." one of the best screen dramas that has reached Broadway in many months, due in great part to the art of Miss Reed combined with the unusually capable direction of Emil Chautard.

TELEGRAM—Miss Reed's acting in the roles of both her mother and daughter is note worthy.

James J. Walker Gives Reasons for Charge
And Attacks N.A.M. P. I. on Censorship
—The Details

Below will be found in detail the charges made by Senator

James J. Walker that the industry is menace of a trust. He explains why he holds that belief.

Walker also attacked the National Association on its method of handling the censorship situation in New York. The charges in detail follow:

A Trust Menace?

The motion picture industry faces

Here are Walker’s reasons for the bel ief, as expressed at the luncheon:

All through the West the ten dency is growing that a move for the formation of a trust is under way. In Hollywood it is common talk that the only lot working at capacity is the Lasky plant.

“You meet independent producers,” said Walker, “and ask them what they are doing. They answer, ‘Nothing. Cer

Walker said independent producers and directors cannot get loans to fin ance new productions, despite the fac that these men have excellent records behind them. Where a bank is willin

Walker. “Famous Players have two

Miller as Censor
To give producers an idea of the character of films he approves, Governor Miller is to act as censor of one picture. He has accordingly consented to have a private showing of "The Cave Girl" at the executive mansion next week. The matter was arranged by Charles H. Duell, Jr., of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., who will release the picture.

"The Governor," said Duell, "conveyed to me the idea that productions should be of a type that will be suitable for the entire family, pictures that a father or mother would feel absolutely safe in having their children witness them.

"Governor Miller agreed that this would be a good idea and suggested that the picture be given a showing in his Albany home. Mrs. Miller to invite some of her friends and their children to have their friends there, in addition I will take up some persons interested in the motion picture industry so that they can personally get the views of the Governor as he witnesses the picture. Arrangements are now being made for the exhibition and this will be the first time that "The Cave Girl" will be given even a semi-public showing."

Beck Held
(Continued from Page 1) has been advanced, but because the $5,000 due last year has not been paid Vario Films has the right to demand the entire $25,000. The alleged fraud and deceit involved in the suit arises from the fact that Garrett agreed to deliver from four to six films a year and to assign as security for the payment of the $25,000 the share of the Arthur F. Beck Prod., owned by Beck and Garrett, from the proceeds of "Tailed by Three," distributed by Pathe. Beck warranted to the plaintiff that the Beck Productions' share in the film stated had not been hypothecated and that he had a right to assign it to Vario, but the plaintiff states that the Beck company had sold out all its rights to Pathe for cash and when the warranty by Beck was made nothing was due Beck. The plaintiff says that only one film has been delivered under the Tracy agreement and both Beck and Garrett have admitted that the Beck company has no assets and that they are unable to pay the loan.

1) First National several. Where's this man show his picture? Up alley?
Walker cited an instance of what transpired to Ben Hampton on the fist when the latter endeavored to be money at his bank. He was denied. Whereupon Hampton procured gold bonds of the City of Los Angeles which the bank had sold him for $400. When the Franklin arrived Walker was standing on those bonds, otherwise he threatened to dig the story to the newspapers.

Walker described conditions on the street where the president of the executive organization of Los Angeles had sold his theaters because "can't stand the gaff." Where tapes exhibitors held but a few theatres they now controlled chains of 10 to 20, and Walker queried why, if they didn't have any more money than they had before.

On April 19, 1921, the company that Famous Players had done in Matrono, Ill., a man with a population of 13,400 and a B. U. man opened a small theatre. Famous Players representative called on the man with his new contract. "Forbidden Fruit," was listed at $300 and "Heliotrope" at $400. The man had been a playhouse and Walker pointed out that the exorbitant rentals. The money was not to be paid to him, but claimed the man had to pay for those prices. The man refused. Later, the same page appeared in a Matrono newspaper in which the advantages of Matrono as a city were praised these lines:

Matrono has beautiful parks; Matrono has beautiful stores; but—Matrono cannot play Famous Plays—pictures."

The civic pride of the town was upheld and with funds subscribed by local merchants a new theater was erected in opposition to the famous house. The new house is showing Famous pictures.

In Des Moines Walker said he across a man named Blakemen who had previous worked for S. A. known in the South. Blakemen is said to sign an affidavit declaring that Lynch's methods of securing money in the South were more drastic than those of Alfred S. Black in Des Moines, Vt., where Mrs. Dodge had a house. Blakemen told Walker that one day he went to Lynch and protested against a certain deal, whereupon Lynch said "This is no time for sentiment, we don't have that theater."

Harting cabinet and a well-known state politician had practically pledged themselves to squash the Clayton-Lusk bill. Walker took this as gospel and on the strength of that decided to withhold all propaganda.

Later in Albany, believing that the matter was "set," Walker took no definite action. Then in the Senate he was informed by Senator Lusk that order had come "from downstairs," meaning the Governor’s chambers," that the bill was to go through.

In the Senate chamber that night Lusk used as the clinching argument the 14 points drawn up by the National Association, as indicating wrongs in present production methods that should be eliminated. Faced by what he called "an industry’s self-indictment," Walker as minority leader and opponent to the bill, had no defense to make.

Then Walker got busy and the M.P.T.O. started its campaign with the public. One million, two hundred thousand petitions were signed and sent to Albany. Seven senators, Walker said, later told him that the misunderstanding had caused their votes to be cast for censorship.

"It was co-operation the kind the National Association talks of, that brought censorship to New York State," said Walker in concluding that phase of his address.

One of the achievements of the M. P. T. O. during the meeting in Wash-

Assistant Superintendent of Parcel Posts Ryan was called into the con-stating was issued to every first and second class post office giving orders to pay particular attention to films sent by parcel post.

They were ordered to see that such films were sent out on first trains, and that speedy delivery was effected when they arrived at the postal staganization. For that purpose the Ultra studio has been leased for five months.

Ultra represents a merger of several Italian producing units, including the Bernini and Nova. It is the plan of the company to import to Italy American directors, technical men and artists to appear in future productions. These pictures will be based on the works of authors who have used Italy as the settings for their stories.

Two negatives will be made of each subject: one for Italian consumption and the second for exhibition in the Latin-speaking countries. A detailed affiliation has been made with certain American film men, but who are unknown at the present time.

Ultra is the company which is making “Ben Hur.”

"It is reported that certain interests in the motion picture industry are encouraging a movement for Federal censorship of motion pictures."

CHARACTER OF STORY..... A salesgirl is mistaken for a movie star in a fashionable hotel and plays the part until the real actress arrives

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 4,136 feet

The picture follows closely the Saturday Evening Post story and is given a pleasing and faithful presentation. The theme is most suitable for Bebe Daniels who enjoys her part and charms her audience. Although the story and plot are far from new it has a fanciful charm that Bebe Daniels creates and carries through with a good deal of success. The gross effect is a pleasing, light and entertaining picture.

The director’s hand can be seen throughout the production. This is particularly evident in the last reel where the star plays a dual role. The cutting and continuity are very effective in these scenes.

There is a clever twist at the conclusion of this story that makes the ending out of the ordinary and cases off the dramatic climax. Miss Daniels is on the screen practically all the time. She appears first as a salesgirl in a fashionable gown shop where she is given two weeks vacation with pay. She starts for a fashionable resort where she can display the gowns of her shop, and allow the proprietor to follow up with orders. On her way from the station to the hotel her jitney smashes into a roadster and she finds herself in a mud puddle beside J. Livingston Smith, the driver of the roadster. This is a very amusing scene. When the shop girl arrives at the hotel she is mistaken for a film star and promises to appear in a children’s benefit. The shopkeeper arrives and commences taking orders for gowns and helps to entangle the girl in the misrepresentation. She does a high dive at the performance, but fails to come to the surface of the tank. Smith drags her out just as the real star arrives. The star, however, does not seriously object to the mistaken identity and all is settled. Smith in the end turns out to be a garage owner and not the rich young man that the girl fancied he was.

Miss Daniels takes the dual role of the shopgirl and the movie star. George Periolat does good character work as the fashion shopkeeper. Jack Mulhall takes the part of J. Livingston Smith. The entire cast lend support to the star and enter into the light spirit of the production. The cast also includes James Mason, Frances Raymond, Polly Moran and Walter Hiers. While “Two Weeks Without Pay” presents nothing very startling or distinctive it is, nevertheless, a pleasing and amusing light picture. The titles and the little drawings that accompany them are novel and entertaining.

Will Please and Amuse an Average Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“Two Weeks Without Pay” has enough comedy and charm to satisfy your patrons and please the admirers of Bebe Daniels. There will be many who will get a good deal of enjoyment out of the star’s performance and the situations in this piece. Talk about the star as a shop girl and a famous movie actress. Tell them about the high dive and the mud puddle.

Use the star’s name and also the name of Nina Wilcox Putnam, the author of this Saturday Evening Post story. Use the line: “Her vacation started in a mud puddle and ended in a bungalow for two.” If your women patrons are interested in gowns and fashions, you can lay stress on this feature of the picture. The title should also prove a timely drawing card if well advertised. The star, too, has many friends and admirers. There should be little difficulty in putting this one over at this season of the year. It is a light and amusing summer feature.

Character of Story........ Amatuer fighter, against sick mother's wishes, fights to secure money to send her to Florida

Length of Production ........... 6,747 feet

Everybody will be delighted with Ray's latest. He caters to both men and women. In the earlier reels especially and then again when he fights to secure money enough to send his mother south, his devotion to the little old lady will please the women, and if you are to judge from the applause from men at the Strand, they'll be thoroughly satisfied. Charlie gives them a four round bout that is greeted with applause when he knocks out the professional at the end of the fourth round.

Ray is his own director in "Scrap Iron," and it isn't often that this combination of star and director turns out as satisfactorily as it does in this case. He works up his story to an exciting climax that brings them to the edge of the seats and the knockout comes and it's all over before you know it. It would seem that Ray might have brought his ending closer to the actual climax, because the aftermath rather tends to slow things up a trifle. He spends a little time keeping you guessing as to what is going to follow. It is made to appear that his opponent will die and that he will be held by the police. But of course that doesn't occur, and the usual happy ending is reached.

There's a bit of romance, fairly slight, in "Scrap Iron," but it is liable to surprise folks, because Charlie doesn't take Midge Flannigan back once she "throws him over" for the professional fighter. Vera Stedman acts too much like the Bowery for a small town girl. Stanton Heck is the fight promoter, Tom O'Brien the professional, and others are Tom Wilson, Charles Wheelock and Claude Berkeley. Lydia Knott is the mother.

John Steel had been nicknamed "Scrap Iron" by the other workers because he has given up boxing at the request of his sick mother. John suffers the rebukes of the crowd for his mother's sake and even loses his girl because he refuses to fight an unfortunate drunkard. John loses his job and is near the end of his funds when he decides to accept Battling Burke's challenge if for nothing more than the $200 loser's share. The drunkard proves a friend in need and helps John train. He goes into the ring and at the end of the fourth round knocks out his opponent. John gets enough money to take his mother South to regain her health and at the same time refuses to make up with his girl, who comes back when he's a hero.

All Your People Will Like It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It doesn't seem necessary to say what to do with a Charles Ray picture. He's a popular favorite and it is quite likely that exhibitors all over play his pictures to satisfaction always. "Scrap Iron" offers a pleasing comparison to his last, "The Old Swimmin' Hole," so you can promise them something different and all you'll have to do will be to mention the fight and show stills of the ringside in your lobby to fill your house with men. They seemed to get a lot of enjoyment out of it at the Strand.

Appeal to your women patrons by telling them of the boy's devotion to his sick mother and of his sacrifice to gain money to send her to a health resort. You can make almost any promise you want and not hear a comeback. Exploitation will be well worth while and the theme suggests any number of ways of putting "Scrap Iron" over and it will go over if you see that it does.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Tells of one whose cheap philosophy brings him to disaster but his true philosophy saves him in the end
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 6,768 feet

As in his productions of the recent past, George Melford again proves his ability as an artistic director in “A Wise Fool,” and that is about the most attractive feature of his latest picture. He has provided Sir Gilbert Parker’s novel with really beautiful backgrounds, has selected James Kirkwood to give a pleasing character study of a philosopher, whose theories brought him only disaster, and on the whole has given most of his attention to these two things.

On the other hand, “A Wise Fool,” after an interesting beginning and promises of good things to come, resolves into a series of character studies, and an atmosphere of unhappiness which keeps piling on to the very end, until the final scene, when a canary bird is the means of bringing together the estranged husband and wife. There is very little sunshine in the picture, and because of this very fact, it seems the more tedious and slow-moving. And the unhappy incidents are not well enough founded to gain your sympathy. For instance, when the daughter leaves her father, previously deserted by his wife, you cannot feel sorry for him, because he is unreasonable in objecting to her lover. A title tells you he is a “man from the outside,” but that is about the only reason offered for the father’s objection.

James Kirkwood, wearing a beard throughout the entire picture, does good work and is given adequate support by a capable company mentioned above. Another player whose name has not been used and who appears in “A Wise Fool” is Alan Hale. He has not been seen in some time.

Jean Jacques Barbille, wealthy egotist and philosopher in a small Parish of Quebec, returns from Paris with Dolores, a Spanish girl, as his wife. Even when their daughter is grown, Carmen realizes how her husband neglects her, and finally leaves him. Then the daughter goes West with her lover when Jean objects to her marriage. The last straw is the burning of Jean’s mill. After this his money is stolen. After long wanderings he comes upon his wife, ill in a convent. There is a reconciliation followed by the arrival of the daughter and her husband, who have been searching for Jean.

Except That It’s A Bit Long, They Won’t Be Displeased

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

George Melford’s latest contribution is a pretty picture, but that is not sufficient to satisfy the average audience. The main fault of “A Wise Fool” is that it moves too slowly, due to the long stretches of footage given to studying the character of the featured player. Perhaps Paramount will cut it considerably, in which event it can be recommended more strongly. You can promise beautiful settings and a thoroughly artistic production.

Tell them it is an adaptation of Sir Gilbert Parker’s novel, “The Money Master,” and recall the producer’s past productions which you may have played—“The Sea Wolf,” “The Round Up,” “Behold My Wife,” “The Jacklins” and “The Faith Healer.” If you think they are familiar with James Kirkwood’s name, you might speak of him as the featured player. Catchlines can be employed and used to good advantage in your program prior to the showing of the picture.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Son about to be executed for murder of his own father is saved by his mother
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,044 feet

Realism is usually considered a splendid feature of photoplay, but in some instances it is just as well if things aren't made too real. This happens to be the case in "Mother O'Mine." When they actually go through the process of an electrocution for the sake of reality, that's going a bit far, and it is a bet that the majority of picture patrons will agree that there is little entertainment afforded by such a vivid depiction of capital punishment. It's thoroughly gruesome.

And that is the only fault to be found with Thomas H. Ince's latest production for Associated Producers. He has given Charles Belmont Davis' story "The Octopus" a splendid production, Fred Niblo has directed capably, and the mother love theme is given good play and comes in at a splendid climax in the happy ending which is certainly needed after the sordid, unhappy reels preceding it.

Up to the moment of the murder, folks are sure to be pleased with the picture. But after that point probably only sensation lovers will be satisfied with it. The efforts to make it strikingly dramatic are forced to exaggeration, flames are used to indicate fury, etc. And above all, the death scene of the man who was really accidentally killed, is uncanny. Joseph Kilgour is guilty of extreme overacting in this instance.

Loyd Hughes has a nice personality that stands out, and his performance together with that of Claire McDowell, as his mother, is one of the production's assets. Betty Blythe makes much of a "wild woman" role, even to perjuring herself to send Hughes to the chair. Betty Ross Clark is the heroine.

Years before Mrs. Sheldon Thatcher had been deserted by her husband. She has brought up her son, Robert, in the belief that his father is dead. His desire to make good in the city leads her to send him to her husband, Willard Thatcher. Unknown to him, Rob works for his own father, and all goes well until he learns of Thatcher's nefarious financial schemes. A fight follows when Thatcher tells Rob that he is the husband of his mother, but that Rob is not his son. Thatcher is killed accidentally, and on the evidence of Fan, Thatcher's woman, Rob is condemned. A last minute, forced confession from Fan by Rob's mother, saves her son's life.

Can Be Recommended Only After Liberal Cutting

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Educated audiences don't want entertainment in the form of murders and executions and even though "Mother O'Mine" is nicely camouflaged with mother love, there is altogether too much footage and a severe reality given to the presentation of the murder and electric chair business. No matter how powerful a suspense is created by this last minute death house reprieve angle, it's unpleasant. It doesn't make much difference which way you try to look at it. You cannot help but feel "heavy."

Associated Producers, or Mr. Ince, will do themselves and the industry in general a world of good if they eliminate most of the execution scenes from "Mother O'Mine." If they do you can play safe with the picture and undoubtedly please your folks. On the other hand if it comes to you without cutting, use your own judgment and use it well. Lloyd Hughes will be remembered from "Homespun Folks" in case you played it. The original story "The Octopus" might be mentioned.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Girl lion tamer takes a job as man tamer and falls in love with her victim

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .. 4,516 feet

Most folks will agree that Gladys Walton is more appealing in her handling of the lions than she is convincing in her manner of taming a rich, never do well. However, the romantic twist of "The Man Tamer" is the lesser important of the two main situations, and the star's appearance as a lion tamer, and her actual encounter with the "cats" as the title-writer likes to call them, will surely interest audiences and make them wonder at the little star's "nerve." For from all appearances there is no fake about her being in the cage with the animals. It is very well done and quite likely to please folks, especially admirers of Miss Walton.

There's one thing that audiences may wonder at. How do they manage the attack of the lion on two different occasions? You see the beast from the moment he springs until he lands on the man. However it's done it is well managed and furnishes a thrill, though perhaps not such a pleasant one.

The director has not wasted any time in telling the story and there is no period that becomes tedious. There are no surprises and the ending is obvious long before it is reached, but that doesn't detract noticeably from the feature's favor. The star is pleasing, as usual, and makes quite a charming circus performer.

Kitty Horrigan and her father are billed as the "De Augverne," lion tamers, with a small circus. The owner of the show, Delmar, persists in his attentions toward Kitty, but is always repulsed. Finally he has one of his men torment the lions so that when Kitty and her father go through with their act, one of the animals attacks the father, injuring him so that he is unable to work again. Kitty finally leaves the show and through the efforts of Bradley P. Caldwell, a rich young fellow who loves her, secures a vaudeville engagement. Kitty refuses to be friends with Bradley though, partly because he is so rich and because he is seldom sober. Caldwell, Sr., interviews the lion tamer and she agrees to become a man tamer. Of course she's successful and after some more unpleasantities with Delmar, marries young Caldwell.

Gladys Walton Fans Will Like Her in This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Admirers of Gladys Walton will have a novelty in store for them when they see "The Man Tamer." It is a bit different from anything she has done lately, and you can tell them about her performance with trained lions. The man taming part of the picture is not nearly as important as the lion tamer sequence, but probably Universal knows which title sells the best and so they are calling it "The Man Tamer." Anyway, it is true that she tames a man. It will furnish material for some interesting discussion in the family circle, perhaps.

In announcing the showing play up the star and the title, and use catchlines in your programs, and Universal will supply you with stills of Miss Walton in her ringside regalia. Say, "It was easy for her to tame lions, but see what a job she had as 'The Man Tamer.'" Or, "If you don't believe wild men can be tamed, let Gladys Walton prove it in her latest Universal release."

CAMERA WORK .............................. Good

EXTERIORS ................. Good
INTERIORS ............... Average
DETAIL...... Fair. Titles too long and attempt to preach

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Story shows the contrast between the rich and the poor, who meet in an economic conflict. The story is told from the worker's point of view and has a very slight love theme

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...... About 6,000 feet

"The Contrast" is the first production of the Labor Film Service, Inc., and while it is full of valuable material it lacks dramatic and technical qualities. The story is not convincing for the exaggeration is too apparent. The text deals more with labor propaganda and social philosophies than it does with dramatic and screen values. The contrast is drawn between the intolerance and vulgarity of the rich and the oppression and virtues of the poor. It is a plea for the closed shop and is pictured through the viewpoint of organized labor.

The Labor Film Service was organized to give the public "pictures that would hold forth an ideal and give hope and inspiration—their purpose is to make pictures true to life and to labor." "The Contrast" certainly does not meet these ideals, for while it is a picture of everyday life and shows the struggle of the workers in an able manner, it lacks many qualities of better picture making. There is a good deal of material in these six reels and a lot of human interest, but the dramatic sequences do not follow one another in a logical manner and the general effect is not accumulative. It does not build up to one grand climax, but runs into many little climaxes. While this method might be more realistic than the single plot idea and is used today in the modern novel, it nevertheless makes a film appear very choppy.

The mining scenes in "The Contrast" stand out from the rest of the picture in a vivid manner. They carry the same message that Griffith delivered so ably in one of the parts of "Intolerance." The photography throughout is well done though handicapped by ordinary and indramatic lighting and unbalanced composition. The story deals with the struggles of the laboring classes and their conflict with the upper classes. Good workers are branded as trouble-makers and "blacklisted" so that they are denied the privilege of labor. Poor living conditions are shown and are contrasted against the waste and extravagance of the rich. A mine interior is pictured and an accident which might have been avoided by proper safety devices takes place. A strike follows—hunger, despair and violence are all shown. In the end the mine owners, realizing the strength of the union and fearing a national disaster, agree to the terms of the workers. A slight and poorly developed love theme is embroidered into the picture, but not much time or footage was wasted on this.

The types of the workers were very well chosen. Dorothy Seanger, as the sister of Jack Adams, does little acting, but rings a true note of pathos. Guy Hedlund as Jack Adams does some good work, but fails as a director. It is difficult for one man to direct and star in the same picture. The types of the rich in this are, however, very poorly chosen; they certainly do not look the million dollars they are supposed to represent.

The picture could be a good deal improved and made quite presentable if the titles were shortened.

Labor Message Not Suitable for General Distribution
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It would be difficult to recommend this picture for general showings. The film is a strong piece of labor propaganda and could be used only as such. It would be impossible to disguise this fact and for that reason it falls short of entertaining values. People do not like to be lectured. While this film may please certain sections of the American Federation of Labor and Socialist organizations, it might also be offensive to middle class audiences. The story champions the lower classes and completely ignores a middle class of workers.

Some people may be interested to see the first production of the Labor Film Service, Inc., and see their side of the labor situation, but even then it does not strike at the problems of today, there have been great changes in the past six months that this picture does not embrace. Use your own judgment before showing this one. The film is more of a political lecture than it is an entertaining drama.

If you don’t mind having your imagination stretched to some extent, you’ll probably be fairly well amused and entertained by “See My Lawyer,” Robertson-Cole’s presentation of Max Marcin’s stage play, in which T. Roy Barnes is the principal attraction, and which has been directed by Al. E. Christie who is capable of much better results in comedy making. Folks who refuse to imagine things won’t laugh at Marcin’s story because it will strike them as terribly nonsensical—the idea of the rubber making machine, and then the feigned insanity of its promoter when the authorities take a hand in his operations.

None of the attempts at comedy were greeted with outbursts of laughter, but the thing that appeared to amuse them the most was the maneuvers of Barnes when he pretends to be crazy. This is the best bit but even at that is quite artificial and comes after such a long lapse without a laugh that they almost forgot it was funny.

Director Christie has not made the most of the opportunities presented. In the first place he has not put in any humor in the long space he uses before reaching the main incident, and there is one place where he allows the spectator to believe he has reached the ending when there is about another reel to follow. This is so obvious that half the audience was up and out of the theater while those who remained saw about another reel.

T. Roy Barnes handles the principal role very well and his antics as a lunatic seemed to satisfy them. Grace Darmond is an attractive leading lady. She and Jean Acker both look good but have little to do.

The story is about a young man, Robert Gardner, who has the get-rich-quick fever. Gardner takes up the proposition of Otto Trueman who claims to have perfected a rubber-making machine. They flood the mails with literature and when it turns out that Trueman cannot make rubber, the postal authorities step in. Gardner’s friend, Billy, tells him to pretend insanity and they cannot hold him. Billy does, but in the meantime Trueman sells the rights of his machine for a million dollars which he divides with Billy and Gardner, only to learn that instead of making rubber, his apparatus turns out a splendid paving block.

Names and Catchlines Can Be Used
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“See My Lawyer” will get over all right if it is not hard to make your folks laugh, but you know their comedy tastes best so can be governed accordingly. T. Roy Barnes will be remembered by your patrons as the featured player in “Scratch My Back,” and if they are attracted by catchlines you ought to be able to arouse their interest with them. Say: “If you have a patent and it fails to make what you claim it will, don’t part with it. It may produce something else. This happens in ‘See My Lawyer.’” Or, “Ever hear of artificial rubber? They make it in ‘See My Lawyer,’ But that isn’t all. See for yourself at the blank theater.”

Use the author’s name and recall the stage play in which T. Roy Barnes was the star. If you played “So Long Letty,” also made by Christie, mention the fact. Perhaps the get-rich-quick idea will appeal to them. You might use lines along that line.

Tom Mix has written a wild one for himself this time. It surely is wild and woolly and there's enough action in it for a couple of pictures. The story itself isn't important, but Mix certainly makes himself work in the latter reels. The comedy is so silly that it demands laughs and even though at times, it isn't quite what refined folks will like, you are liable to overlook it. The title-writer plays a big part in the early laughs with a lot of what are commonly termed "wise cracks." Some are good and others not so. They're all on the order of "he has machines to do the work and a phonograph that talks so he doesn't need a wife"—or something on that order.

The Fox cowboy star will supply his admirer with an hour of laughs and thrills such as he has not given them before. From the title they can judge what most of the thrills consist of—fast riding and some brand new stunts. The opening reel is devoted to an intimate glimpse into the hero's home, showing some clever labor-saving devices of his own making. This idea has been used before in short reel comedies but it is good and gets a good many laughs.

But the latter reels are by far the best. The star does some great riding and no small amount of credit goes to Tony, his horse, who, by the way, is quite intelligent besides being a fast runner. There's one bit where he rides up a steep and sandy hill of no small height.

Mix does splendid work in the part he has written for himself and will be certain to satisfy those who like his pictures with this one. He presents a short sequence which appears to be "after Chaplin in 'The Kid,'" in which he doesn't know what to do with a little baby he has found.

Jim Rose, cowboy, wants to marry Mabel Brentwood, but her father objects. Some time previously old Brentwood, in a moment of weakness, had accepted the proposal of a widow who had immediately engaged herself to him and now arrives at the ranch to claim her husband. Brentwood does his best to get rid of the woman, but Jim's daring rescues always land the husband-grabber back on the ranch. Eventually Brentwood has Jim jailed but even that doesn't stop him. He breaks right through the jail and starts out on another rescue. Of course it ends happily with Brentwood marrying and consenting to his daughter's marriage to Jim.

Will Go Big If They Like Real Wild West

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You needn't be afraid to show them Tom Mix's latest if they like excitement and don't care how it's provided. Admirers of the star particularly will be well satisfied with his latest. Tell them he wrote the story. That should increase their interest. You might go into detail in talking about the thrills provided because there are some good ones. The Fox organization will most likely have stills available which can be secured for lobby display, and if you can get some of those showing his "stunts" they will attract attention.

Use the star's name in big letters and if you can secure a bit of the film before the showing date, they'll surely want to see it. The press sheet issued in connection with the feature contains a list of the big moments which can be used in your program for an advance notice. Catchlines and other advertising accessories are also provided by Fox.

The New York Globe says: "In the News Weekly a special tribute was paid to the pictures of Franklin K. Lane and Chief Justice White by a moment of utter silence, a darkened house and a distant bell tolling. It was an amazingly effective touch, none the less sincere for being intensely dramatic. AFTER ALL, AS FILM PLOTS GO, THE NEWS REELS WHEN PROPERLY PRESENTED HAVE THE MONOPOLY OF THE DRAMA ON THE SCREEN." The fact that the News Reels are full of drama is due to the energy and enterprise of INTERNATIONAL NEWS in so filling its reel with action-full, interesting news that all its competitors have, perforce, to follow. They follow simply because INTERNATIONAL is always first.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Professional adventurer with war record sets out to secure coveted paper for English nobleman whose daughter he loves
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 6,000 feet

It seems a bit too bad that "The Silver Car" does end up as strongly as it starts off. Director Smith gets it off with a bang by creating a fine suspense that is genuine and gathers the interest of the spectator from the very first. But the ending is a trifle weak, made so by a slight love interest which is used for a conclusion and which, prior to the ending, wasn't prominent nor an important part of the main situation.

Despite this not altogether harmful shortcoming, director Smith has made a good live bit of entertainment which contains several good thrills.

There are three or four long explanatory sub-titles that confuse more than they explain because of the use of names and countries foreign to what the spectator has been previously made acquainted with. This might be remedied by re-written captions.

Earle Williams does splendid work as the adventurer, supported by Geoffrey Webb and Emmett King satisfactorily. Eric Mayne overacts in the small part given him, while Kathlyn Webb is adequate but not particularly well suited to the leading role. As in some other recent pictures in which she has appeared, Mona Lisa displays too much of her anatomy.

Anthony Trent, international swindler and adventurer, seeks Private Smith, a war buddy and the only living person who knows Trent’s identity. Trent learns that Smith is really Arthur Grenvil, son of an English nobleman. Trent manages to become a guest in the Grenvil home unrecognized by Arthur. The elder Grenvil is finally persuaded to confide a certain trouble which keeps him from accepting a position of state. Trent journeys to a foreign country to secure a certain document which will allow Grenvil to resume his former position. He is successful after considerable adventure, and returns with the paper to claim the hand of Grenvil’s daughter.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Barber who plays king for a day and joker for a night with a close shave at the finish when the real king returns
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ... 5,016 feet

Sydney Chaplin plays the dual role of barber and king in this comedy that he has written for himself. He does a lot of good work throughout the entire picture though from the comedian’s point of view he offers nothing strikingly original. The production has a mild humor that will please and offend no audience. There are two separate parts to this story, and it is a long time before the king and the barber connect and the real action starts.

Once things get started they move along in a swift and snappy manner. The producer and director have provided very splendid European exteriors for the location of this imaginary kingdom.

The photography throughout this picture is excellent and deserves a good deal of favorable comment. There are several splendid long shots, and most of the exteriors are taken with a good deal of taste and judgment. The composition in many cases is original and good, with a few shots taken from unusual angles.

The imaginary kingdom where this story is laid is in a state of unrest due to the oppression and extravagance of its king who refuses to sign a people’s charter. A humorous barber who resembles the king falls in with a group of terrorists and agrees to take the king’s place when the king is kidnapped. The barber plays king and most of the humor of this picture is concentrated in these scenes. The real king, however, escapes and the barber is sentenced to be shot, but is saved by the queen and escapes in a bag. The production ends with an exciting automobile chase and an airplane transfer.

Lottie MacPherson has a slight but good part as queen in this production, and the supporting company fulfill their requirements in a co-operating way. This comedy marks the first production of the Sydney Chaplin producing company.

Use the Star’s Name and Play Up the King for a Day Idea

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Sydney Chaplin is a brother of Charlie and can be advertised as such. Base your exploitation and advertising on the idea of a barber being king for a day. A barber shop red and white pole with a crown on it placed in the lobby should be an attractive feature and demand attention.

Tell them about the close shave that the barber gets and your catch lines may read: “How would you like to be a king for a day?” or, “What would you do if you were king for a day?” Use Sydney Chaplin’s name in connection with this production and recall his screen career with Keystone comedies—especially “The Submarine Pirate.”

You can promise your audience a good comedy and an interesting piece of entertainment of high technical quality. Large playing cards of the king, queen and joker would be very effective if hung over the box office.

“COLD STEEL”
Robertson-Cole

DIRECTOR .................. Sherwood McDonald
AUTHOR ...................... George Shedd
SCENARIO BY ............... Monte Katterjohn
CAMERAMEN ....... E. S. Depew and John Thomson
AS A WHOLE... Some good action and attractive western atmosphere that will please admirers of this type of picture

STORY......A bit unconvincing at times, probably because of too much incident

DIRECTION ............... Good for the most part
PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS .................. All right CAMERA WORK......Up to standard; long shots good

PLAYERS......J. P. McGowan well suited and capable in title role; Kathleen Clifford fair as leading lady

EXTERIORS ................ Very pretty
INTERIORS .................. Adequate
DETAIL ........................ Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY.....Young engineer vows to avenge wrong against his father and finally gets the four men he wants

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 5,800 feet

“Cold Steel,” Robertson-Cole release, is an adaptation of George Shedd’s story which appeared in the Argosy Magazine under the same title, and later in book form under the name of “In the Shadow of the Hills.” The story has been pictured in true western fashion, with splendid exterior settings and the character types usually connected with this sort of production. A good deal of action is contained in the piece though at times it is quite unconvincing, and the spectator is somewhat confused by the complicated plottings of the various players.

It’s hard to tell, frequently, just who’s on top. The lone hero, “Cold Steel,” is fighting four would-be desperate characters but the players aren’t convincingly so, making their work often seem like a burlesque of what they should be. Picture goers who like excitement will be well satisfied with the piece, because there is quite a lot of shooting, much plotting and a bit of disaster caused by an explosion, also some labor troubles that aren’t very apparent except in the sub-titles.

J. P. McGowan who plays the title role is thoroughly well suited to the part and his performance is fine throughout. Others are quite suitable, but not as capable in rendering support. Kathleen Clifford is not an impressive heroine. At the outset of the picture you expect to see something on the order of “Soldiers of Fortune,” because of the engineering sequence, but it is subordinate to the main situation which is one of revenge.

Just before he dies, the father of “Cold Steel” tells his son that years before he had been “framed” for murder by four men who had taken all his money to allow him to escape. Steel vows to get the men whose names the father has given him. Steel is engaged to engineer the construction of the Burntwood Reservoir. It happens that one of the men Steel is after is in charge of the labor, but Steel bides his time and later learns that the other three are in the vicinity. There is trouble with the laborers and then Steel makes known his identity to the man in charge. The four decide that it would be better to have Steel out of the way, and then the plotting begins. They plan various ways of doing away with Steel, but he is too quick for them, and secures from an old Mexican a signed statement that he saw one of the four kill the man for whose murder they blamed Steel’s father. There is a romance woven in between the other business, which ends happily for Steel and the girl.

You Can Play with the Title and Use Catchlines

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Audiences that like this type of western which is billed by the producer as “love and life ‘neath western skies” will probably be fairly well pleased with “Cold Steel.” If they don’t mind action in the way of bomb plots and considerable shooting, the picture should appeal to them. They’ll like the work of McGowan as “Cold Steel” anyway. The title is a rather attractive one which can be made more interesting by the use of catchlines such as: “They called him ‘Cold Steel’ because he was sure and unafraid. See how he avenges the wrong done his father.”

There are no names to use in connection with the feature which mean anything to your patrons, so play up the title and talk about the story. You might mention that it appeared in the Argosy magazine under the name given previously. “Cold Steel” will go all right for a one time show.
Unusual Treatment Makes It Attractive

"THE WOMAN GOD CHANGED"
Cosmopolitan Prod.—Paramount

DIRECTOR .................... Robert G. Vignola
AUTHOR ...................... Donn Byrne
SCENARIO BY ................ Doty Hobart
CAMERAMAN .................. Al Liguori

AS A WHOLE...... Splendid development and elegant production make it out of the ordinary

STORY...... Is made interesting because of unusual handling; quite forcefully presented

DIRECTION...... Very good; artistic efforts effective; has made desert island sequence rather long

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good
LIGHTINGS ........................ Excellent
CAMERA WORK .................. First rate
PLAYERS...... Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln play leading roles very well; others satisfactory EXTERIORS ............ Some pretty tropical scenes INTERIORS ..................... Correct
DETAIL .............. Frequently too much of it

CHARACTER OF STORY.... Wanton regenerates so that four years after committing a crime the jury cannot find her guilty

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 6,306 feet

Director Vignola's handling of Donn Byrne's story has made an interesting picture of "The Woman God Changed." The manner in which he has developed the story holds the attention from the start. He really relates it backwards by starting off with the courtroom scene, and then going back and leading up to it through the use of flashbacks and finally bringing it to a climax in the courtroom where he began. This method proves mightily effective in this particular instance.

The feature is a bit too long, made so perhaps by the numerous and long sub-titles which occupy considerable footage. They are usually well written but they are sometimes unnecessary. Also the flashback showing the principals of the trial on a tropical island is quite a bit too long. This sequence could stand liberal cutting and still retain its purpose—that of proving that although the heroine is really the same who committed a murder four years previous, she has changed in the new environment. It offers a fairly persuasive argument.

The production values are all that could be desired. Settings are splendid, lightings effective and camera work generally very good. The island sequence offers a good contrast to the earlier "gilded life" episode. Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln are seen in the principal parts. It is probably the biggest chance Miss Owen has had and she does very well. E. K. Lincoln gives a pleasing performance. Lillian Walker and Henry Sedley handle smaller parts satisfactorily.

Anna Janssen, a dancer, kills Alastair De Vries when she learns he no longer loves her. McCarthy, a detective, is put on the case and ordered to bring back Anna, dead or alive. A clue leads him to the tropics where he finds the girl and starts back to San Francisco with her. The vessel is wrecked. Anna manages to swim to shore with the unconscious McCarthy. Several years the two remain on the deserted island, during which time they fall in love with each other and finally giving up hope of rescue, take each other in marriage. The new environment has completely changed the life of the girl and now she is willing to go back to justice. McCarthy refuses to carry out his command but Anna hails a passing steamer.

McCarthy tells the story of the past years and the verdict is manslaughter. The testimony gains the sympathy of everyone in the courtroom except the lawyers for the state who press the charge, but the final verdict sentences Anna to the custody of her husband for her natural life, and the judge suggests that they return to their island paradise where Anna had found redemption.

Has a Good Audience Appeal

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This type of "showy" production usually makes a big hit and in "The Woman God Changed" you not only offer a rather spectacular production, but also a novel theme which will interest them even for the way it is developed, if for no other reason. It is really not unusual or startlingly original, but the way it is told and director Vignola's handling makes it attractive. You should be able to do good business with it. Stills of the island sequence displayed prominently in the lobby should attract considerable attention.

Use the author's name. His stories appear in the leading magazines and his name is well known. Tell them about the work of E. K. Lincoln and Seena Owen. If your patrons remember names tell them Robert Vignola directed, and recall his "More Deadly Than the Male" and "The World and his Wife." The Paramount press sheet will furnish you with complete exploitation ideas.
Some Short Reels

"Country Life in Bohemia"—Famous Players

Type of production: ......................... 1 reel travel

This is a Burton Holmes travel picture. Burton Holmes leaves the Near East and travels up through Austria till Bohemia is reached. The map of that section of Europe is shown and Bohemia located. The simple country life of the peasants of this country is next illustrated. Workers are shown plowing the fields with the aid of oxen and the camera is also turned upon a harvest of sugar beets. Many types of peasant girls and women appear in this reel. Beautiful native costumes are shown and a village fete with native dancing concludes this picture. There are some good shots in this reel, especially those taken against the light allowing the massive figures of the peasants and their oxen to appear in silhouette against the sky.

"The Bakery"—Vitagraph

Type of production: ......................... 2 reel comedy

Larry Semon is the star of this latest pie-in-the-face comedy. The action is brisk from start to finish and the entire production filled with laughs. Larry Semon does some good work and gets over some very good comedy effects. The scene is laid in a bakery and the boss and his pretty daughter pay a visit to the dough works, but before they arrive Larry and the manager have started a little dispute. A lot of rough stuff follows. There is a very clever use of traps in the floor and some effective photography in the accelerated finish. In your people like good slap-stick they are sure to laugh at this one.

"A Glimpse Into the Animal Kingdom"—Kineto

Type of production: ......................... 1 reel magazine

This film reviews the animals in the Zoo. Polar bears wrestle and play in their pool. The macaw and the emu, a large ostrich-like bird, are shown. Alaskan brown bears, the largest of the species, appear on the screen, and so do the grizzlies. The film also shows black-necked swans, American wildcats, camels, large monkeys, seals and zebras. Lesser known animals are all shown—the Nilgar cals, the black buck of India, European wild boar, the gnu, red kangaroo of Australia, yaks and many others. This picture would please children and do well in towns that are not provided with a zoo of their own.

"Felix in the Love Punch"—Famous Players

Type of production: ......................... 1 reel animated cartoon

This cartoon is full of slapstick possibilities and is sure to be a laugh. Felix the cat has a funny walk and he hobble about in his own funny way. Felix is out with his sweetheart when they are surprised by a bear. A strong guy saves the girl and Felix is forced to take a back seat. But not for long, for he buys a bottle of liquid muscle and they both appear in the ring at Madison Square Garden. The fight that follows is sure to make anyone laugh. Felix is knocked out and we see his nine lives pass up to heaven. If your people like cartoons they are sure to get a good laugh out of this one.

"The Village Cow Puncher"—Universal

Type of production: ........................ 2 reel drama

This is a comic drama with the scene laid in the West and a small middle western town. The star of this drama is a cow puncher who leaves his ranch for a visit to a small town where he is due to collect an inheritance left him by a late uncle. The banker's daughter has a new Ford that she is learning to drive. It runs wild and the cowboy after a long chase ropes the machine and saves the girl. But bad men are in town and get the villager's money in a fake land deal in which they have induced the banker to co-operate. The girl overcomes the Project and at last the wins the girl and the money, and the villain takes them and saves the girl. The last scene of this picture is back on the ranch and the hero arrives with the banker's daughter—his wife. The small town atmosphere is very well done in this and the ranch scenes in the first reel are amusing and entertaining.

"Eccentricities of the Bee and the Wasp"—Kineto

Type of production: ........................ 1 reel educational

Many of the habits of the bee and wasp are clearly shown in this instructive film. How the bee deposits food for her eggs before sealing them away is clearly and simply shown. With the aid of animation the details of the young bee's development is illustrated. Wasp's nests in the trees and how they subsist from the sweets of the flowers is explained in detail. The photography of this picture is clear and the detail of all is clear and the photograph in the screen many times their original size. The intelligence of wasps is illustrated by changing their nests. The insects refuse to enter any nest but their own. This film would interest audiences in college towns and be particularly good for school instruction.

"Screen Snapshots No. 1"—Federated Film Exchanges

Type of production: ......................... 1 reel comedy

This reel not only shows close-ups of popular stars, but also has a lot of fun. It starts off with a few stunts from Max and they play on the camera and brings his wild beasts along. He has a lot of fun with the elephants and gets a good laugh when he tries to bite the lion. May Allison is next to appear and she is shown in an act of autographing many photographs. She autographs what is said to be the largest photograph in the world—it stands about eighteen feet high. Doris May and Wallace MacDonald have caught leaving the church, where they were married at dawn. Jesse Lasky is shown visiting his West Coast studio, where the camera also, catches Cecil B. DeMille, Dorothy Dalton and Fatty Arbuckle. Bebe Daniels is shown having a splendid time serving her ten days in jail for speeding. She makes a popular jail-bird and even shares her fruit with the judge who sentenced her. Her cell is decorated with flowers and the cameramen are given a good time. Finally this amusing magazine closes with a view of Mary Pickford posing for a painting. Fans will find this number of "Screen Snapshots" above the average of the series.

"The Claim Jumpers"—Universal

Type of production: ........................ 2 reel Western

Wild jump and a lot of rough riding are the outstanding features of this picture. The story presents nothing very new. A stranger comes to town and is induced to buy a salted mine. The girl who tends a lunch counter is unable to warn the stranger in time. Soon however, he discovers the fraud and while the he is forced to take a back seat. But not for long, for he buys a bottle of liquid muscle and they both appear in the ring at Madison Square Garden. The fight that follows is sure to make anyone laugh. Felix is knocked out and we see his nine lives pass up to heaven. If your people like cartoons they are sure to get a good laugh out of this one.

"The Life History of Frogs and Toads"—Kineto

Type of production: ........................ 1 reel scientific

Popular scientific pictures of this type are growing in popularity, and more and more are being demanded by better class audiences. They are not only instructive, but hold the attention in a fascinating way and cause a welcome relief when run after a heavy melodrama. "The Life History of Frogs and Toads" is a single reel scientific picture so presented that even a child can see step by step the growth of frogs and toads and the development from the fertilized egg to the frog. The microscopic photography in the early part of this picture is well photographed and illustrates in each case the point desired. We see the spawn in water and the development of tadpoles. The circulation of blood in the gills of the tadpoles is clearly shown as is possible with modern scientific methods. The growth of the front legs and the development of the hind legs was never before as well illustrated as in this picture. The reel is not burdened by too many scientific phrases or facts and can easily be understood and enjoyed by the layman.
Short Reels

"Cyclone Smith's Vows"—Universal
Type of production ..................... 2 reel western
The interest is held throughout this production by the rough and ready daring of the hero. He does a lot of wild riding and makes some thrilling jumps. The story too is good and the photography attractive. A lot of care and time was spent on this production and there are many crude points. However, the interest, which is centered on Cyclone Smith, is held and the entire picture would meet with the popular approval of such pictures. Cyclone Smith jumps off a freight train and saves a girl from an accident. She induces her father to give him a job as a cowboy on the ranch, but the sheriff discovers that Smith has just been pardoned from prison. As Smith is leaving the ranch the sheriff is brought in by wounded by the bandits. Smith vows that he will bring them back dead or alive and if he fails he will not return. He surprises the bad men; two of them get away and the third he discovers to be his brother, who was guilty of the crime for which he was convicted. The brother is killed by one of the crew and Cyclone Smith kills the murderer and wins the girl of the ranch. There are some good mountain locations in this western outdoor melodrama with a thrill or two sandwiched in.

"The Guide"—Fox
Type of production ..................... 2 reel comedy
Clyde Cook has a really original two reel comedy in his latest, "The Guide." It has new laughs all the way through and doesn't resort to anything like the old pie-throwing slapstick to get them. As the title suggests, it supposedly takes place in the Alps where Cook is a mountain guide. His stunts are just as funny as they can be and the best part of it is that most of them are new. He gets a lot out of an encounter with a big bear and the laugh of the two reels comes when after being chased into a cave by the animal, the comedic exits wearing a huge bear coat. Then there's some fine direction and a realistic mountain atmosphere that a good many will take for the real thing. You can surely satisfy them with this.

"An Awful Bull"—Universal
Type of production ..................... 1 reel comedy
The comedy in this picture is very mild and hardly funny.
The idea has been used before in many variations and none of the business presents any new angles in the field of comedy.
A country rube is kicked over the fence and lands in the only mud puddle in the road. The letter-man brings him a diploma from a correspondence school and he goes to town to be a decent employee. He gets a lot out of an encounter with a store detective looks for footsteps on the carpet with a large magnifying glass. He mistakes the house detective for the crook and allows the real thief to get away. The cast of this comic was limited in number and the photography ordinary.
There is nothing new presented in this and very little that is at all funny.

Rocking the Boat—Educational
Type of production ..................... 1 reel comedy
"Rocking the Boat" is a good laughable comedy based on an original idea. It is clean and would not offend any audicence. The fun in this picture is made by transferring sea life and the props of a ship to a house in the city. The young married couple are expecting their uncle, a sea captain, and in order to make him feel at home they build the interior to resemble a ship. The butler and the maid are dressed in uniform and walk in sailor fashion. The house is anchored to the street and the height of the fun is produced when they decide to play a stream of water on captain's bedroom window—but are caught at it. They all get wet. The cast of "Rocking the Boat" includes Earl Rodney, Irene Dalyon, and Ward Caulfield.

"Suits and Suitors"—Universal
Type of production ..................... 2 reel western comedy
A lot of action and a few new touches make this picture real comedy. The photography is good and the events leading up to the climax. Good bare-back riding is always attractive and commands attention; it produces a different effect, however, when the camera is moved along in pace with the rider. This arrests the attention of the observer and makes him question point of view. "Oh, I see," he will conclude it is done by riding the camera in an auto. But the view of the hero riding at you in the chase would not in reality be visible to anyone excepting the villain.

"Suits and Suitors" is a western ranch picture dealing with two mail order suits that look alike and arrive at the same time. The young farmer who wears one and the bad man is discovered in the other. The first man, eight shoes, changed clothes, a dance and a wild chase complete the two reels of this comedy. The elements of humor that enter into the picture are well brought out and the result happy. A particularly splendid long shot of the riders occurs in the first part of this film. How much more effective this is than the close ups taken with the camera riding.

"The Sacred City of the Desert"—Prizma
Type of production ..................... 1 reel scenic Prizma is presenting a very attractive and beautifully colored reel showing an ancient settlement of the Mozabites hidden in the heart of the Sahara desert. Some very interest-ning scenes of the life and habits of the Mozabites are reproduced and the color work is splendid. A title says that prior to the arrival of the Prizma expedition, the settlement had seen no rain in nine years, but the day the Prizma company arrived, it rained and the next day encounter with a celebration in their honor, thinking they had caused the rain.
The spectacle is shown on the screen and the color work in this particular sequence is quite effective. A first rate scenic reel well worth showing.

"Plant Life and Seed Disposal"—Kineto Type of production..................... Educational
This reel is of the scientific series made under the direction of Mr. Smith in London. The picture has some beautiful bits of photography, and would be well appreciated by college students and advanced audiences. We see in this reel the development of the seed heads of flowers, and how the seeds leave their place of birth, take flight and find new soil in which to take root. The camera work in this picture was well planned and ably done. The intermittent exposures taken over a long period of time, and showing the complete flower formation from a bud to the bloom in but a few feet of film, was smoothly and carefully accomplished. The lighting is given a good deal of thought and kept quite constant throughout; this has in the past been a problem in the making of this film. The camera work is excellent and the pictures are clear. The film should have wide circulation among schools, and other educational bodies.

Path Review No. 106
Type of production ..................... 1 reel magazine
This magazine covers a wide range. It opens up with a dance called "The Dance of the Huntress," then goes into the open where we see wild goats dashing across the screen. This is shown with the ultra-speed camera. "Fisherman's Luck" is the next and we get a good idea of big fish tackling in the open surf. The camera then turns upon Yellowstone National Park and all its wonders. This part of the reel is tinted to give the colors of nature.

"Circus Heroes"—Federated Film Exchanges
Type of production ..................... 2 reel comedy
There is more than one laugh in this picture. And sometimes a scream. The flavor of this circus is well packaged inside and outside the tents. Sid Smith is featured in this production, taking the part of one of the Hallroom Boys. The boys sneak into the circus and as soon as they are accomplished the fun begins. They find the lions and try to beat them, they are told. But it is hard to believe a lion when his mouth is open. Sid Smith does some very nervy work in the lion den scenes and gets over a good laugh. You can expect your audience to scream whenever they close up the lid.
A complete circus was hired for this production. It includes elephants, side show animals, "The biggest man in the world," and everything else that fits under a tent. Lots of fun and a good long laugh in this two reel comedy.

Wid's Daily,
New York City.
GENTLEMEN:

May I take this opportunity of expressing to you my extreme gratification at the direct results obtained from one advertisement placed in last Monday's issue of Wid's on the picture "A DAUGHTER OF EVE".

Within half an hour after the paper had appeared on the streets in New York, a buyer for 43% of the territory of the country had us on the telephone and had made an appointment to see the picture.

Coincident with the arrival of the paper in Boston and Philadelphia, we received long distance telephone calls, and as a result of those calls, contracts were sent out in the next mail.

Such results are extremely gratifying, and you may rest assured that in the event we decide to carry any more copy on "THE HOPE DIAMOND MYSTERY" which is selling very well by the way, you will get more than your share.

With best wishes for your continued success,
I am

Most cordially,

And made her name known. In electric lights, newspaper space? And in magazine space? And Lord knows, that else. So in time this helped. Now her pictures are beginning to gross real money. Getting somewhere. Beginning to somebody. Then the report comes she may leave that producer. And go on her own.

TRUSTS

A Few Ideas on An Important Subject

Voiced by Adolph Zukor—And a Few Reflections—"Danger of Irresponsible Talk from Responsible Men"

Adolph Zukor is president of Famous Players-Lasky. Inci-dentially the largest producing and distributing concern in this business. So whatever Mr. Zukor thinks about a possible

'trust' in this business is important. At least it is of unusual interest.

And here is what he thinks:

"There cannot be a trust in the motion picture industry," says Mr. Zukor. "Talk of these things make me laugh. Con-

ider for a moment the various interests, the size of the industry and the number of people involved. And then realize how difficult, if not impossible, this would be to bring about.

"I can say modestly that we are the largest organization in the business. So that any question of such a thing as a 'trust' would naturally interest us. Yet if anyone will consider the past and the early history of Famous Players they will be compelled to realize that this company owes its very existence to the fact that it was organized to oppose a combination—or a 'trust,' the old General Film Company. This was our very start.

"If Famous Players started with this basis isn't it rather difficult to manufacture a sentiment that we would be part of one? And frankly, could there be a 'trust' or combination of consequence unless we were a part of it?"

"It is a simple thing for any group of gentlemen to make speeches and talk about 'trusts' and infer that we are part of it. But it is another matter to attach to these ideas any truth or facts. That is another story. And I don't think it interests these gentlemen very much because they have their own ideas and plans to further.

"Let us go further. Famous Players was organized to produce pictures. Later we went into distribution. And then what happened? A group of exhibitors—some of them very important—decided to combine and present productions made for them. This idea developed until they became not exhibitors, but—in actuality—producers. They made offers of such a tempting nature to our stars and directors that we were compelled in self defense to turn to securing theaters in cities where we were threatened with not having our pictures shown. First in one city, and then in another. And so naturally we became interested in theaters. But we don't want to be exhibitors. We own theaters and are interested in others as a matter of protection first, of profit later.

"The inference is suggested that when 'Wall Street' money is talked of, that in some way Famous Players is involved. It is true that capital—large capital, indeed—is invested by bankers and their clients in this company. But it would be ridiculous to consider that we, in any way, could control or even guide the bankers and financiers of this country such as the inference is intended.

"Large banking interests are becoming more and more acquainted with motion picture industry. Many may recall the interesting figures and ideas presented by John E. Barber, of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, which appeared in the New York Times Annalist. Mr. Barber pointed out how the industry was dependent upon banks and was growing private financing. This is true. But because financiers and banks are interested in a business is that to mean that a 'trust' is to follow? Aren't these ideas rather exaggerations? Aren't they a bit too ridiculous to be given serious consideration?

"These are difficult business times. We need all the energy and effort we can find to keep our industry alive. We have a lot of battles on the outside of the industry which need watching and fighting. Let us keep out of these idle, silly, haphazard discussions; especially at this time.

"For they do harm. Not as intended, not as provoked. They bring no harm to the concerns supposedly interested in any 'trust.' But they bring harm and possibly serious damage to the average exhibitor. I will show you how. All of us know that practically all exhibitors carry mortgages on their theater properties. Even the small exhibitor with one house often has a mortgage on the property. The funds for this mortgage come either from savings banks or from funds in some way under the guidance of State officials. How, I should like to ask, are these men who are responsible for the loans made, going to consider this business as a safe investment when men of prominence, men of importance in this business, indulge as they do in wild, untruthful, meaningless statements? Will they consider their investments safe? Or will they not probably consider either the curtailment of their loans to a serious degree, or possibly withdraw them altogether?

"These are some of the damages possibly resultant from talk of 'trust,' etc., coming in an irresponsible manner from responsible men."

DANNY.

TIDES—It's just dull, dull and routine. Miss Monroe may have won all of the artists whose names are lines in the announcements of the film and a story of the picture itself, but she fails to inspire those who made the pictures. Robert Z. Leonard directed the product and it must be said for him that he has a number of excellent pictures, some of them effectively lighted.

The other a dimple on the left side of Audrey Munson back.  * * *  has consented to bare her 1 before the patrons of the playground and by so doing has provided for the enjoyment of its most daring and at the same one of its most stupid and insane enterprises. There is one mark of genuine dignity in connection with this cinema. This is the fact that Robert Z. Leonard rejected it. He has done splendid thing films in the past. May he resume his work of any sort.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—As a prologue to the new season Mr. Z. Leonard produced "Heedless Moths" settings are as stylish as a modern apartment house. Furniture and setting both in production and presentation of the picture.

“Many of your readers may not be aware that the system prevailing in this country is to trade show a film say in May, and book it for public exhibition 18 months later—in fact, nearly all exhibitors are fully booked for films up to September, 1922; yet a large number of super films are being trade shown and released at an earlier period, which means that the exhibitor has to pay for two programmes, one of which he shows and the other he shelves.

Two More Through

Two new companies are producing units of their own. One of them is a division of a large studio which is known that he has been lost over the independent field rather fully. Goldwyn officials are very reticent about his plans for the near future and to confer with other regarding it. Lloyd is silent regarding his plans. It is understood he plans to take two months’ vacation before mail, which is his first business.

The Goldwyn offices are now non-committal on the dispatch.

German Slump

A Correspondent Says Film Cos. Have a Tale of Woe to Tell

Storge Renwick, in a copyrighted dispatch to the New York Times, says:

The cinema slump in Germany assumed serious proportions, not that the hot weather is keeping people out in the open air. The slump began long before the hot weather came along. Movie managers fear the cinema is going to die very considerably. During the past few weeks six cinemas in the huge industrial suburb of Berlin have definitely gone out of business and two more will close their doors this week. That leaves half the cinemas of that suburb failed to pay their bills.

The other parts of Berlin six others as have given up a long and struggle to succeed and through the provinces the same state of affairs exists. One of the films of the season, 'The Man out a Name,' was produced late in one of the biggest Berlin cines. After a week's run the profits amounted to about 400 marks. The gossers are inclined to lay the blame on taxation to some extent. In Dusseldorf, for instance, the local imposts tax amounts to as much as 30 per cent of the gross receipts.

Can't Co-operate

Frederick Lawrence, chairman of the American People's League, an organization opposed to the enactment of blue laws, has sent a letter to G. A. Rogers in which he states that the league and the picture industry cannot co-operate on the problem of censorship. Lawrence explains that while the league is opposed to the principle of censorship as an infringement of the people's liberty, it will not tie up with an industry which is interested in the problem because of the huge financial outlay involved.

Theater Plan Going Through

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Providence, R. I.—Despite protests from seven members of the clergy, six from Roman Catholic churches and one from a Protestant church, and also a vigorous argument by Mayor Soney, the Board of Aldermen has granted the petition of Abraham Colitz & Co. to erect a theater in Monument Square.
Fear Monopoly

"A 30% ad valorem tariff upon imported raw stock would make absolute the monopoly of a single American manufacturer. While the imposition of the 30% tariff, sought by the Eastman Kodak Company, would provide protection for its foreign raw film, such a tariff is pregnant with a much greater menace to the motion picture industry in the United States. While an absolute embargo is associated with the Eastman Company, it would be adversely affected, the very existence of the motion picture film laboratories is threatened."

"These laboratories receive from the producers of motion pictures the pictures from which they are printed all the positive copies required for showing in the theaters. These copies are printed on raw stock. The laboratory that is experienced with this material, depends absolutely on a steady supply of raw stock of a uniform grade and quality. The depriving the laboratory is to forthwith cancel its operations and put them out of business. There are no substitutes, and the price of the imported raw material is to deprive them of the only available competitive source of supply and to subject them to the whims of the one manufacturer in the United States controlling this supply.

"This is no idle academic contention. For the past activities of the Eastman Kodak Company see page 3636 of Tariff Information, hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, February 12th, 1921, Print No. 33."

The investments in the motion picture laboratories aggregate millions of dollars.

"The motion picture laboratories give employment to thousands from coast to coast of the United States.

"It is common knowledge in the motion picture industry that Mr. J. E. Brulatour, the sole distributor of the Eastman Kodak Company raw film in the United States, has for some time been, though not openly, in the motion picture laboratory business and that he is largely interested in extensive laboratories capable of printing a large percentage of the films required for use in the United States.

"To impose a tariff of 30% would make it entirely possible for Mr. Brulatour or the Eastman Kodak Company not only to maintain the monopoly, but to enjoy all practical purposes a monopoly of the film laboratory business."

Section 5 says:

"Attention has been called to a statement filed with your committee by P. A. Powers of the Powers Film Products Co., also of Rochester, N. Y., in which he pleads for protection against the danger of foreign importation of raw stock. In his communication Mr. Powers has referred to the fact that he is a small manufacturer and that he would probably have to discontinue manufacturing unless the duty is imposed, and he also states that the Agfa Company is selling raw stock in this market at $1.05 per foot, while it costs $1.21 per foot to manufacture. We have positive and definite information that the Agfa Company, which, until the latter part of March, 1921, imported raw stock to the United States since before 1914, has not sold its product at any price. Mr. Powers' statement in this regard can be emphatically and indisputably denied and further proof can be submitted if necessary.

"Whether there is any connection between the Eastman Company and Mr. Powers we are not advised, but your committee should know that Mr. Powers is not the poor little manufacturer which his letter to your committee might lead one to suppose. He is a man of large means, one of the oldest distributors of motion pictures in the United States, many years vice-president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and maker of Powers Films, formerly exclusive distributor for Agfa stock in this country, and his recent venture in raw stock production is but one of his many activities in his various ramifications in the motion picture industry.

"A tariff upon raw stock would create an absolute monopoly in favor of the Eastman Kodak Company and would be against the best interests of the motion picture industry, would place the monopoly in a position to drive out of business all competing motion picture laboratories and would bring no revenue to the Government."

Pettijohn Would Create One of Industry—How Would Bring It About

of the interesting points of the fifth annual meeting of the National Association on Monday was the thought of Charles S. Pettijohn that the industry create a "war chest" to aid the legitimate defense of the first amendment.

Pettijohn, it is pointed out, will be called the "Picture Day," on which price will be raised for the "War Chest." His idea, in his own words, as follows:

We as one day each year to be Motion Picture Day. Let all exhibitors and distributors, acting as one, agree that the price of a charge of all films used by exhibitors in the United States. Let each exhibitor take part in the program by charging a definite amount of the price per cent of his gross receipts. It is to be agreed fair and just.

Under the committee be composed of 10 exhibitors and 10 men in other branches of the industry. Men, actors, directors, who select the 21st man who will be chairman of the board. The day will be "War Chest." Two or three millio dollars will be used for the purposes:

The "G. M." Plant

George Meurice Maintains Jules E. Brulatour Is Very Much Interested in It

Interest in the claims of "lab" men that Jules E. Brulatour, agent for Eastman stock, is definitely interested in three large laboratories in and around New York was revived on Saturday last when George Meurice, the builder and founder of the G. M. laboratory in Long Island City, sailed on the Lafayette for Paris.

Meurice, who has been with this company for several years building and later supervising the work at this laboratory, left that organization about two months ago. Efforts to locate him to obtain a statement with reference to what interest Mr. Brulatour has in this plant proved unavailing until just prior to the sailing of the Lafayette.

When Meurice was located he was very hesitant to discuss either his or Mr. Brulatour's connection with the G. M. plant. But he finally, although reluctantly, said: "Some time in 1919, in Paris, I met Mr. Brulatour. Previously I had known him—about 10 years ago—when he was interested in the Eclair Fort Lee plant. When Mr. Brulatour was in Paris I signed a contract with him to come to America to erect a laboratory which was to be called the G. M. (George Meurice). Subsequently in May, 1919, I met an attorney named Michaels, who had an office in the Eclair building in Paris. Mr. Al Lowe and a Miss Danke. On this occasion my contract was transferred from Mr. Brulatour personally to the G. M. Film Company, of which there was apparently no president, but of which Mr. Lowe was named vice-president and Miss Danke (an employee of Mr. Brulatour) was named treasurer.

"During the entire period of the construction of the plant—about two years in any way, I was the one who was interested with Mr. Brulatour. But upon the completion of the plant, in accordance with the terms of my contract, I was to have the right to return to Europe at my convenience. Mr. Brulatour, however, prevailed.

upon me to remain for an additional three years to supervise the laboratory for which I was to receive a certain salary and 25 per cent of the profits of the business. Later, however, Mr. Brulatour informed me that the laboratory was not operating at a profit, and he added that it would probably take longer than three years to establish it on a profitable basis. This meant that my 25 per cent of the profits was a mere nothing. Subsequently he asked for my resignation. I cannot, however, for a period of a year undertake any laboratory construction plant in America.

When he was asked whether he had any reason to believe that George Eastman was in any way interested in the G. M. plant, Meurice smiled. "I only had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Eastman on two occasions," he said. "The first was several years ago when the National Association held its meeting in Rochester and when, among others, I was introduced to Mr. Eastman, who at that time said that he trusted my plant would be successful. On another occasion he visited the laboratory with Mr. Brulatour, but nothing of any consequence occurred so far as my conversation with him was concerned. I believe, however that several employees of the Eastman company came from Rochester to look over the plant after I left, and while I was in charge another employee from Rochester worked at the plant for a brief while—a man named Tulpan."

Universal for financial assistance

Independent Directors Producers

Many an able picture man has in mind a theme on which to base a truly monumental production but possesses neither the facilities for developing that theme nor for producing it when reduced to continuity form.

To such men Universal will extend, under an equitable plan, its unequaled resources for story development and picture production.

Editors, continuity writers—directors, if need be—equipment and financial assistance may be secured under this plan if your theme be satisfactory. And the resultant production will be made for less money than anywhere else in the United States.

Lack Gratitude

Says Brulatour's Friend of "Lab" Men—Shows How Eastman Lowered Prices

In a brief statement issued relative to the laboratory situation, Jules E. Brulatour declared that he would not discuss the "lab" situation in which his name was being used because of the "silly drivels" included in the charges.

An intimate business associate and friend of Mr. Brulatour, however, said yesterday that he would cheerfully tell some things that were pertinent to the situation. He said that about a year ago when Brulatour made the statement that he was not an officer, director, nor stock holder in any operating laboratory, it was the truth, but he recollected that at the same time Mr. Brulatour did say that if it should become necessary for him to go into the laboratory business, it would be entirely due to the actions of certain laboratory men.

This man added that during the year, when every large manufacturer increased his prices in tremendous proportions, and when the Eastman Company would have been justified in raising prices also because of the increase in the cost of labor and material, in some cases 500% or more, Eastman did not do so, but reduced prices.

"When the war was over and the German raw films began to be imported, did Mr. Eastman say what did the laboratories who are now complaining do," asked this man. "Did they remember what the Eastman Company had done for them? Did they tell the foreign importers that American manufacturers were good enough for them? Did they remember that when the American manufacturers could have squeezed them they did not do so. Did they try to show them what they could not do by refusing to encourage the importation of foreign films? No. What they did was to rush to these importers and send them a lot of foreign-made film. Is it not natural that under the circumstances Mr. Brulatour should take every possible step to protect his firm?"

"As to the statement made by George Maurice that he signed a (Continued on Page 6)

"Redouble Activity"

So Urges Joe Brandt—Says Power of Independents Has Been Asserted

Joe Brandt, president of the C. B. C. Film Sales, who has returned to New York after a sojourn on the coast, brings to independent producers and film corporations a message that now is the time for them to redouble their activities.

According to Brandt, the speech made by Senator James J. Walker emphasizes the work to be done by independents and the place they must hold in the industry.

"This," says Brandt, "is the most important message that the independents have ever received. It is a formal recognition of their power—a power that has grown within the year just passed. Senator Walker expressed his belief that the independents have done things during the past year of which they may well be proud, things they were told again and again could not possibly be done. Who, a few years ago, would have foretold an independent production such as 'Hush,' starring Clara Kimball Young? Who would have thought possible 'The Black Panther's Cub,' which, starring Florence Reed, attracted nation-wide attention by the business it did at the Capitol, and by the first-run bookings that are pouring in from all parts of the country? Who would have dreamed of James Oliver Curwood's 'Isobel,' and having dreamed of it, who would have predicted for it the success it achieved in the independent market?

"It is in short subjects—the one and two-reelers—that the independents have achieved their most conspicuous success. Who would have predicted the big first-run houses open to independent two-reel comedies? To independent novelty subjects? Yet they have been so open and are asking for more.

"The power of the independents is being recognized. Let them use that recognition as a bid for greater power. Don't be misled by anyone's telling you 'it can't be done.' The proof, it has been done, and if you will keep up the good work, it can keep on being done, bigger and better."

New Tarzan Serial

Elmo Lincoln is Star—in 15 Episode

A brand new Tarzan serial, based on one of the Edgar Rice Burroughs' series of Tarzan novels and starring Elmo Lincoln, the original Tarzan, will be distributed via the independent exchange man. The serial will be called "The Adventures of Tarzan."

It is to be produced in 15 chapters by the Great Western Producing Co. for Nuina Pictures Corp., under a special arrangement with the latter named organization, the missing spirits of which are the three Weiss brothers, Adolph, Louis and Max. contract with Mr. Brulatour in Paris in 1919, this is an absolute falsehood. Mr. Maurice came to this country and was negotiating with a manufacturer of raw film to install and take charge of a plant for him. Mr. Maurice was supplied with money to build a plant and he was the president and the only stockholder.

That Mr. Brulatour visited the G-M plant in the company of Mr. Eastman is very probable, as naturally these wonderful machines were very interesting, and his desire to see them was quite reasonable. But it is an absolute falsehood to state that any employee of the Eastman Company worked at the plant. It may have been some one working at the G-M plant had formerly been employed by the Eastman Company.

It was also stated by this man that Mr. Brulatour's chief customers are the producers and the distributors, and that all of them have signed a letter stating that they have no objection to Mr. Brulatour's becoming interested in laboratories.

"It will be noted," commented Brulatour's friend in conclusion, "that in none of the articles which have appeared has the name of the author ever been mentioned. If they tell the truth, why are they afraid to give their names? The answer may be left to the imagination."

Julius Kohner, European Publisher

Says Industry in Czechoslovakia is Growing

Julius Kohner, publisher of the internationale Filmschau of Prague, one of the most prominent of foreign trade journals published in continental Europe, is in New York on a limited stay.

Kohner, in speaking of the industry on the other side, said today: "The industry is growing and publication of trade journals is increasing in importance as a distribution center for South Central Europe, the Balkans and Russia. The gateway through which exported films are distributed is the large film industry mentioned above. There are a number of companies which are well established in their own national film industries, such as the American Film Corp., Universal; the Bingerfuhr Film Corp., the Export Film Corp., the Schellak and part of Parke; the Nordisk Film with its main office in Copenhagen, the disk office of Belvue, the Skandia, A/S; and some German Cines AG., which represents Sascha of Vienna and the German Cines AG., Prima Bandes First National, while Gaumont has its own exchange. Prague is a real center for the export of films, although there are about 650 companies in the United States. There is a strong movement to secure a law to regulate the export of films from the United States, which will be introduced in Congress whenever the government is in a position to secure such a law. This is the reason why Kohner has been in New York to see the American industry. The industry here is looking to Prague as a center for the export of films because Prague is a gateway to the Eastern European market."

Unit Price Rating
It is regarded as of special significance that another organization should openly and frankly recognize the wisdom of the price rating system established by the biggest exhibitor organization connected with the distribution of pictures and the comment was made yesterday that the adoption of this rating system by four or five companies would do more to establish stable prices for film rentals than anything else that might be devised.

When asked yesterday to confirm the virtual adoption of the First National system of rating and establishing individual rentals, Mr. Warren said:

"I have always recognized the fairness to exhibitors of having flat, standard prices for every theater or community in the country. Our organization has worked out such a system and my talks with many of the powerful owners of First National indicate that we approached the rating system from the same angle and the same mathematical base. I have always held that picture selling sooner or later will become a one-priced line of commerce and that the man or organization who became firmly established on this basis would be one of the permanent factors of this business. Other than this comment I only ask you to make clear that the F. B. Warren Corporation is not selling franchises or sub-franchises and will not have any kind of franchise proposition to offer."

One a Minute*—F. P. L. Rialto

El-Douglas MacLean is one of the most attractive light comedies on the screen. He is young, good looking, manly and gay. When you see his picture you will feel that he is the ideal of a man. * * * * This is a story of the screen and the titles are good. MacLean's performance is so good as to make the exception of a few superficial scenes.

STARR—Therapeutic stuff to be seen. The mess is muddled with the help of Douglas MacLean and proves unable to solve the problem of a cure for plague. * * * * * You'll enjoy it. However, MacLean can pass through his next Messer, alive supported by his smile, but a wife capable of such a thing.

He is the best "success" artist of the screen, which refers neither to his part in the best seller "A Woman of Affairs" nor to his success in making of a dangerous situation.

Mr. Laemmle plays a difficult role, that of a man who is supposed to be a spy, in the picture. He does well in the role.

It is a good picture, and the titles are good. MacLean's performance is so good as to make the exception of a few superficial scenes.

Seeking Evidence
J. W. Walker Says He Will Attempt To Prove Zukor Influence With First National Directors (Formerly Associated)

Philadelphia—Senator James J.
Walker, national counsel for the M. P. I., in addressing 200 exhibitors gathered here yesterday from Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, stated he will attempt to procure documentary evidence that five of eight directors of Associated First National are controlled by Adolph Zukor. First National denied this in New York when Walker made the original charge recently.

Walker stated that exhibitors on the coast were between two fires:
Famous Players’ exhibitors activities on the one hand and those of First National on the other. He stated that deals were being made right now and that in most cases notes were drawn up covering the transfer of theater properties and actual money, when cash was involved, was taken from the profits of the business.
He reviewed the Mrs. Dodge case Press Association Inc.
where he said the M. P. T. O. had resorted to advertising campaigns against the people of those towns with the true state of affairs.
He charged that Adolph Zukor had not kept his pledges regarding theater activities of Famous Players and repeated his double-crossing charge against William A.
Morris, national secretary, with censorship in New York State.

The first speaker was Representative Golder of the Pennsylvania State Legislature, who reviewed the course of motion picture legislation in the state. He was followed by Sydney S.
Cohen who, in effect, went over the remarks he made at the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce luncheon to Walker in New York.
The next speaker was A. H. Schwartz of Williamantic, Conn., who told of his experiences with Famous Players.
Walker was the last speaker.

Won’t Accept
N. A. M. P. I. to Ignore Universal’s Resignation—Opposition to “Editorial Committee”

It is understood that the National Association intends ignoring the resignation of Universal as a member of the organization.

The company has resigned because of the creation of the “Editorial Commitee” of 15 which would censor pictures made by the N. A. M. P. I. members. Universal is understood to be unalterably opposed to the plan of self-censorship which the N. A. M. P. I. has decided upon.

As a matter of fact, it is learned that the resignations of Universal as a company, Carl Laemmle and R.
H. Cochrane personally were in the possession of the executive committee several days before the annual meeting was held on June 6.
Despite that, Laemmle was re-elected a director and Cochrane a vice-president.

The effort was made to reach Fredrick H. Elliott, secretary of the N. A. M. P. I., several times yesterday but his office reported him out on such occasions.

Reinhardt To E.F.A.
Immediate Plans Call for Two Pictures—Will Make “The Miracle”—Coming Here
(Special to WID’S DAILY)

Berlin—Max Reinhardt, the internationally famous producer of spectaculars, is definitely affiliated with the European Film Alliance, Adolph Zukor’s Central European producing organism.

Immediate plans for two productions have been made for Reinhardt.
One of the pictures will be “The Miracle,” a film version of which is now in America. The other cannot be learned. In all probability, Reinhardt will go to America later this week to examine the screen technique.

Ernst Lubitsch will also go to America.
It is understood that the option
Ben Blumenthal and Samuel Rappmann held on Reinhardt’s services has been turned over to Zukor for the E. F. A.

The above dispatch is of peculiar significance because of the presence in this country of a film version of “The Miracle.” It is being held by Joseph Menchen, of the Celebrated Authors’ Society. It was shown in this country some years ago, under the auspices of Al. H. Woods.

Mack Sennett Cuts Down Comedies
—Charles Murray Definitively Out—More Dramas
(Special to WID’S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Mack Sennett, the “king-pin” of comedy producers, is making some radical changes in production plans at his plant on Allesandro St. It’s going to be a 50–50 production with him from now on, one-half of his output being a famous comedy brand and the other half strictly dramatic material.

This is meant the letting out of a number of comedy leads who have been identified with the Sennett organization. This means that Charles Murray is out; so are Kalla Pasha and James Finlayson. The old Sennett comedians, including Louise Fazenda, George Wagon, Sid Street,
Teddy the Great Dane and John Henry, Jr., the cute baby, have gradually left the company.

On the Sennett lot are now Noah
Beery, Mabel Normand, Ben Deely, Lowell Sherman, Jack Mulhall and Jacqueline Logan. They will appear in Sennett’s dramatic productions.

For comedy series Ben Turpin will be starred and Billy Bevan featured,
In the Courts

Judge Ford and a jury have rendered a verdict in favor of B. P. Schulberg on the motion which Henry, president of United Artists, had commenced against him in the Supreme Court over a promissory note. Schulberg charged the note was given Abrams "solely for accommodation purposes to enable Abrams to raise $5,000 which the latter was incompetent to perform. The court held that Abrams' debt." Abrams intends appealing through O'Brien, Malnevics and Driscoll.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Los Angeles—When "Wet Gold" played a pre-release showing at the California, two men wearing diving suits and guarding a chest filled with money were found being bound with heavy chains, were sent through the streets in an auto-truck for four days preceding the first showing. They appeared on all the principal business thoroughfares at the hour when traffic was heaviest and were the center of interest every place. Hanging from three sides of the truck were signs reading: "Diving for 'Wet Gold' at California Theatre all week.

In addition to the usual displays, the theater took 40-inch advertisements in the Saturday and Sunday issues of the newspapers and the Express ran a buried word contest in its want advertisement columns, offering separate prizes for each sentence. "California Theatre presents latest sub-sea picture 'Wet Gold' for entire week May 22." Through the contest ran for only two days, more than 1,000 answers were received, 47 of which were correct. The prizes offered by the Express in connection with this contest were two tickets each to "Wet Gold" to the first 25 persons sending in correct readings of the buried sentence.

Cleburne, Texas—A. F. Schare, manager of the Yule, devised an effective lobby display for "Prisoners of Love," using the six-sheet for a cut-out and the head of Miss Compton from the broadside prepared by Goldwyn.

The figure of the star, the couch on which she was seated, the mirror frame shown in the background were cut out, mounted on beaverboard and set in the center of the lobby, near the sidewalk. Below it were two sets of displays of stills. Across the top of the lobby entrance was stretched a strip of beaverboard painted to represent stone, giving the suggestion of a prison. On either end of this strip, in a barred space cut out to represent prison windows, was pasted the head of Miss Compton from the broadside.

Scranton, Pa.—J. P. McCarthy, manager of Poli's, confined his street explanation for "Don't Neglect Your Wife," to one stunt. An up-to-date street car with motorman and conductor was charmed and two large banners that almost covered the sides of the car were painted and stretched with ropes on the car. The title of the picture was painted in three-foot type on the name of the theater. The car was sent through the business sections of the city on the heaviest traffic. McCarthy made a simple lobby display from stills, posters and enlargements and did his paper selling and newspaper advertising.
Keeping “Tabs”
(Continued from Page 1) position to take steps accordingly. Need for this character of information is greater than ever before.” Several recommendations were made by Elliott. One was that a permanent committee be created to be known as the Committee of Public Relations to foster closer and more harmonious co-operation between the industry and the many social, civic and educational women’s organizations in the various states.

Active negotiations are under way to secure the shipment of film by parcel post to foreign countries, and with Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative, negotiations are under way towards securing an increase of parcel post weight limit to 100 lbs. in all zones and a maximum of $50 liability. It was at Connolly’s suggestion that this matter was taken up with the postal authorities in Washington.

Chairman Jules E. Brunotour of the Fire Prevention Regulations and Insurance Committee reported that 25 one and two story film buildings have been completed and occupied in various cities and that many others were under construction, thus greatly insuring the safety of exchange employees and lowering overhead expenses. He said that the inspection of exchanges throughout the country indicates a great general improvement in the housing of exchanges and the installation of additional fire equipments.

R.C. Field Changes
Recent changes in the personnel of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corp. put into effect by Charles B. Rogers are as follows:

Joseph Klein has been appointed manager of the New York exchange. Harry Goldberg has been appointed branch manager at Pittsburgh, succeeding G. E. Moore. Jerome Saf-ron, formerly manager of the New York exchange, has been assigned as manager of the St. Louis office, where he succeeds J. Desberger.

Wants Standard Sized Label
T. G. Patten, postmaster for New York, is circulating local exchanges and urging upon them the adoption of a uniform label, 6 by 3½ inches in size, with the address clearly written. This, and the use of a new label with every shipment, is expected to facilitate the delivery of parcel post shipments.

rial. It is understood he is involved in some sort of an international dis-

Price Slash on Coast
Southern California Towns Feel Business Slump—West Coast Theaters Cutting Prices (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—Word has been received from many of the interior towns of Southern California that on account of the extreme lack of business, exhibitors have slashed admission prices considerably.

In Bakersfield, box office prices have been reduced to those charged two years ago. The West Coast Theaters, Inc., operate three theaters there. Prices likewise have been cut to a great extent in other large cities.

At Long Beach, but a few miles from Los Angeles, prices at all theaters have been greatly reduced. Several houses here are also under the control of the West Coast Theaters organization. In speaking with officials of Gore Bros., Ramish and Sol Lesser, regarding the decline of business, they admitted it to be true and that in many of their theaters box office prices have been reduced to meet the present conditions. The company, despite these facts, is steadily increasing its already big chain of theaters. A new Glendale house has been added which brings the total of their holdings considerably over 40.

Combination Structures Possible (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Philadelphia — The Gloss bill, recently enacted, makes it legal for any part of a theater building bordering on a main street, which is not used for theater purposes, to be occupied by offices, stores or rooms used for similar purposes. Heretofore the law did not permit such use of portions of properties, except under certain restrictions.

Theater buildings hereafter can be made to produce revenue in the forms of rentals, far in excess of what they now produce when the buildings are restricted to theater purposes only.

Gordon Plans Large House (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Boston—Nathan H. Gordon plans a $3,000,000 theater on the present site of the Old South theater in Washington St. He purchased the house last winter. The theater will be known as the Province.

To Rebuild Boston Elliot (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Boston—Jacob Lonrie and Sam Pinansky, who own the Park, Modern and Beacon theaters, plan to rebuild the Elliot, at Roxbury Crossing.

Buys Cairo Theaters (Special to WID'S DAILY)

Cairo, Ill.—J. W. Rodgers of Popular Bluff, Mo., has purchased the Gem theater outright and has secured long-term leases on the Kimmel and the Cairo Opera House.

The "Disraeli" company, shooting exteriors at Glen Cove, L. I., secured permission to take scenes there through the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau, 4 W., 40th St. The bureau acts for the Committee for the Relief of Devastated France.

Linder Makes A Good Deal Out of Old and Some New Tricks

Max Linder in "BE MY WIFE"

DIRECTOR ...................... Max Linder
AUTHOR ...................... Max Linder
SCENARIO BY ................. Max Linder
CAMERAMAN .................. Charles Van Enger
AS A WHOLE ................. Spends quite a little time getting started but runs into laughs that are near-riots

STORY .................. Episodic in character and reaches several near-climax; contains few new situations

DIRECTION ................. Good for the most part; sometimes doesn't use good judgment

PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS ..................... All right
CAMERA WORK ................. Average
STAR ......................... Contributes a lot of fun by mere facial expression; handles some old tricks in a new fashion

SUPPORT ...................... Suitable
EXTERIORS .................... Not many
INTERIORS ..................... Satisfactory
DETAIL ......................... Seems correct

CHARACTER OF STORY .... The troubles of a man trying to win a girl over the objections of an old maid aunt

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,000 feet

The latest five reel comedy starring and made by Max Linder runs the French comedian's most recent predecessor, "Seven Years Bad Luck" a close second in the number of laughs it offers. Distribution plans in connection with "Be My Wife" have not yet been announced.

Linder is again author, director and star of the piece, and while "Be My Wife" isn't as original as "Seven Years Bad Luck," it has enough laughs to satisfy anyone and even if some of the stunts are not new, Linder does them in a new way, and they amuse just the same. This is especially true of one trick in particular which has been used time and again and always sends any audience into an uproar. That is the mouse running up the comedian's leg while he is going through the marriage ceremony. Linder handles this stunt about the best yet, and adds a new one when after removing the mother mouse he still feels "creepy" and upon further examination discloses a tribe of young mice.

"Be My Wife" would have proven a much better comedy if so much time hadn't been wasted in getting started. The opening reel has hardly a laugh, and the spectator can't even get a line on what it is all about other than that it is taking place in a dress-making establishment which is a camouflage for a café. The first comedy business comes with the entrance of the police in the dress shop. The mere pushing of a button changes the rear café suite into a fitting room. This is a good bit, but they keep it up so long that it loses some of its value.

Another bit in which the comedian hides in a steam closet isn't as funny as it should be, also because there is too much of it. About the best and the most original piece is the star's imaginary fight with a burglar, while his fiancée and her aunt stand petrified in the outside room. Linder wrecks the room and himself in an effort to fight off the would-be intruder, and then presents himself to the girl and her aunt as a hero. At the wedding reception, the aunt is also a victim of a stray mouse, and when she gets out in the center of the floor and acts hysterical the guests stand by amused at her evident knowledge of the "shimmy." Of course, at the end of the fifth reel, Max wins the aunt's consent to marry her niece.

Enough Comedy To Please The Majority

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Linder's latest can't be considered a knock-out comedy feature because it isn't consistently uproarious and also because much of the comedy business is not new, even though most of it will get laughs because it is well done. The star works hard and is a successful entertainer because he has a distinct style and lends considerable humor to his acting because of his unusual facial expressions. The fact that the majority of the laughs come late in the picture won't have a serious effect.

Exhibitors catering to a comedy-loving audience will likely satisfy them with "Be My Wife." Stills of some of the situations together with catchlines should attract attention. If you played "Seven Years Bad Luck," be sure to recall it and tell them Max Linder is the star and producer of "Be My Wife."
This advertisement is written for a few fools and cowards in the motion picture business—and in other businesses—who are still talking depression when conditions all around them in their own and other businesses directly contradict and refute their pessimism. 1921 is a great year for fighters—and a bad year for fools.

120,000 residences—individual homes, not tenements—are being constructed this summer in the 100 largest American cities. That means muscular labor earning wages.

2,700 new motion picture theatres are now under construction in the United States. And that means labor earning wages.

Motor demand by America’s millions has put every important and reliable automobile company back at work on virtually a full-time basis. That means skilled artisans earning high wages.

"The American Contractor," a builders’ trade journal, reports that the official building permits filed for the month of April, 1921, for 202 cities totalled 54,162 separate pieces of construction with a valuation of 152 million dollars. American dollars are now out of hiding and have gone back to work.

America’s 1921 crop yields, according to government forecasts, will be tremendous. That also means work and wages.

The nations of the world are transferring gold in unbelievable volume to the United States. The Federal Reserve re-discount rate will be lowered again before the summer is over.

Every one of these signs and a thousand others mean: Wages, Work, Employment. Employment means profits and prosperity.

Ben Ames Williams Story with Mystery Finish

"THE FIGHTING LOVER"

DIRECTOR .................. Fred Leroy Granville
AUTHOR ....................... Ben Ames Williams
SCENARIO BY ................ Harvey Gates
CAMERAMAN ................... Leland Lancaster

AS A WHOLE...... Mildly interesting feature that would have been better if atmosphere of mystery wasn't so confusing

STORY......By a well known author and should have made a better picture; rather original in the main

DIRECTION......Confuses in an effort to build suspense and doesn't develop a clear conclusion

PHOTOGRAPHY......Usually good; night scenes too dark

LIGHTINGS .................. All right
CAMERA WORK ................. Average
STAR......Gives an adequate performance but role doesn't call for great prominence

SUPPORT......A suitable company with all more or less minor parts that don't require much display of ability

EXTERIORS......Mostly acceptable, but one strikingly artificial

INTERIORS ................. Look like the real thing

DETAIL ......................... Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY......Marriage wager develops into a murder mystery, with crooks and the disappearance of a famous diamond

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,040 feet

Ben Ames Williams is credited with many popular and successful stories and it may be that his, "The Fighting Lover," made interesting reading. But the screen version loses considerably because of fairly poor direction. A satisfactory premise is established and you are prepared to witness a theme that promises to be original until it takes on a mysterious aspect, crooks are introduced, and the famous Terrapin diamond disappears. And from there on the spectator is apt to get lost in the maze of in-and-out business and general atmosphere of suspense which the director aims to create by confusion.

And even at that you would not mind it so much if only he explained the incidents to your satisfaction in the conclusion. Perhaps the title-writer shares the blame in this connection, but certainly they don't tell you a lot that you'd like to know about things that happen previous to the clearing up of the murder and crook sequences. A title or two inserted in the last reel in the form of explanation would help considerably.

The title doesn't seem particularly pertinent even though there is some fighting, some of which includes the hero, who isn't shown so much as a lover, and most of the fight scenes are done in such darkness that the audience can hardly discern just who is participating. Frank Mayo is given stellar prominence but the parts in the main are pretty much proportionate. Jacqueline Logan is the leading lady. In the cast are Elinor Hancock, Gertrude Olmsted, Jackson Read, Colin Kenny, Jean Callahan and others.

Andy Forsdale enlists the aid of his aunt in carrying out a wager which causes his friend Ned to fall in love within a stipulated time. Aunt Lydia engages the services of three girls to lure Ned, one of whom, Helen Leigh, Andy strikes out of the race, because he likes her himself, and substitutes his cousin Jean, who poses as a maid in the household. While the Aunt is entertaining the guests, Vic, the stakeholder, is found murdered in the home. Suspicion points toward Helen, and she is believed to know something about the tragedy. It develops that crooks seeking the Aunt's famous diamond, committed the murder, and that Helen is the granddaughter of Barclay, the butcher. Andy, of course, wins Helen for himself and also wins the wager when Ned falls for Jean.

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Folks that aren't liable to find serious fault because things aren't given full explanation will be satisfied with "The Fighting Lover" and on the whole you will satisfy a good majority of your patrons with a brief showing of Frank Mayo's latest feature. If your patrons are keen for mystery stories, play up that angle and use the author's name, recalling any previous pictures bearing his name which you may have played, among them "Always Audacious" with Wallace Reid and "Godless Men," a Goldwyn picture.

Catchlines based on the wager idea might prove attractive. Say: "He was willing to wager $5,000 that his friend would forget the girl who jilted him and 'fall' for another. Who wins? See 'The Fighting Lover,' 'Universal's latest starring vehicle for Frank Mayo." If Mayo is well known it might be just as well to use his name instead of the title because it doesn't mean a whole lot.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Motherless little girl brings up baby sister and finds happy home on farm
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 5,000 feet

Outside of the Fox specials it is quite likely that there is more demand for the Shirley Mason pictures than some of the others in the regular routine release. Her's are consistently good, and she can usually be relied upon to furnish a clean, wholesome piece that is generally first rate entertainment. And "The Mother Heart" is no exception. It isn't an unusual story and hasn't been given an unusual production. Just plain common sense both in handling of the story, and the cast and the performance of the star make it a delightful little picture that should please everyone who has a heart at all.

The story is a "little mother" theme, in which a little girl plays mother to her baby sister. Director Mitchell has secured a fine heart interest by playing up the devotion of the little girl for the baby. Another clever touch is the way in which the baby melts the heart of the stern old grouch, to such an extent that he plays with it to keep it from crying. This bit is very well managed and contains fine appeal.

Good judgment is shown in the manner in which they have kept minor details in the background. For instance, another sister, adopted by a rich woman, has a near-romance with a fellow who wants to marry her, believing she will come in for the rich woman's money. This sequence isn't very necessary, but it serves to send the girl back to her little mother sister, a prodigal. Miss Mason is delightful as usual, and others who give her capable assistance in supporting roles are Raymond McKee, Edwin Booth Tilton, Cecil Van Anker, William Buckley, Peggy Eleanor, and Mrs. Raymond Hatton.

May Howard's father is sent to jail because he steals food for his starving family. Then his wife dies, and May, her sister, Ella, and the baby are sent to an institution. Ella is adopted by a rich woman, and May is sent to a farm owned by George Roberts, proprietor of the store from which May's father stole groceries. Clifford Hamilton, the manager of the store, and the direct cause of the father's prosecution, seeks to marry Ella, thinking she will inherit her foster mother's wealth. In the meantime May and the baby sister work their way into the heart of Mr. Roberts and when he learns that it was May's father who was sent to prison, a pardon is secured. Ella, almost tricked into marriage with Hamilton, who has stolen the firm's funds, also goes to the farm and there is a happy reunion.

You Can Be Assured of Satisfying Them with a Clean One Like This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The brief synopsis above is a most meagre outline of this pretty and simple little story that offers first rate, clean and wholesome entertainment that is especially fitted for family trade. There isn't a thing in it that is objectionable. You can promise a fine heart interest, and by playing up the "little mother" theme, telling them how the little sister plays mother to the baby, and above all promising them a lot of pleasure looking at the scenes played by Shirley and the little baby. They'll love this youngster.

Use the star's name extensively and if you have played her recent pictures such as "Flame of Youth," "Wing Toy" and "The Lamplighter," they'll be just as well, if not better, pleased with "The Mother Heart." Catchlines in your program for previous announcements and stills in the lobby will advertise it well. Say: "See Shirley Mason in a Cinderella on the farm story. You cannot help but like her in this."

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Sister of betrayed lover through this

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 4,685 feet

Whoever picks material for Hope Hampton might well consider that she will show to much better advantage than when attempting to portray this heavy kind of characterization. In all events, whether they give her light stuff in the future or not, they certainly handed her a tough one in "Love's Penalty." It is heavy, gruesome at times, and without particular appeal, excepting that the photography and general production lift it considerably over the usual class of the average program release.

Despite the difficult characterisation given her to portray, Miss Hampton does better work than in her two previous productions. In the hands of a capable director she might do considerably better. But the director of "Love's Penalty" liked to have his people
"act," and they do to the detriment of the production.

The chief difficulty, however, is the story. Hope Hampton has the part of the sister of the girl who is betrayed by her employer and subsequently kills hersself. Hope plans revenge, and secures a position as his secretary. He is the owner of a steamship line and one of his vessels is scheduled to break the transatlantic record. The big punch scene comes when Hope, planning her revenge, tells him that she is going to make his name a byword, and a newspaper extra appears telling of the sinking of his ship, carrying with it thousands of women and children and his own wife and child. The relative of one of the afflicted families shoots the ship owner, and is later apprehended.

In the end Hope meets her former fiance who left her because he felt she was in love with the ship-owner, and the clutch comes with the background of a Christmas festival.

Don't Make a Fuss Over This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The production value and the splendid photography lift this considerably over the usual average program release. But this is not big league and should not be figured from this basis. Just what will be your talking point will be up to you and you had better see the production first.

There is no particular thrill, the director having carefully avoided the shipwreck, which might have given box office value to this. Of course Miss Hampton wears beautiful gowns and all that sort of thing, but that is not really sufficient. You cannot talk about the story because the theme is old and too heavy and unpleasant to be attractive.

If you have this coming, slide it in gently and don't make a fuss about it. It may go over nicely. That is, you may not have any particular kicks, but you are not going to hear a terrible lot of pleasing exclamations later.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Girl who must marry for money poses as maid and really falls in love with the man she must marry
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 5,923 feet

Director Chet Withey was given a big order when they told him to make a feature picture from the story "Perkins" by Douglas Murray, because of the lack of incident sufficient for a six reel picture. In view of the handicap, "Lessons in Love," through the efforts of Grant Carpenter who wrote the continuity, and director Withey, turns out to be fairly amusing after all. And the title-writer has done his share by his contribution of well written captions.

"Lessons in Love" isn't a great deal different from the previous pictures made by Miss Talmadge. Here again she brings her victim to her feet by having him "treat her rough" and of course it brings the desired results. Above all, your imagination is not put to any test and you can sit back and be amused if you will without doing much thinking. The six reels come, perhaps please you for the moment, but beyond that leave little impression.

Those who had to worry about the success of the offering had to do considerable thinking to tide them over the rough places, and even careful direction and some effective padding fails to keep the piece from losing interest occasionally and threatening to die more than once. The comedy isn't smooth running. It is of the "now you see it, now you don't" variety.

The star repeats her previous performances, wears some pretty new costumes and is given a goody share of close ups to show how she can roll her eyes and play the flirt. Kenneth Harlan is a cowboy hero who nearly forgets to act like a cowboy when he goes to Florida. Flora Finch might have been used to better advantage for the comedy business. James Harrison, George Fawcett and Frank Webster are in the cast.

Leila Calthorpe's guardian tells her she will lose her his fortune if she will marry his nephew. Leila needs the money, but refuses to marry the man, John Warren, who turned down the proposition before he even saw Leila. Warren, a cowboy, comes east, however, and Leila poses as a maid in her own home. Warren falls in love with the "maid" and is greatly relieved when he finds that she is Miss Calthorpe and not the homely aunt Agatha whom Leila has had pose as herself. Of course Leila marries Warren.

Will Satisfy "Fans" And Those Who Don't Like Their Brains Taxed

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Admirers of the star and folks who like pictures suitable to hot weather—pictures that don't require much thought—will accept "Lessons in Love" as a satisfactory piece. Those more critical may expect to get something a little more substantial from the bob-haired comedienne, but on the whole her appearance together with a fairly proportionate share of amusement, much of it furnished by the titles, will likely please the majority.

The press sheet gives the running time as seventy-two minutes but the Strand showing only runs about an hour, so probably it has been cut some more. Stills of the star in her maid regalia may attract them, First National will provide you with paper containing some exploitation suggestions which can be used to advantage. You might talk about the fire in the last reel but it isn't real enough to promise them a thrill.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... American in London steals an English bride of noble birth and wins after a hot pursuit

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 4,713 feet

The interest in this production is divided between the story and the foreign locations. The London street scenes are not inserted in this picture by careful cutting, but the entire production was photographed abroad. An American chase with Yankee methods proceeds through and about the easy going traffic of London, and runs into one or two of the suburbs of that city. The picture makes a good amusing combination of travel and comedy and offers nothing that would offend any audience. While the story drags in many points to such an extent that would be fatal to an ordinary comedy, the settings take over the interest and hold the attention. The general effect is brisk and swift moving.

A good deal of attention has been paid to the direction and the photography of this picture. Many of the locations are beautifully reproduced and composed in a faithful manner. A glimpse of English country life about the upper Thames helps to vary, and gives an added flavor to the production. As a whole it offers an attractive and welcome novelty—it leaves the hard and beaten path and attempts to break away from that which is ordinary.

Bryant Washburn plays the part of the American in London, Joan Morgan make a satisfactory English girl. Some of the other types, however, were quite poorly chosen. The Duchess, for instance, is more like the “Alice in Wonderland” Duchess than the real thing. And the Viscount is also a poor cartoon.

The titles are quite in keeping with the spirit of the entire production—which is a rare thing for titles. This adds to the general interest, for they take a personal angle, and gain the confidence of the audience. For example, “Now,” says a flash, “We would expect our hero to attempt to see his bride. This he does.”

The story is very simple. Rex Rowland in London sees Lady Emily in a Rolls Royce stopped by the traffic “bobby” at Piccadilly Circus. He follows and discovers her residence. The next day he gets the chance to help the girl who is being forced into marriage by her aunt, the Duchess. A wild chase follows and is kept up for a great part of the picture. The runaways hide at a garden party, and again pretend they are guests at a country estate until the real guests arrive. They are married and at last when you think them safe the Duchess appears and takes the girl home. She escapes, however, and joins her husband on the steamer bound for America.

A Good Picture That Will Please Usually

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you are looking for a novelty that is clean and at the same time amusing, this feature is sure to fill the bill. It will especially be enjoyed by better class audiences.

Use catch lines that suggest the setting as, “See how a Yankee snatches a bride in London,” or, “Real England and a real American on the Road to London.” Advertise the fact that the picture was made in England with an American company.

You can safely promise your patrons a light, clean, entertaining picture that will hold their attention and satisfy till the last foot. It will please your people because it is different.

If your audience is fond of foreign travel pictures be sure to take advantage of this fact in advertising this picture. The comedy shoots past famous landmarks of history and this should attract.

CHARACTER OF STORY.........Reformed crook becomes millionaire; seeks excitement in Paris and gets it

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 4,458 feet

Picture patrons will soon begin to wonder that Thomas Meighan doesn't find it difficult to "keep straight" since they keep picking crook roles for his Paramount features. Again in "White and Unmarried" Meighan visits the homes of the rich “in their absence,” but the picture isn't long under way when he inherits a million and can afford to be respectable, and as a title puts it “gives up second-story work and moves in on the ground floor.” The sub-titles, incidentally, throughout the picture are written in a sort of comedy vein that goes well.

The story, which has been adapted from John D. Swain's “Billy Kane—White and Unmarried” will, in all probability, please a good majority, particularly admirers of the star, and then a good number who like Parisian, Apache atmosphere. Director Forman has given the story a rather artistic production. His settings depicting "The Cave of the Blue Devils," a typical dive, and others representing French resorts, are in good taste and handled to attract attention from a certain lack of real melodrama which the spectator will surely be expecting.

There's only one fight, and even though the star puts all the villainous people out of the way (he evidently does, because they don't reappear) by shooting, it shouldn't be objectionable, because the set is kept pretty dark, and about all you see is flashes until it's all over and then they don't show the dead victims. A good point.

Meighan does good work, but he hasn't the opportunities afforded by "The City of Silent Men" to show how he can act. A capable supporting company includes the names mentioned above.

Billy Kane's uncle dies and leaves him a million. Billy decides to go "straight" and departs for Paris, taking with him as a remembrance of his last "job" Dorothea Welton's ring which he had taken from the Welton home. Aboard ship he meets Dorothea and continues the acquaintance in Paris. The two go slumming. In a café Dorothea meets one who calls himself Count Marechal. However, Billy is quick to notice his habits and know he is a crook. Mrs. Welton's insists on a Count for a son-in-law, and so the two are married. Billy falls in love with a little dancer who is kidnapped by an Apache suitor who is a member of the "Count's" band. In the rescue Billy kills the Count who has since deserted Dorothea and rescues his sweetheart.

Will Give Average Satisfaction

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is the third crook role Meighan has had lately, "Frontier of the Stars," "The City of Silent Men" and this, so if the two previous pictures have satisfied your patrons, you can tell them the star will soon appear at your theater in "White and Unmarried," in which he again plays a crook. This time mention the Apache atmosphere and tell them it takes place in Paris. That should give them a new interest.

Those who don't like melodrama laid on too thick will get what they like in "White and Unmarried." There isn't much excitement in it. Stills showing the cafe sets may get them interested if displayed in the lobby. You might mention the author's name if you think well of it. Further catchlines and advertising hints may be secured from the press sheet.

CHARACTER OF STORY ............... District Attorney's fiancée accused of murder which it is later proved she did not commit
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 4,256 feet

Frank Lloyd has made an interesting picture of Ralph E. Dyar's stage play. The mystery element is well founded and an especially noteworthy feature of the production is that everything is satisfactorily explained when the mystery is cleared away. Often times, in an effort to create suspense and keep the spectator in ignorance as to a possible clue, the director injects bits to lead you off the track, and while this method succeeds in keeping you guessing, it is also liable to confuse and usually it happens that many of the incidents are never explained.

In "A Voice in the Dark" everything is fully expounded in the flashbacks which are part of the witnesses' testimonies. In adapting the play to the screen it was necessary to make certain radical changes in it, and it has been very well managed. Since it was to be a picture there could be no voice in the dark, so the place of action is made a sanatorium and the witnesses a deaf woman and a blind man, who tell what they see and hear respectively, thereby creating the same effect as was obtained in the stage version by the voice heard in the dark.

There is nothing at all objectionable in the murder sequence and nothing that could be construed as unpleasant. In fact the feature is so short and told in such straightforward fashion that it seems even shorter than the approximately four reels it consumes. Ramsey Wallace and Irene Rich play what are perhaps the principal parts but probably the best performances are contributed by Alec Francis, as the blind man, and Gertrude Norman, as the deaf woman. Others in the cast are Alan Hale, Ora Carew, William Scott, Richard Tucker and Alice Hollister.

Adele Warren becomes engaged to Dr. Sainsbury, owner of a private sanatorium. Blanche, an elder sister, objects to the match because she had previously had an unpleasant experience with the Doctor. The physician is murdered and Blanche Warren accused. Circumstantial evidence points in her direction although her fiancé, District Attorney Day, tries to shield her. Joseph Crampton, a blind patient at the sanatorium, offers evidence in the form of a conversation which he overheard. He is brought to the private hearing where he identifies the voices of the deaf woman's nurse and Chester Thomas, her brother, and also the jilted lover of Adele, as the ones he heard.

As Good A Mystery Story As They Will Want

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This should be well received by practically everyone, mystery lovers in particular. If you bill it as a murder mystery it would be well to assure your audience that there is nothing gruesome nor objectionable in the sequence dealing with the actual murder. It would be well to make certain to assure them on this point in view of the fact that some may not be inclined to come in if they expect to see any hair-raising murder sequences.

Tell them it is an adaptation of the stage play and there are any number of ways of exploiting the feature if you care to go to a little trouble. Paper provided by Goldwyn will give you many suggestions and a poster bearing the pictures of the characters placed in the form of a question mark with the query: "Who killed Dr. Sainsbury?" should attract attention. You might also tell the story down to the point where the heroine is accused and then invite them to come in and see the conclusion for themselves.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,711 feet

"Western Hearts" goes a long way toward proving that you don’t always have to spend a lot of money to make a good picture. This western offering probably cost very little to make, but it averages among the best of its kind on the market. The romance is of the conventional sort with a jealous girl the cause of all the trouble. It isn’t new, but it is interestingly told, well directed, and played by a capable cast, and best of all, has a fine western atmosphere, with some splendid work contributed by the cameraman. The settings are all fine, and the Diamond Bar is all that a ranch should be.

There is a cattle rustling episode that offers a satisfactory bit of action and toward the last reel director Cliff Smith brings things to an exciting conclusion, in the capture of the rustlers and the final happy ending for the hero and heroine. Smith knows a good deal about the making of westerns, having made many of them.

Art Staton is a genuine cowboy actor who can ride as well as some of his competitors billed as stars and he can act too. He gives a first rate performance in "Western Hearts" and has a pleasing personality.

The greater part of the earlier reels is given over to planting the love story and gradually developing it into some good action that results from the plotting of the jealous girl and the foreman of the ranch who steals the owner’s cattle. The final reel particularly contains some fine riding and a thrilling capture or two.

Edith Caldwell, a college girl, is spending a vacation on the Diamond Bar ranch. Grace Adams, a niece of the ranch owner, is jealous of the attentions to Edith shown by Jack Manning, the foreman, and when Edith returns to school, promising to come back and marry Jack, Grace leaves the ranch, telling her uncle she has gone away with and married Manning, who also leaves the ranch because he has not heard from Edith, the letters being intercepted by Grace. Complications follow in which Marcelle, the man Grace has really married, steals Diamond Bar cattle. Manning is sent for to round-up the thieves and so discovers Grace’s perfidy, and there is a reconciliation when Edith returns from school.

"WESTERN HEARTS"
Associated Photoplays, Inc.—State Rights

It isn't often that you have a western attraction as good as this offered to you and one that doesn't claim to be at all pretentious but on the whole is a splendid picture, and you may be sure to satisfy your patrons with it. It should please them all, because it is neither a wild west nor a weak love story camouflaged with atmosphere. Even though "Western Hearts" has a theme that's a trifle conventional, it has been directed in a fashion that makes it interesting and holds the attention throughout.

Talk about the cowboy player, telling them they are acquainted with the cowboy stars but here is one that has yet to be discovered. Art Staton's name may not mean much to them, but after they've seen him in "Western Hearts" they'll look for him in the future. Cliff Smith's name may be familiar. Catchlines with promises will be in order and stills in the lobby should be used.

NOTICE

The biggest houses in the country will do well to act promptly in viewing those Century Comedies featuring BROWNIE, the Century Wonder-dog, acclaimed by every critic as the cleverest performing animal ever seen in pictures. So instantaneous and unanimous has been the chorus of praise from every part of the United States that Century Comedies have decided to increase the number of Two-reel comedies featuring BROWNIE from Thirteen to Eighteen. Ask your Universal Exchanges to screen for you immediately "PALS"—"PLAYMATES"—and "SOCIETY DOGS." Concerning this last, MOVING PICTURE WORLD says: "Altho it is rather a broad statement it is made without reserve. 'SOCIETY DOGS' is one of the finest comedies of the year. There is almost a laugh a foot. An exhibitor showing this picture will be performing a service to his patrons." While WID'S adds: "Get this if you want your people to laugh. New stuff and a lot doing make this a fine comedy. You will want more pictures of this dog after you have seen this one."

Some Short Reels

“The Runaway Train”—Educational
Type of production ............................. 1 reel Scenario novelty
This is a picture with a real thrill. It takes your breath away. It is everything that it is cracked up to be. True enough it is a stunt picture, but after playing for one week at the Capitol Theatre in Brooklyn, it proved its merit and was booked for another week in the same house. At the original presentation, this novelty appeared under the title—“Lyman H. Howe's Famous Ride on a Runaway Train.”

The thrill in this is obtained by giving the effect speed acceleration. The photography is so arranged that the observer feels himself placed on the front end of this train that has broken loose on a curve. The sensation of rocking and plunging is transmitted by clever camera work. Your people will hold their seats when they see the curves approach, and they will scream when they think the train is leaving the tracks.

A sufficient amount of clever animation adds an introduction and conclusion. A few traps and a whistle will add greatly to the realism in presenting this to your people. This picture is well deserving of any success it may have, and is a box office success. Besides this the pictures are well carried out in all its details. The camera work is novel and excellent. Your people will not be disappointed when you give them the thrill of riding on a runaway train. True enough it will startle them and take their breath away, but they will like the sensation and come again for another ride.

Nothing like it has ever happened on the screen before.

“The Yellow Arm”—Pathé
Type of production ............................. Serial
There is a grip in “The Yellow Arm.” This production marks the last word in melo-dramatic mystery serials. While its form and content does not differ materially from the average thriller yet the production as a whole is above the average serial. The story, direction, photography and acting are all better than is usually presented in a serial. Mystery and romance are both created in the very first reel and your audience will be griped by this tale of two continents. The terror of the yellow arm comes from China across the sea and visits the home of Jole Bain. In a following reel it is explained that a long time ago when Jole Bain’s father was a sea captain he made a trip into the interior of China where he captured for a bride a native Chinese woman. This has caused a curse to descend upon the family and they are terrorized by three Chinese who are sworn to destroy them. A very realistic storm takes place in the opening sets of this production and forces an actress, Suzanne Valette, and her companions to seek refuge in the house of mystery.

The direction and photography in this serial are exceptionally well done. Some very artistic soft focus effects are produced with much success. Juanita Hansen and Marguerite Courtot share the girl roles in this production. Warner Oland, who has already made his name known, takes the role of Jole Bain. Stephen Carr also deserves mention along with the stars for the very able work he does in the juvenile part. This picture was produced by George B. Seitz and directed by Bertram Millhauser. The story and scenario are by James Shelly Hamilton and splendid photography was done by Edwards Ceder.

If you go in for serials you will find “The Yellow Arm” full of mystery and action. The stars are known and the title is good. Besides this the episodes are thrilling and if your audience likes serials at all they will like this one.

“Shooting Fish”—Paramount
Type of production ............................. 1 reel animated cartoon
This cartoon is quite funny and will get the usual number of laughs. Hootch and Mootch go fishing with all the props that go with the average animated cartoon. They wrestle with some large fish for a bottle of whiskey and go spearing on a whaler. The motion in this cartoon is a bit jumpy and it has little or nothing to add to the animation or animation. While some of the drawings and ideas are funny and will get a laugh, there is nothing new or original presented in this one.

“Our Navy in Action”—U. S. Navy
Type of production ............................. 2 reel marine travelogue
“Our Navy in Action” was presented recently at a special showing in New York and received much applause. It is by far the most intimate glimpse of our Navy that has yet appeared. The lives of various departments of the Navy are reviewed and their activities shown. The negatives have been dyed to give the color of the sea. This and some very touching tinting of cloud and smoke effects add much beauty and realism to the pictures. In the first reel the work of the Naval aircraft is shown. It is in this section that one of the most beautiful shots ever attempted appears. The camera is taken up in a plane which is headed out to sea. A dense fog is soon encountered and all sight of land and water is lost, but the shadow of the plane is reflected in the fog and is caught, moving through the sky, by the camera.

The picture of the Paul Bunyan was one of the most popular. Some of the details of a big boat are played upon the screen. Submarines are shown in the act of submerging and heading out into dangerous waters. The destroyers come in for their share of the second reel and play over a real thrill. A fleet of destroyers travel before the camera, full speed ahead and lay upon the surface of the water a dense smoke screen. Another destroyer is shown sighting and giving chase to a submarine. The course of the ship is quickly changed, the men in the engine room get busy. The battle action alarm is sounded,—a rush for the decks—and guns are brought into action, no time is lost, the deck quivers and vibrate under the strain. A sailor reports to the captain—“We have hit her periscope.” Then the destroyer runs full speed over the course, dropping depth-bombs at given intervals. The terrific explosions follow and at length, unable to withstand the concussion, the submarine is forced to surrender. There are thrilling moments in this picture that would appeal to any audience. While the shots that go to make this production were all taken by the Navy's own photographers, the views that are included in this were edited by the Recruiting Division and are presented with a view of stimulating interest in Navy life.

“Bang”—Mermaid—Educational
Type of production ............................. 2 reel comedy
There is more than one good laugh and a lot of new stuff in this comedy. A great many of the effects are produced by the aid of trick photography. And some of the tricks are new. A dog, cat and rooster appear in the first reel and share the laughs with the actors. A good take-off on our Westerns speedily develops. The newly elected sheriff gets his first laugh by doing a remarkable and impossible billiard play with a revolver shot. The bad man drinks coke-cola by mistake and the rough house begins. In the excitement the sheriff and the bartender in an attempt to handcuff the man become chained to each other and find it hard to run away. The sheriff hides in the jail while the villain shoots up the town.
A good deal of horseback riding is staged in this comedy, with one extra splendid spectacular shot where the sheriff rides into the cafe and up a long flight of steps on to the balcony. The entire production is swift and sparkling. It goes off like bang and keeps up for the entire length of the two reels. If you are looking for a good broad comedy full of action and snap you won't go wrong if you play this one. It will get a good laugh no matter how hot the weather may be.

“Shoot the Gun”—Mutt and Jeff—Fox
Type of production ............................. 1 reel cartoon
Bad Fisher falls down on his latest Mutt and Jeff cartoon comedy. “The Gusher” leaves the artist his last laugh on it, mostly because the idea has been used time and again. The tall and short heroes strike oil by tapping an Indian's pipe line. The discoverer is led away by the white squaw. The two are caught up by the gusher and kept up in the air. When they come down they are afraid to do battle and disappear. By no means up to the standard of cartoon from Fisher's pen.

"Popular Science Films"—Harry Levey Service

Type of production........................................30 reel science serial

There have been many scientific films but this is the first successful attempt to follow through a complete course and present a long subject in a visual way. In every audience there lingers a thirst for knowledge, and for that reason travel and scientific subjects are proving more and more popular. The "Popular Science Films" move a decided step forward. The first five reels are now ready and are devoted to the subject of astronomy. This is a very difficult subject and only the section of slow cutting that the layman may understand. The first reel shows the evolution of the solar system in space. Detached bodies from burning masses are flung into space and crystallize into worlds. The rotary motion of the nebular masses is faithfully reproduced. The second reel comes down to earth and shows the solar system in action. Globes to represent the various planets are constructed much as they would be seen through a powerful telescope. The poet...and the path that they follow are clearly shown. The earth is shown as it would appear if we were able to step off and look back.

The remainder of the course will deal with problems more related to our own earth. Storms, ocean currents, and the physical aspects of the globe's many countries will all be explained on the screen. This will be done by the combination of animation and actual scenes.

This series can hardly be said to give a vision of the world development, but rather a vision of the physical world at it is, explained in a simple manner. The titles to this series could be much improved and made more attractive. There are several shots in the first five reels that could be improved by cutting and is few of the effects, such as the eclipse, which would have registered better if the motion of the globes were reduced so that every detail of the spectacle could be admired. If your audience is at all inclined to scientific pictures and has acquired an appetite for the kind of knowledge that is easily digested, it might be well for you to look into this series. It would make interesting program filler used a reel at a time, and would be splendid for church, school and children's performances.

Urban's "Movie Chats" No. 48—Kineto

Type of production.........................................1 reel magazine

The camera blows into Paris in the opening of this single reel magazine. True Paris is caught, not the familiar buildings and historic landmarks, but ordinary street scenes, market places, cart peddlers, flower vendors, and the general bustling public. This offers a welcome relief from the usual movie Paris that has already been shown so many times. Many of the zoo animals that in former years were raised in Germany are now bred in the suburbs of Paris. Hatching ostriches for the zoo by incubation is shown in detail. The new born bird is helped out of its shell. The middle section of this magazine is devoted to scenes in and about the city of Cairo, the Oriental mosques and ancient sections of the city are contrasted with the more European quarters. Examples of Moorish architecture, water carriers and cafe scenes appear in this one. Lawn bowling in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, appears next in order. The last section of this magazine is devoted to some intimate close-ups of the common house spider. His nest is shown and the weaving of the web that protects it clearly illustrated. Soon hopping time arrives and the tiny insect scurries up and down the frame. The magazine captures an unfortunate caterpillar and throws out bundles of silky web from her mouth, which she binds tightly around her. The spider is helpless and firmly secured to the web. This section of the magazine dürfe especially interesting. The natural insect photography that has ever been done. It is clear, well lighted, properly enlarged and composed, and has a human touch which is appealing. The magazine as a whole is instructive and interesting and ought to meet with popular approval.

"Three Good Pals"—Sunshine Comedy—Fox

Type of production.........................................2 reel comedy

Fox's most recent Sunshine release will prove a big hit with the matinee audiences. It is a first rate kid comedy with children players and a prologue that is novel and quite funny. It is the result of a short production device. The actors are Mr. and Mrs. Duck and Mr. Duck's friend Al. The two male players are returning from a "wild" party, with Mr. Duck much "under the weather." Miniature sets are used. This film is sure to get a good many laughs. The main idea of the main revolves around a little boy's dream. He's the hero of a circus and wins a race so that he can give the money to the fair heroine. Children and some clever youngsters provide a pleasant juvenile comedy that can be shown to both your younger and older patrons, but the children especially will be delighted with it.

"Water Trails"—Bruce Scenic—Educational

Type of production.........................................1 reel scenic

This is a very beautiful single reel scenic following narrow water trails into the South American jungle. Bamboo rafts glide through the overhung streams, but the journey ends at the foot of a waterfall. Now and again the camera is turned on the heavy foliage and undergrowth of the tropical forest. A new water fall is found and the journey continued. This time in small boats passing under small brick bridges built over two hundred years ago. The Spanish Steps waterfall is reached on this stream and again a new path is found. The camera work and photography of this film are excellent. It is one of the best that Robert C. Bruce has made. It would make a quiet, restful and beautiful scenic relief with which to balance a program. If your audience likes scenes of a high type they will like this one.

Urban's "Movie Chats" No. 44—Kineto

Type of production.........................................1 reel magazine

This issue starts off with views of Dublin, Ireland, the cameraman gets the London Post Office into focus and a good deal of footage is taken up showing the poor condition by which many packages sent through the mails arrive in. They are carefully repacked and readressed before they are sent on. Distributing the packages in the post office is illustrated. The latter part of this reel is devoted to animals and insects. The cranes in the London zoo and other birds, including long-eared owls and pheasants, are shown. The magazine ends with views of the art and science of bee culture. The process of honey production is shown and the queen bee is pointed out from among a mass of swarming bees. The entire reel holds the attention and interest and displays some good bits of photography. It has an educational value and should go well with intelligent audiences.

Pathé Review No. 108

Type of production.........................................1 reel magazine

The largest relief map in the world is shown in construction in the first part of this magazine. The map is constructed in sections and cast in plaster. Trees and houses are then added and colored so that the finished product will be an exact reproduction of the battle fields in Europe. The camera is then turned upon a bit of natural study and focused on the wasp. "Stinging the Landlord," is the title to this section. Twigs and leaves form the main food of these insects. The growth and cultivation of strawberries in Florida appears next. The berries are packed on the farm and boxed ready for market. Some slow motion photography is inserted in this magazine. Two of the scenes are rather slow in detail that slow motion only can illustrate. This magazine ends with some colored views of Britain, France, and shows some of the strange costumes worn by the natives of that country.

"Spooners"—Vanity—Educational

Type of production.........................................1 reel comedy

"Spooner's" is a Vanity comedy featuring Irene Dalton and Earl Rodney. The fun in this picture is very mild and the humor quite tame. The story is slight and presents no new original business. There is the Spanish a young fan-shaped bug, the comedy in the game, and her aunt invites him to a bridge party at the house where the girl in order to test his love dresses up as a boy and serves tea. He is tried and given a fair and all ends happily. This comedy is not up to the standard of Vanity productions.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS
"The film the party witnessed after dinner had been chosen by Senator Knox himself. 'I saw it about a week ago at a private showing in the home of Senator Johnson,' he said, 'and was interested in the remarkable underwater scenes. Because of these and the adventure thrills that run through it, I chose it to divert the President's mind.'"

The Philadelphia Inquirer, June 25th, 1921.

"Wet Gold" gave the President about as enjoyable an hour of entertainment as he has ever spent in a theatre.

This tremendously exciting tale of adventure on land, on sea, and at the bottom of the ocean is the biggest hot-weather attraction of the season.

It equalled the house record of the California Theatre, Los Angeles, in spite of adverse weather conditions. Get it, and give your patrons a real treat!

Goldwyn OUT To Sell 2,000—Will Re-lease 30 Productions Next Year

No Official Comment

(Special to WIDE'S DAILY)

Philadelphia—The Exhibitor publishes an interesting article regarding the sale of Goldwyn films. It says:

"Felix Mendeolshin, manager of the company, said that sure and certain pictures, upon his return from the convention of Goldwyn managers and executives held on the Pacific Coast, announced that more than $2,000,000 Goldwyn will make 30 productions which will be distributed on a plan new to the industry."

"There will be 2,000 franchised sold throughout the United States, of which the Philadelphia territory will be sold. There will be 2,000 franchised sold. Each franchise will be based on a total classification of the pictures being rated in quality that you are now thinking. Goldwyn shareholders will obtain the pictures approximately 20% cheaper than those exhibitors who buy on the old basis. There will be a single picture deposit on each franchise. It is also announced that on pictures in the G and H series, the highest quality of pictures, there will be sold $100,000 worth per picture for advertising in the nation's leading periodicals.

The Goldwyn executive offices refused to make any comment on the above dispatch.

Six Star Series

And Probably More for Famous Players Next Year—Some Big Ones Planned

Famous Players will release next year at least six star series. The names who will appear in them are Agnes Ayres, Wallace Reid, Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson, Ethel Clayton and Betty Compson. That is understood, until that day comes, there will be billed $100,000 worth per picture for advertising in the nation's leading periodicals.

Switching

Back to stars, Says Famous. And Goldwyn will franchise its output. Thus the switch. Awhile ago Famous was not going to have stars. Now it's different. Those district managers had something to say. All last week, Wilson makes it intriguing. For those pictures coming over from Berlin, Thus Famous gets back. To the original idea. When Sarah Bernhardt was around.

This Goldwyn franchise is interesting. Fred Warren's also got the franchise bug. Which makes Jayde Williams lean back. And smile. She belongs to the "franchise or bust" idea. Was its daddy. So to speak.

Hear The War Cry

Million Dollar Stuff

But this time it hurts. It's real. Laemmle sailing. With nary a look. At the completed Stroheim—"Foolish Wives." Has seen a lot. Of takes. And shots. That won't be seen. In the picture. And that's tuff—when you're a million in. For that's what it cost. More, actually. There's a difference. Between having a million dollar picture. And paying for one.

They've enough left of this one to make a serial. Or a couple. And then still enough. To cut it in five reels. And a full supply of features. For the first half. Of the coming season. Up to last month they had shot 595,310 feet of negative.

To Mrs. Stillman

Your lawyer says. You've been offered $100,000. To go into pictures. Take a tip. From a friend. Stay out.

Oh, Lady!

Says Audrey Munson. In her invitations. "To Weimann I bid my body and gave to the world a masterpiece. In giving 'Heedless Moths' to the screen I have bared my heart and soul." Nothing else?

Just A Year

Since "Roxy" took over the Capitol. You know what he's done. Made history there. And keeping it up. Even during the slump.

Congrat's. 'Ere's 'opin.' That you're there a lot more years. And then some.

Blue Monday

Maybe. For Loew stockholders. Lots of talk. That dividend will be passed. At today's meeting. Which isn't sweet or pretty. However, what's a dividend more or less?

Down Wall Street they say Loew's earned it. But money will be needed. During the coming dull summer. Guess they're right.

Danny.

Challenge Statement

this statement denied by Brulatour or his friend?
Concerning Mr. Eastman’s visit to the G. M. Laboratory with Brulatour; did it occur to Brulatour’s friend that there are other laboratories with developing machines, perhaps more wonderful? Did Mr. Eastman or Brulatour manifest any interest in their welfare?
“Will Brulatour publish the names of producers and distributors who favor his camouflaged laboratory activities? Will he say whether he is a director, officer or stockholder? Or whether he has made them any loans, extended them long credits, or used his Eastman prestige to obtain their favor?
“Undoubtedly Brulatour’s friend does not know that our committee recently visited Mr. Eastman and that the trade papers have mentioned the Allied Film Laboratories Assn. in every article published.
“Brulatour can no longer camouflage his activities in the laboratory business. As we view the situation, we must fight for our existence, or be eliminated. The Paragon, the G. M. and the San Jac Laboratories are reported controlled by Brulatour.
“We challenge Brulatour or his friend to prove that he is not in control of these laboratories, directly or indirectly, and to prove that any of our members have used large quantities of competitive raw stock.”

New Winik Unit

Winik has formed a Special Organization to Handle "The Kid" Which He Controls for Great Britain (Special to W.I.D.'S DAILY)

It is understood here that the Winik unit will form a special organization to exploit "The Kid" in Britain. This is a logical move, as the interest here is supposed to be a big one, and a special organization is being set up to handle it.

Western Import

Western Import is continuing to release a number of old Chaplin films. There is an impression in the industry that as Western releases the Chaplins, "The Kid" will sell out. This is all right, but it is not enough. Western needs to release a larger number of films if it is going to make a dent in the market.

Holdings Exceed $3,000,000

Holdings of property and equipment of all kinds exceed $3,000,000. This is a healthy sign for the industry, as it shows that companies are investing in the business.

Theatrical Possibilities

Theatrical possibilities are being considered for the release of "The Kid" in the United States. This is a positive step, as it shows that the industry is not giving up on the potential of the film.

Back To 1914

Look at the books, note the costs, and then start getting things into production. This is the only way to stay competitive in the industry.

Famous Starts the Cut for 1921-22; Others Follow Suit

Reports that Paramount will have hold in Los Angeles to the effect that in 1921-1922, the studio will have a reduction of probably 1600 employees. This is a good move, as it shows that the studio is taking the necessary steps to stay competitive in the industry.

In a Minneapolis regional trade paper, "Amusement," a statement is credited to J. F. Cubberly, manager of the Pickford and Ruben films, which states that it is expected that in the coming season First National will release approximately 40 big productions and that certain lesser productions of that organization will be eliminated this year.

From time to time, some of the trade papers in the various parts of the country have been issuing reports that production in Hollywood is going to be reduced. These reports have been based on the statements of "surprise" that they will contain no new material time when sales organizations have been keying up to receive them.

Some idea of the Goldwyn output will be given by noting a recent interview in "The Exhibitor," a regional trade paper published in Philadelphia, quoting Frederick Hendel, the Philadelphia manager for Goldwyn, upon his return from the annual sales conference of the company, that a possible result of this conference will be a drastic reduction in the volume of its output.

WID's DAILY inquiries in New York uphold its forecast of May 26 that the coming year will see a total of between 500 and 550 feature length releases as against over 700 for last year. That production will not be sufficiently cut back to show a definite reduction of output. Some 150 features were announced for contemplated production, but the fall and winter replenishment owing to financial conditions estimated at least $250,000 and for the coming year.

Financial conditions as applied to production will, hence, show a fairly significant decrease at this time to prompt the making of increased outputs for the coming year.

$100,000 Graft
Paid to Union Building Officials Says Counsel for Ascher Bros. of Chicago
Chicago—To the committee investigating alleged graft in the build-operations of Chicago, Lewis F.
colson, counsel for Ascher Bros.
and formerly representing the Amusement Assn., made the statement that theater owners have been compelled to pay out, approximately $100,000 in graft to "union" officials. He said that officials of the union were interested in the National Advertising Co.

"These officials told the movipicture exhibitors that they would either have to throw the advertisings handled by the concern on the screen or a strike would be called off.
In many cases they got away with it."

Con Shea, the witness stated, colellected owners of movie houses ento join the Janitors' Union or to be jailed.

Jacobson also told of an attempt made by the unions to organize theaters in the city and obtain a view of their wages raised $8 a week.
$8, the attorney said, was intended for the officials of the union.
This move was fought and a separation of the carbines was organized.
Let’s Go

Relative to the Petitjohn suggestion of a war chest for the industry, the manager of the Princess, De Kalb, Ill., writes: “Great idea; let’s go.”

Correspondence

ou to Wild’s Daily, June 8th, 1921, which in reference to a statement made by Geo. Canoe to the effect that he was personally employed and discharged by Mr. Brulatour in connection with the building and operation of the G. M. Laboratory; further to that part which refers to Mr. Lowe, his representatives and Miss Danke, who supervised the distribution of Eastman raw stock under the direction of Mr. Brulatour, as manager of the G. M. Laboratory, and it is a situation we urge you to investigate, being sure that the result of such an investigation will convince you that Mr. Brulatour is very much interested in Commercial Film Laboratories.

It is true this situation of affairs that concerns the members of the Allied Film Laboratories Association. We do not question Mr. Brulatour’s rights or your rights to go to the laboratory business if you see fit to do so. We do believe, however, that it is improper to say that you are not interested as a competitor while we are compelled to buy our raw stock from your plant. We believe that much will develop in the near future that will convince you that there is much cause for our concern.

Very respectfully yours,

ALLIED FILM LABORATORIES OF AMERICA.

unless they get from $2,000 a week up. It is ridiculous. It is wrong. In every branch of production there has to come real business methods. I don’t mean machine made pictures. I mean decent business efficiency. I don’t mean time clocks; I mean good business sense.

“The distributor has to make his share of reductions. These high-priced, low-powered sales managers who draw huge wages and do what? They must go. An efficient way of distributing must be found; will be found, where costs will not run to the 30 per cent they do today.

“And then the parasites who are in this business. They will have to go, too. There are a lot of them who only are in the way.

“The exhibitor, too, must do things. He must find good pictures. There must be a more constant showing in his theater of good pictures. The public is tired of the same old thing. He must learn how to cater to his clientele and give them the right kind of pictures. He must get to work, not once in a while, but every day and many hours a day.

“All of these things must happen. And a great many more. The business must be brought to a sane basis—the basis of early 1914. Look over your books; look over your costs, you, Mr. Producer, you, Mr. Distributor, you, Mr. Exhibitor, and get back to those days.”

Dear Mr. Ray

I have had the pleasure of seeing your picture, “Scrap Iron”, which you were so kind as to have sent to the camp. I want to tell you that the fight in this picture is one of the very best I have ever seen screened. Congratulations on the art with which you staged it.

In the Courts

Samuel W. Pearce, who has been an organist at the 81st Street Theater, got an attachment in the Supreme Court against the corporation of M. P. Molle, organ manufacturer, for a commission of 5% on the purchase price of $8,500 paid for an organ which was bought from the defendant through his efforts.

The officers of Universal have filed an application in the Supreme Court to vacate an order for their examination before trial in a suit by Horace Vinton to recover $10,000 damages because Universal made the film, "Her Burglar" in 1912 from his "Bill Casey's Burglar." Vinton wants to prove through the examination of the defendants how much they made from the film.

Herbert Brenon has filed an answer in the Supreme Court to a suit by Beverly Walden to recover on a note as assignee of the Palisade Film Laboratory. Brenon said that in 1917 he was president and producing director of the Herbert Brenon Film Corp., and that Alexander Beyfuss, was secretary and in charge of the finances. He said that the company was in financial straits, and that notes he signed were given by Beyfuss to Palisade for his personal obligation without his knowledge. He didn't know he was to be held liable personally until he was sued on them in London in 1918, he said.

Mrs. Irene Lee, mother of Jane and Katherine Lee, has sued Harry Linke, an actor, formerly in her employ, because of statements he made on April 8 at Syracuse to the Superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty there in order to induce him to prosecute her for cruelty to her children. She said that he made the following false statement: "She is cruel to her children and neglects them. They are treated roughly and abused in their act and off the stage. I have heard them cry on account of the abuse received. I left because I could not stand the way they were treated." Mrs. Lee asks $10,000 damages.

Screen Rights Secured
Selwyn has acquired the screen rights of "The Deluge" and will also make "The Christian," "Hungry Hearts" and a number of other productions including Alice Duer Miller's "The Man Who Hates Politics," "The Man With Two Mothers" and "Grand Larceny," by Albert Payson Terhune. They have also secured the rights of Phillen Oppenheim's novel "Nobody's Man."

Laemmle Sails
Universal Head, Abe Stern, Harry Reichenbach and Lee Kohlmar Leave for Europe.

Carl Laemmle sailed yesterday on the Aquitania on his annual trip to Europe. He was accompanied by Abe Stern, treasurer of Universal, who advanced his sailing date in order to go; Laemmle’s two children, Rosabelle and Julius and their nurse, Mrs. Maurice Fleckles.

Others in the party were Lee Kohlmar, president, Harry Reichenbach, who goes on a special mission; C. DeVidal Hundt, Laemmle’s secretary; Joe Kraemer, his valet; and Rosabelle’s maid.

Laemmle’s trip this year combines business and pleasure. The pleasure part will consist of some time spent in the town in which he was born, Lahnheim, Germany, at Darmstadt and Carlsbad. The business end of the trip will start as soon as he reaches London, where three days will be spent in consultation with the Messrs. Clavering of the Film Booking Offices, Ltd., which handles Universal product in Great Britain.

Laemmle will leave Reichenbach to complete the business in London, as well as to make a report of him to Mr. Kohl, which will consist of a permanent producing unit in Great Britain. This is a project which Laemmle has discussed for some time, and several interests in Great Britain have made advances to him looking toward British support of such a project. Reichenbach expects that his mission will take from six to eight weeks.

Laemmle will return to Paris and then to Frankfurt, Stuttgart and Laupheim. Lee Kohlmar is going to assist Laemmle. Last year it was impressed on Laemmle that it would be a great business advantage to make productions in Germany. The situation has changed somewhat during the war, if he finds that conditions warrant Laemmle may make a few productions in Germany, though he has no intention of establishing a permanent unit there.

"In the event that I find it practical to make a few productions abroad," he said, "I will do it partly as an experiment. If I do decide to make several productions in Germany I would put in charge of it at least one of them."

It is Laemmle’s intention to return to this country by the middle of October.

Film City Planned
The Evening Post publishes from Berlin the following special cable dispatch, copyrighted by the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

"The White House, Niagara Falls, and New York skyscrapers are among the international settings included in the new film city to be erected at a cost of $150,000,000 marks, near Berlin. Other scenes will be Japanese towns, the Gulf of Naples, and the Egyptian pyramids, in addition to hotels, theaters, and circuses. Critics express the opinion that the scheme is too big to be realized even by Germans, but the promoters insist it can and will be done."

Perrin and Jenner on Trips
Dwight S. Perrin, vice-president in charge of sales for the F. B. Warrene Corp., has left New York on a ten,000 mile trip that will take him to the 24 branch offices of the organization and into the key cities in every territory east of Minneapolis and Dallas.

Pass Dividend
Lowe’s, Inc., Directors Hold Meeting—Action “To Conserve Financial Position”

The board of directors of Lowe’s, Inc., has voted to pass the regular quarterly dividend of the company, in order to "conserve—and to maintain—the financial position of the company."

This action on the part of the directors has been expected in film circles and comes as no surprise to David Bernstein, treasurer of Lowe’s, Inc., issued the following statement yesterday afternoon:

"In order to conserve—and to maintain—the financial position of the company, the board of directors has decided that it is for the best interests to use its earnings in business and has voted to suspend dividends for the present."

The expression "for the present" was taken in some quarters yesterday as indicating that the August dividend declaration of the company would likewise be passed.

Expects to Cut Costs
"Through reorganization I expect to affect a big cut in the cost of production at the Lasky theater," said Jesse L. Lasky yesterday before leaving for California with Cecil B. De Mille. Lasky went west to arrange for the housing of the companies not working in the East.

St. Louis—The amusement license measure now in the hands of the Board of Aldermen will be revised downward, according to a member of the committee. The Photoplay Magazine Medal of Honor

TO BE AWARDED TO THE BEST PRODUCTION OF 1920 AND ANNUALLY THEREAFTER TO THE BEST PICTURE OF EACH YEAR

The way to surpass the photoplays of every invader on earth is to make every American motion picture devotee realize the truth—that America does lead the world on the screen—that we are making, in these United States, photoplays which have more humor, more romance, more thrill, more reflection of real life than any photoplays subtitled in any language.

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE'S Annual Medal of Honor has been established to testify to and proclaim this fact—to institute a serious search for the producer worthy of most signal honor—to acclaim the best screen work of Americans.

The Photoplay Magazine Medal of Honor has been permanently established as an award of merit to the producer—not to the director unless he happens to be a director producer; not to an actor or author unless he is also the producer, for it is the producer who is ultimately responsible. It is he whose foresight makes him venture his money, his reputation and his position in the industry, in the selection of story plus director plus cast. The verdict will be given by the public through a nation-wide ballot of the 2,500,000 intelligent and interested devotees of pictures who read Photoplay Magazine.
Many Important Companies Reducing Working Forces and Making Salary Cuts in View of Existing Conditions—
Universal and Realart Exceptions

Practically all of the larger companies are retrenching. They are either reducing the size of their or are making salary cuts. These changes are being made in branches and promtion departure of companies made this same move with regard to production some months ago.

Although no official statement was made, it is understood that when Robert Lieber, president of the organization, leaves next week for the U.K. he will be to discuss with producers who are making pictures for First National the question of reducing their contracts in view of business conditions, and it is understood that already Joe Schenck has taken up the question of reductions with various exhibitors of some of his pictures.

Adolph Zukor, owner of Famous Players, has made it plain to the producing heads of his company that he is not going to tolerate any more salaries being paid to the stars, particularly when the fact that the motion picture beach is open with exhibitor's weeks—due to certain conditions in the industry plus the heavy costs of advertising and promotion—will make it impossible to stop their progress as a whole. Evidently, you can't get away with this sort of thing in an industry that seeks to establish itself by the same token as against your preference to be conservative.

Now here is a question for you, reader, to answer. Do you think that the Los Angeles theater is better than the one in City of Denver?

WID'S DAILY in reporting the incident said:

"Take Denver, for example," said alderman R. "Famous Players have two stars, Goldwyn has one, Fox three and First National several. Where in the world is a theater without a famous star director?"

As for the prominent star and director, those names will be announced at a later date. It is stated Robertson-Cole will produce.

"The Blot"

Title of Latest Lois Weber Production Just Completed—For Release in the Fall

Hollywood—Lois Weber has just completed shooting the final scenes of her latest picture made in her own studio. It will be called "The Blot." The story is about a man who is an orphan, then becomes a blackmailer. In his last moments he calls on his old friend to help him, but his friend declines. Finally, he is taken to the picture will start immediately. It will be released this fall.

"Going to England Again"

Los Angeles—It is understood that Jane MacPherson will make another trip to England in January.

"Paradise Lost" London—Kinetographic Weekly learned from Berlin that Max Reinhardt, the famous stage director and producer of spectacles, is to make the John Millin's famous poem "Paradise Lost" for the Munich Allied, Adolph Zukor's German producing organization.

"Paradise Lost"

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

WID'S DAILY stated from Berlin last week that Reinhardt was to make "The Miracle" for the E.F.A. and ultimately Famous Players, of course. At that time it was said immediate plans had been made for two Reinhardt productions and that the name of the second could not be learned. "Paradise Lost" is evidently the second.

Paris Production

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Paris—Charles P. Whitaker is here from Berlin, where he completed a special mission for Famous Players. It is understood that Famous Players is considering the advisability of making at least one picture in France. Whitaker is looking over the field.

Whitaker was originally scheduled to return to New York direct from Berlin. He will not be back for several months.

Los Angeles Says Ass't Nat'l Has Butler Film—Not So, Says New York

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

Los Angeles—It is stated here that Associated First National will distribute "Making the Grade," a David Butler film made for Irving Milner. Butler has started work on "Bing-Bang-Bomb," an All-Harman Magazine story. Fred J. Butler, David's father, will direct.

The executive officers of Associated First National stated yesterday that "Making the Grade" is not a circuit attraction. The suggestion was made that perhaps the picture is being handled by some of the affiliated First National exchanges which in addition to regular circuit productions handle some independent productions.

"Heedless Moths"—Will Be Released Immediately to Independent Buyers

Equity Pictures has just closed a deal for the American and Canadian rights to "Heedless Moths," featuring the famous artist model, Audrey Munson. Robert Z. Leonard directed the picture for Perry Plays and the premiere was recently given at the Greenwich Village Theater, where it is now running.

The feature of the production is the posing in the nude by the world-famous model, who has had tons of publicity recently in the various Hearst publications. This publicity can be expected to help materially on the release of the feature, which Joe Schnitzer of Equity says will be immediately.

"I realize," said Schnitzer yesterday, "that "Heedless Moths" with the posing in the nude by Miss Munson will cause a lot of talk. But I know that there can be no objection to the production, free from censors because everything is so artistically handled and so beautifully done. Besides, the moral proves how fine an artist model can be. I believe it will be one of the big successes of the year.

The picture will shortly be brought up town to a theater, for which negotiations are now under way.

Menichelli Prod., for American Release—Shipman to Handle Them—Four a Year

Contracts executed between Giuseppe Barattolo, president of the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, controlling the productions of Pina Menichelli; and Ernest Shipman of New York, specify the latter as the distributing factor for all of the Menichelli Prod., for a period of five years.

"The Naked Truth" and "The Dangerous Age" are finished and en route to New York: Emile Zola's "A Page of Love" and Pirner's "The Second Mrs. Tangueray" are now in the making. Amato will take his company to London for the exteriors of the Pirner story. Four Pina Menichelli pictures per year are promised under this contract.

Pina Menichelli is accorded a high place in the estimation of theater men in Italy and most Latin countries. Carlos Amato, the guiding spirit behind the Menichelli Prod., is a prominent Italian producer.

A number of specials of the U. C. L. will be, as noted, distributed here by Goldwyn. Shipman is also to handle the output of the Ultra Co. of Rome, which is making "Ben Hur."

Cutting Down
he said, "unless we are forced to."

While the Selznick organization made their cuts and changes about Jan. 1 last, it is known that one of the branch offices voluntarily suggested a week or so ago that a further cut be made, and to sound over the general attitude of the salesmen wires were sent out by the home office. What will result further depends upon the answers to these wires.

At Universal it was stated positively and emphatically that no salary cuts were being made, and a Realart official said that absolutely nothing was being done in this connection.

"We are looking ahead and see nothing but boom times coming," he said.

Robertson-Cole are checking up carefully to make any necessary changes, for, or cuts, wherever possible.

No information could be obtained at the Fox studio with reference to this matter.

At United Artists Hiram Abrams said that to the contrary he had just advanced salaries. "You only have to take care of them," he said.

At Hodkinson's, P. N. Brinch said that the studio would occur in their organization. "We own no studios or theaters," he said. "We have only one thing to do—sell pictures."

We will make stronger efforts than ever during the summer to sell our product.

Educational plans no reductions according to E. W. Hammons.

Pathé has not been affected by the slump, according to Elmer R. Pearson, director of exchanges. "We have no idea of making any cuts," he said. "As a matter of fact we haven't found business so bad."

And besides we operate on a bonus system which practically takes care of any violent changes in the business, either when they are unusually good or otherwise. That is one of the ideals of our organization."

Oscar A. Price for Associated Producers, Inc., stated that some cuts in operating costs had been put into effect some weeks ago. He is just back from the coast.

Takes Full Responsibility of Attacks Made on Zukor—Says Correspondence Dates of Mattoon Incident Indicate Decision of Time and "Long Before Any Difficulty" Developed—Gives Prices Offered—Says Company Tried to Get Landlord to Rent Willimantic House to Schwartz

S. R. Mr. Kent goes into the matter in detail and in his reply says:

"My company is not responsible for the events that took place in Mattoon. The facts are as follows:"

The Facts on Mattoon, Ill.

"At a meeting of exhibitors held in Kansas City, a few weeks ago, certain statements were made by officials of the Exhibitor's Association regarding the difficulties between Mr. B. U. Urman, of Mattoon, Ill., and myself."

"These statements were later repeated before the exhibitors of New York City."

"The case above cited has been used in an attack upon Mr. Zukor and the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., as tending to show the trend of their policies in relation to the independent exhibitors of the country."

"The responsibility of this organization in the Mattoon matter rests with the writer and with no one else."

"No one else in this organization knows anything of the details."

The Date of the Letter

"Furthermore, The Trade Review stated that this letter was written to Mr. Urman and Mr. Akers, which will prove conclusively that this organization had nothing to do with whatever the matter."

Mr. Berman and Senator Walker stated that the prices requested by Mr. Schwartz were entirely out of proportion to the Mattone situation, and put the matter before the public. Mr. Schwartz was a representative of a large company, and the prices were said to be $500 for "Forbidden Fruit," $400 for "Heliotrope," and $100 for "Bayou." The prices were not offered as a regular price, but as a special price for the first run. Mr. Schwartz offered to sell the pictures for $400, and the price was accepted.

The Mattone situation was never previously advertised, and the price of the pictures was $200. Mr. Schwartz offered to sell the pictures at $100 each, and the price was accepted.

Mr. Schwartz offered to sell the pictures at $100 each, and the price was accepted.

The Schwartz Case

"Here are the facts concerning the case of H. Schwartz, of Willimantic, Conn., who asserts that 'he could not have any more Paramount Pictures,' and that his theatre (The Loomer Opera House) was taken away from him."

"From Sept. 25, 1918, until the present time, the Loomer Opera House was operated as a Paramount Pictures house. The Gem theater, the regular Paramount exhibitor, used 174 letters and telegrams to keep the Loomer Opera House out of the business and take his theaters away from him."

"The statement that a Paramount salesman said, 'You can't have any more Paramount Pictures,' is absolutely untrue."

"The Gem is a modern theater, and has bought practically all its output. The best offer we ever could get from Mr. Schwartz was that he could use some of our features on Sunday nights only, at a rental price of $15 to $20, which price is out of the question for the size of William- antic."

"In regard to the charge that we 'took his theater,' we wrote on March 24, 1921, to John L. Hall, of Choice, Hall and Smith, to make sure that the agreement was as advertised."

New Company Will Release 30 a Year—Leases Hippodrome for Showing of First

Three new corporations have been formed in Albany: the Sonora Films Exchange Corp., the Sonora Films Corp., and the Sonora Film Dist. Corp. The company is composed almost entirely of interests at present strangers to the film industry.

It is planned to release 30 pictures a year and the first year's product has already been lined up. For the present, distribution will be thorough state right exchanges, but later on it is possible the company will form its own distributing organization. Of the first year's output, some of the pictures are English, some Italian and the remainder American. The company has taken over the "Twice Born Woman," the first release of the Malcolm Strauss Pictures Corp., and commencing Wednesday evening will show it at the Hippodrome at 50 cents and $1. Two shows a day will be given.

"We have continued to sell Paramount Pictures to the theater that has regularly used them—the Gem. "We have attempted to have the owner of the Looser Opera House rent his theater to Mr. Schwartz.

"Whatever controversy there is, is entirely between Mr. Schwartz and the owner of the theater. The booking of Paramount Pictures has nothing to do with the question, since we have no intention of taking Paramount Pictures away from the Gem, which always has shown them, and giving them to Mr. Schwartz who has used only five since September 25th, 1918.

Conference On

Between M. P. T. O. and Independent Producers Regarding Future—Directors Also in Conference—Convention To Take Up Both Matters With Recognized "Independents"

A number of informal consultations between leaders of the M. P. T. O. of A., and various well known independent producers have culminated in an important preliminary conference of a more formal nature which was held at the offices of the theater owners on Wednesday afternoon.

The idea of a conference with independent producers originated with the M. P. T. O., who are looking with growing suspicion on the activities of certain producing and distributing concerns, in acquiring, promoting or building theaters in competition with the independent exhibitors through the country.

The object of the conferences as well as the preliminary conference, was to arrive at a definite understanding between the producer who is relying on the quality of his pictures rather than exerting his influence in acquiring or controlling theaters.

The conference was attended by Lewis J. Selznick, W. W. Hodkinson, R. H. Cochran, Henry Mumpner, representing Benjamin B. Hampton. On behalf of the theater owners, there were Sydney S. Cohen, C. L. O'Reilly, S. I. Berman, Senator J. Walker and Joseph A. Warren, who is a member of the Senator's law firm.

In the course of the conference, both the independent producers and the representatives of the theater owners agreed that the situation which now exists called for speedy action. As one of the conferences put it in speaking to the independent producers—"We must find out how we can help you in order that you may be able to help us."

All of the producers present agreed in principle to place themselves at the disposal of the M. P. T. O. A., but no detailed plan was agreed upon. There was considerable clarifying discussion, and the most encouraging survey was made of the resources of the independent producers who attended the conference.

All of them were anxious to attend the convention at Minneapolis and received an invitation to do so.

In the meantime, complete, although tentative details will be worked out by all concerned and this mass of material will be submitted for action to the convention.

Brenon Sues

Italian Producing Company for His Share of Profits—Attachment Issued by Court

An attachment has been granted in the Supreme Court Against the property of the Unione Cinematografica Italiana de Roma in suit of Charles Arbuckle against three defendants. Mr. Arbuckle filed the suit on Feb. 1, 1920, to go to Rome and organize an American department for the defendant, and he was to get $10,000 and 10 per cent on the net sales in the United States, with 20 per cent on all films personally directed by him.

Arbuckle alleges that he was entitled to about 100 productions, of which "The Ship" and "Theodora" have been sold to Goldwyn. He believes that others have been sold of the following: "Mme. Susy Gene," "The Bridge of Sighs," "La Tosca," "Julia the Almendares," "La Divina," and "The Spiders of Society." He believes that the defendant has received at least $250,000, which Goldwyn and asks $25,000 as his share.

A claim for $3,000 additional is made because the plaintiff was hired to direct "Beatrice" and "Sister Against Sister" at $6,000 each and 20 per cent of the net profits. Brenon says that the former has been sold in Europe at a profit and believes the American rights have brought a large sum.

Ernest Shipman is handling the Pina Menichelli pictures, which form a part of the U. C. I. program. When asked whether the suit affected his interests, he said: "The Brenon suit or any suit against the U. C. I. would not affect the Menichelli productions as Carlo Amato, president and director of the unit producing the Menichelli pictures and financing them, arranged with the U. C. I. to take over exploitation of these pictures before contract was signed. Shipman has committed no wrong in this, since the U. C. I. was primarily a party to the contract, but the pictures are now entirely in his control and revenues come directly to Amato and do not come to the United Artists Corp.

In Nine Decisions Court Upholds Constitutionality of Sunday Shows There

(Special to WIDE'S DAILY)

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Upholding Sunday picture shows and dealing with a severe blow to blue law advocates in Oklahoma, the criminal court of appeal passed down nine decisions in which it was declared that fines and prosecution for operating moving picture theaters on Sunday were unconstitutional. The case dates back to 1912, and is the first time that all members of the court have agreed on the Sunday question.

The decisions are based upon the state Sunday law that no servile labor shall be performed on Sunday. The court decided that the sale of tickets and other labor connected with the running of a picture theater was not servile labor. The decision is also based upon the acts of the New York Supreme Court.

The Oklahoma Sunday law, originally drawn in 1918, has been amended since to forbid horse racing and gaming. The only other states operating such picture prospects is New York, which has had no state statutes since 1920. The decisions are of great importance and interest here, it is said they are the first instances in which a high state court has passed on Sunday playing picture operations.

In the Courts

The Precision Machine Co. has filed an answer in the Supreme Court to a suit by the Technicolor Motion Picture Corp. for breach of contract, in which the Precision Company makes a counterclaim for $50,000 damages. The answer alleges that the plaintiff falsely represented that its projection machine was 30 per cent more efficient than other lamps, and could be used with a current in excess of 100 amperes. It is alleged that the machine is not commercially successful because it cannot be used except on a horizontal plane, whereas theatres require an angular or partly vertical plane. It is also alleged that the lamp cannot be used with a current of more than 50 amperes, projecting from 75 to 100 feet, whereas modern theatres require a projection of 200 to 230 feet.

Jesse Hampton and Robertson-Cole have filed an answer in the Supreme Court to the suit of John D. Williams for damages because they induced Henry M. Warner to break a contract with Williams, in which they say Williams has sued Warner in another action and will get full damages from him for the acts complained of if he is entitled to anything.

The application for a temporary injunction brought by International Film Service Co., Inc., against Associated Producers, Inc., to restrain the exhibition of an Allan Dwan Prod., under the title "The Broken Doll," has been denied. Associated Producers, Inc., however, must put up a bond of $25,000 to secure any damage the plaintiff may suffer.

The Appellate Term of the Supreme Court has affirmed a judgment for $63 in a suit of Charles Blake against the Brewar Amusement Co., as commission on the sale of the motion picture theater at Tompkins Avenue and Halsey Street, Brooklyn, for $6,500.

A default judgment has been filed in the Supreme Court by Joseph Leblang against Max H. Wilner on a note to L. Lawrence Weber which was endorsed to the plaintiff.

Was She Right in Deceiving Him?

She lived alone in the old mansion her Aunt Agatha had left her. To keep the wolf from the door she advertised for summer boarders, and the solitary reply came from a young man, temporarily blind.

When the star boarder arrived Agatha discovered that he believed her to be old Aunt Agatha whom he had visited in his boyhood.

On the spur of the moment the young girl decided to play the role of the old lady—with subsequent complications that are amusing, surprising and refreshingly romantic.

Justine Johnstone is enticingly lovely, and Harrison Ford makes an admirable "star boarder".

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Wife of husband wrongly convicted of murder carries on his life's work until his innocence is proven
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 6,244 feet

It isn't often that a producer can take a story, consisting of as trite a situation as that of a man convicted of a murder he did not commit, and make it interesting. But Sidney Franklin has made a really worth while feature from Andrew Soutar's "Courage." He starts off by gathering the attention of the spectator through the atmosphere of a happy home life, carefully planting the characters and laying a sympathetic foundation for the people of the play.

The story moves along smoothly and the development is logical. There are unimportant but effective by-touches that register a purpose in every case, even though occasionally they are obviously coincident. One especially good bit is the accidental whiff of wind which blows a letter into the open grate, destroying a precious piece of evidence. No long courtroom sequence is used and there are no hold-ups of any description. "Courage" keeps moving toward the end evenly and comprehensively, despite an unintentional hint or two as to what the result will be.

There is just one inconsistent event which may cause a spark of annoyance to some. You are told that the condemned man conducts his factory for eighteen years while in apparent solitary confinement and although you are shown how it is done, it is just improbable enough to almost spoil the effect. You are asked to believe that the convict gives out formulas for high explosives, etc., when he has no way of experimenting with actual materials. This might easily have been overcome by having the wife take the husband's place, since an earlier caption indicates that she knows almost as much about the business as her husband.

Sam DeGrasse and Naomi Childers do equally fine work as husband and wife. Alec B. Francis is good as the friend of the family who sticks to the wife when her husband is sentenced. Others are Lionel Belmore, Adolph Menjou, Lloyd Whitlock, Ray Howard and Gloria Hope.

Jean Blackmore carries out her husband's inventions and progresses rapidly during the eighteen years he serves for a crime he did not commit. In the meantime, Stephen, Jr., grows up in ignorance of his father's whereabouts. The war breaks out, and the son of the murdered man kills himself, leaving a confession that he killed his father. His pal "Speedy" destroys the letter and goes to fight. He is wounded and returns to clear Blackmore's name. The inventor is freed and joins the wife who has remained faithful all the years.

Careful Exploitation and Certain Promises Can Be Relied Upon

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You ought to be able to satisfy your folks with "Courage" if they like drama at all. It is particularly the sort of thing that women gloat over and enjoy, because they are required to sympathize to such an extent with the heroine. Should you consider the story the best talking point, play it up with catchlines such as: "Her husband was sentenced to life imprisonment for a crime he did not commit. Did she give up or have 'Courage' to fight to the end." Or, "See how one woman's faith and fortitude gave her husband the 'Courage' to live through punishment for a crime of which he was not guilty."

Exploitation should prove worth while and you can promise a splendid production and good acting by a capable company of players headed by Naomi Childers and Sam De Grasse.
Automobile Comedy Presents Some New Business and Several Thrills

SCENARIO BY ............... Byron Morgan
CAMERA MAN ................ C. E. Shoenbaum

STORY ...... Not much plot but carries by action and amusing comedy

DIRECTION ...... Good in comedy scenes and auto race, but allows overacting

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Good
LIGHTINGS ................... Good
CAMERA WORK .............. Excellent, attractive and breezy in suitable parts

SUPPORT ...... Theodore Roberts strong in comedy role

INTERIORS .................. Sufficient
DETAIL ..................... Good. Titles well written

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Hero gives up racing to win girl but later wins race, girl and foreign contracts for the old man

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,629 feet

If it weren't for some new business and fresh comedy "Too Much Speed" would be almost identical with some of Wallace Reid's past performances. Especially "Excuse My Dust" which was produced over a year ago. Theodore Roberts played the part of automobile manufacturer and father of the girl in both productions. There is the usual gasoline atmosphere, and a little overdone. A grand assortment of latest model 1921 roadsters are run into almost every set of this picture, and are apt to give one the impression that all the world is on wheels, and nothing else matters. The story, plot, action and even the girl, seem to take back seats in order to allow a few new cars to play in the limelight.

There is, however, a good deal of business and amusing comedy in this feature that is built up to a satisfactory and thrilling climax. This time the automobile race runs on a graded track and a real thrill is produced when the hero's car skids and barely misses a high speed collision. This race received a good deal of applause when played in the Rivoli and can be expected to produce the same results wherever it is shown. It is sure-fire stuff.

Besides the thrills there is some splendid comedy, and in these scenes the honors are shared between the star and Theodore Roberts. In fact there are many shots which center entirely on the splendid comedy work of Roberts. You can expect a good laugh in the scene where the limousine is wrecked and Roberts, as Pat MacMurran, crawls out feet first.

The story is very like the usual Reid automobile comedy. Reid takes the part of Dusty Rhoades, a champion daredevil racer, who gives up racing for the sake of his girl. The girl's father manufactures automobile trucks and is a rival of the company that "Dusty" has just left. Both companies are anxious to receive a large South American order. On his wedding morning, "Dusty," unable to take the other man's dust, starts a race and ditches the car and his intended father-in-law, who now certainly objects to the wedding taking place. An elopement and chase follow and both men land in jail. In the end, "Dusty" drives one of the private cars built by his girl's father, wins the race and a large contract for the old man.

Agnes Ayres plays the girl in this feature with a good deal of charm. Guy Oliver, Jack Richardson, Lucien Littlefield, Henry Johnson and Jack Herbert complete the cast.

Allow Previous Productions to Guide You

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Your people will probably remember some of the previous Wallace Reid automobile comedies as "What's Your Hurry?" "The Roaring Road," "Double Speed" and "Excuse My Dust," and will know exactly what they can expect in this one. The star is of course very goodlooking and has quite a following.

Lay stress on the race which is certain to attract your motoring patrons, and also mention Theodore Roberts as the father of the girl. Your folks will like his acting and enjoy watching the ever present cigar.

The Paramount press sheet will give you many advertising ideas and suggest a way to make an auto tie-up. Wallace Reid drives a MacFarland roadster in this comedy and it might be well to look up the district representative of this car and work a little cooperative plan. The road cops use Fords, but fitted with special cylinder engines to trap the speeders. Mention this.
A production with a well-balanced cast that presents a vital problem of today and teems with situations of keenest human interest.
Very Familiar Situations but Production Thoroughly Adequate

DIRECTION ...... Fair; at times a bit inconsistent particularly in connection with handling of the villain
PHOTOGRAPHY ..................... Good

SUPPORT ...... James McLaughlin poorly cast; Audrey Chapman adequate heroine; sea types suitable EXTERIORS ........................ Some pretty coast shots
INTERIORS ........................ All right
DETAIL ......................... Nothing obviously wrong
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Girl cast on desert island with man she hates gradually falls in love with him
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 5,000 feet

The moral of practically every desert island picture that has been made seems to be that no matter how much the girl hates you, if you can manage a shipwreck and bring her safely to an uninhabited island, she will eventually fall in love with you, and so it is again in "God's Gold," a feature starring Neal Hart, and made by Pinnacle Productions. It has all the familiar ingredients of sea pictures, past and present. That fact, however, shouldn't detract from its entertainment value where audiences are not already "fed up" on this formula.

Other than the name of the author, it is impossible to give any credit to those connected with the actual making of the picture. Arthur Henry Gooden may or may not have been acquainted with other stories similar to his, but at any rate he has used several trite situations, all of which have appeared in past productions of this type. There's a slight resemblance to "Dead Men Tell No Tales," combined with an atmosphere almost identical to "Beach of Dreams," two fairly recent releases.

The director missed a good chance to furnish a thrill when he neglected to make use of the actual shipwreck. He only suggests it. No matter how old this idea is, it always supplies a good thrill. For action he depends entirely on one or two fights that are good but insufficient to warrant talking about.

Neal Hart, usually thought of in conjunction with western dramas, is seen in the role of a sea-going adventurer. He offers a good performance and is well supported in the main by a suitable company, with Audrey Chapman. As have other island heroines, Miss Chapman offers a short sequence in which she solves the difficulties of boudoir inconveniences. There is nothing objectionable in the scenes.

James Cameron, wealthy adventurer, stows away on a vessel chartered by Dr. Anson to search for an island bearing gold from a wrecked ship. Aboard are the Doctor's daughter Mary and her fiance, Carson. From his hiding place, Cameron learns that the crew is planning mutiny. He warns Mary and eventually saves her life. They live for some time on an island, during which Mary breaks her engagement with Carson and when Cameron's rescue yacht arrives, goes with him as his promised wife.

Western Star in Sea Picture Should Attract

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who haven't shown any of this type of pictures recently can undoubtedly satisfy the majority of patrons with "God's Gold." Particularly if you frequently select your program from the independent market, you will do well to secure this one which shows Neal Hart in a role different from those in which he usually appears. He is probably best known as a western type of hero, so if it happens that you have shown any of his recent releases, such as "Skyfire" and "Danger Valley," you might recall them and say that in "God's Gold" he is an adventurer of the high seas.

Play up the Captain Kidd angle of the story and the idea of the buried treasure. You can always appeal to a certain number with ideas such as these. Also use catchlines and secure some of the press sheet posters which represent some of the more important moments.
A Great Year For Fighters; A Bad Year For Fools

The shrewdest exhibitor minds of this country are looking 'way beyond a period of summer depression, which is possibly just a little heavier than usual in certain sections of the country. These shrewder minds of the industry have the courage to believe that the season of 1921-1922 will be a great year for fighters—and a bad year for fools.

You do not find the abler, stronger exhibitors of this industry growing nervous and resorting to the makeshift remedy of reducing admission prices to attract patronage.

In the first place, except in certain large cities, if you put your prices down you are not going to be able to put them back.

In the second place, beginning in September and October, all lines of business in the United States will be booming. Over the summer wages in all lines are being stabilized. The country is already vigorously responding to commercial readjustments. Prices are settling down. Banking conditions are becoming normal. The great Federal Reserve banking system saved the country from a panic almost talked into existence by fools.

Labor is back on the job. The working muscles of America are again behind the job. It will be a fall and winter season of full working time or double shifts. All of this again means big patronage and profits for motion picture theatres. You cannot have those profits if you reduce your admissions.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Farm hand who breaks little girl's doll encounters difficulty securing money to replace it

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......About 5,000 feet

Allan Dwan has given Wilbur Hall's story a thoroughly good production and it is artistic throughout. The settings, photography and general presentation is all that could be desired. However, it seems asking a bit too much of an audience to expect them to take the situation seriously—that of "The Broken Doll." The author's basic idea is so slight that even despite the fairly sincere heart interest which it creates, it doesn't seem sufficient for the incidents that occur because of it.

Monte Blue is again cast as an awkward creature, this time a humble farm hand who is referred to as a "boy," but certainly doesn't look it. Blue plays the part in his characteristic manner and makes a good deal of "Tommy Dawes." He overacts as times or perhaps it seems so because the scene is held too long. Mary Thurman is adequate as the heroine who believes in Tommy. Mary Jane Irving, a pleasing youngster, is the little girl who owns "The Broken Doll."

The feature offers a fair piece of entertainment which will please a good many because it is good to look at regardless of the fact that some will find the story a bit slow-moving. Toward the end when Tommy Dawes meets up with an outlaw there is some good action in the way of a fight, and a small fire which brings things to a sort of climax prior to the happy ending. The photography is especially worthy of comment and there are numerous attractive backgrounds.

Tommy Dawes is devoted to Rosemary, the ranch owner's little crippled daughter. Tommy accidentally breaks the child's doll and is at a loss to know how to replace it. In the first place he hasn't any money. He decides to "borrow" it from another farm hand's box and starts to town to buy a new doll. On the way he is relieved of the money by a bandit who is caught by the sheriff. Later Tommy again encounters the outlaw in a shack and Tommy escapes. The shack burns down, and in it Tommy's assailant dies. The sheriff suspects Tommy of murder and arson and places him under arrest. Tommy, feeling guilty, makes no defense, but in the night accidentally manages his own escape. Eventually the crime is cleared up, and Tommy gets a new doll for Rosemary and marries the sheriff's daughter.

A Lot In It To Please Younger Audiences

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Because it has quite a lot to do with a little girl and her doll you may show this to your juvenile audiences and get a hearty response. On the other hand it is a trifle mild for grown-ups to appreciate unless they can really feel sorry for Tommy Dawes, and sympathize with him in his effort to replace "The Broken Doll." You can talk about the production end of it and of course the producer's name should be used in your announcements, and recall his most recent production "The Perfect Crime," featuring Monte Blue, if you have already played it.

Tell them the story has been adapted from Wilbur Hall's Saturday Evening Post story which appeared under the title of "Johnny Cucabod." Catchlines could read: "He was only an awkward farm hand, but see how he fought to make a little crippled girl happy by replacing her 'Broken Doll.'" The title suggests others that should interest.

CHARACTER OF STORY........ Girl of the stage left stranded in a small town finds a temporary home on a farm but returns to become famous in New York
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,000 feet

Viola Dana does some of her best work in this story of stage and home life. She is very much alive from start to finish and seems to enjoy her part, which is nine-tenths of the entire production. She does much better in the dramatic moments, which require intensity and facial expression, than when she tries to be funny. Her work is better in the first part of the story where she leaves the unfortunate little theatrical company, and towards the end where she abandons herself in the barn dance scene, than it is during the comedy shots on the farm. Her acting holds the attention in a remarkable way, and is certain to amuse an average audience.

There are points in this picture where it seems to drag, but they are immediately caught up by added action or a bright title, and in one case by a very clever twist to the story, at the point where the old farmer's daughter returns home after her sad experience.

This production would have made good comedy or a good drama if the director had stuck to one or the other. As it is, the character of the picture is neither the one or the other. There is good comedy in it and some very excellent dramatic moments, but the sudden changes from one to the other cause the production as a whole to appear jumpy. On the other hand, there are several scenes such as the runaway, the back stage of the theater, and the barn dance that are splendidly directed and produced. The types and characters are well balanced and chosen with a good deal of care.

The title writer plays a strong hand in making this feature presentable. The titles are brief, snappy, and cover the point in question. "Fired, tired, hungry, and four hundred miles from New York"—reads one in the first reel and this tells it all in a nutshell.

The story opens up with a scene from "Way Down East" being presented on a small town stage. The company goes broke, and Marge Joy, the young star, is sacrificed and her part given to a stage struck amateur, because an admirer is ready to back the show. Marge takes to farm life, and becomes part of a narrow conservative family until one day the daughter of the farmer returns. It was she who was the stage struck girl but had now had enough of stage life. In order to get the old man to take back his daughter, Marge kills the love of his son by playing drunk at a dance. She leaves the farm and becomes famous in New York. Some years later the farmer's boy writes a play and they are reunited.

Viola Dana Fans Will Admire Her in This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Home Stuff" will go over all right. The star has many admirers who will not be disappointed when they see what she does in this. Theater life is always attractive on the screen. It has a romance that is all its own and this point should not be overlooked when you are advertising. The average audience will like this production as a whole and is very apt to be carried away with the charm of the star and overlook the unevenness.

Use the star's name and the idea that she was stranded dead broke in a one-horse town. Talk about the runaway team. The press sheet will give you many advertising angles and ideas. Before using the stills make sure that the corresponding views appear in the film.

CHARACTER OF STORY ............ Bashful bookkeeper with wonderful imagination has a day dream that leads him to propose to a girl

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 5,000 feet

In his latest Fox feature William Russell has a wonderful dream and he doesn't go to sleep to dream it either, which makes it all the more remarkable.
The story is by Max Brand, and folks that don't mind improbabilities will accept it favorably and most likely be satisfied with "Children of Night." It bears an atmosphere of the serial in respect to the operations of the secret society business which so often plays a prominent part in the "continued next week" pictures.

The continuity is somewhat choppy at times. This might be readily overcome by inserting explanatory sub-titles where they are needed, and leaving out some unnecessary ones. It would seem that things would be less implausible if the hero of the tale actually dreamed what occurs, but it sort of detracts from its effectiveness when at the close the hero is still at his desk, wide awake. He'd have to have an abnormal imagination to think up any such thing as "Children of Night," which is the name of the secret society whose purpose is never disclosed, other than that its betrayers are punished by death, and the fact that it works in fear of the police and discovery.

Two stories within the main story are unfolded, and you don't know until very near the end just how the second effects the bookkeeper hero. The director has managed to hold the interest in this manner in satisfactory fashion. William Russell is given all the prominence in the world and toward the close does some fighting. Ruth Renick is an acceptable heroine, while "Lefty" Flynn looks the part of the prize fighter which his name likely indicates, and isn't suited to the role of villain.

Jones, a bookkeeper, has never interested himself in women until one day he has a thrilling day dream in which he becomes entangled in the affairs of a secret order called "Children of Night." He falls in love with its only female member, and when she aids him in escape, her own life is imperilled and it is up to Jones to save her. Trouvaine, leader of the society, seeks the girl for himself and has Jones thrown into a dungeon. Finally, of course, Jones saves the girl, exposes the society to the police, and when Jones, the bookkeeper, "comes to," he recognizes Sylvia, the office girl, as the heroine of his dream.

Star's Name and Catchlines Should Do It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Audiences who prefer thrills and a certain amount of mystery in their entertainment will be pleased with Russell's "Children of Night." It's somewhat different from any of his recent pictures so you might make a point of this, particularly if you show his features frequently. Max Brand's story isn't intended for serious digestion, so perhaps it would be just as well if you let them know it is a dream. On the other hand if you think it best to keep them guessing until the end, and that they will not think it too improbable to wait for ending, so much the better.

If the star's name is a drawing card in your community, use his name in big letters outside the theater and catchlines with stills in lobby frames should attract. Say: "Have you heard of the secret order of 'Children of Night'?" Or, "If your name is JONES don't miss William Russell's latest picture. There's a good reason why. See for yourself."

wife's infidelity, nearly ruining her own romance
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,363 feet

Since Realart decided to star May McAvoy, everyone has probably looked forward to her first picture with considerable interest and just because of this it is unfortunate that a better story was not selected. Hector Turnbull's “A Private Scandal” holds forth very little real opportunity for either the star or the capable cast selected to support her. In the first place its main situation has served so long and so faithfully that it is about time it was retired with a few other of the age old plots that keep making their appearance at regular intervals, regardless of your liking.

Chester Franklin's development of the time worn eternal triangle doesn't bring the feature any touch of originality nor give it any new twist. Everything happens just as you expect it to. Once the French orphan arrives in the home of the Lawtons, and you learn that Mrs. Lawton is friendly with Crosby, you know that the little girl is going to suffer somehow. And she does—nearly has her own romance shattered. Probably the director stuck to the scenario, and that accounts for something unusual failing to take place. The settings are all ordinary looking affairs, one or two of the exteriors being very unreal.

May McAvoy is the bright spot of the picture, and her appearance and delightful personality is quite likely to make you forget some of the things that would otherwise fail to keep you interested. Kathryn Williams will satisfy her admirers, although she has a fairly unattractive part as the unfaithful wife. Bruce Gordon is the hero, with Ralph Lewis playing the husband who never knew of his wife's infidelity, a fact that most spectators will hardly appreciate, since his actions in the very opening of the picture indicate that he is aware of Crosby's attentions to his wife.

Mr. Lawton neglects his wife in his hobby for his thoroughbred horses. Jeanne, a French orphan adopted by the Lawtons, is engaged to marry Jerry, employed by Lawton, but when Lawton infers that Crosby comes to the house to see her, she accepts the charge rather than expose Mrs. Lawton, and later, when the unfaithful wife is about to run away with Crosby, Jeanne prevents her at the risk of losing Jerry's love. Eventually Jeanne and Jerry are happy and Lawton never knows what happened.

They'll Probably Like The Star Enough Not To Kick Otherwise

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a case where the star should be able to put the picture over, so if your folks have shown a liking for May McAvoy in the past they will in all probability be satisfied with "A Private Scandal." Play up the fact that she is starred in the picture and that this is the first of a series to be made with her by Realart. To refresh their memories you might recall her appearance in "The Devil's Garden" with Lionel Barrymore and more recently co-featured with Gareth Hughes in "Sentimental Tommy."

Perhaps the title may attract attention in which case give it prominence in your announcements. Catchlines might be employed to get them interested in the story if you find that they still approve of this familiar theme. "In 'A Private Scandal,' a little French orphan sacrifices her own happiness to preserve the home of those who gave her a home." Stills of the star displayed in the lobby should bring them inside as well.

Rudyard Kipling's world read story
Without Benefit of Clergy

Directed by James Young Produced by Robert Brunton
Supervised for Mr. Kipling by Randolph Lewis

A picture that will grip
the hearts of all humanity:
a perfect story perfectly done.
Two souls listen to the drum beat of destiny; two souls hear the call of the East in the night.

What did the drum beat, throbbing like their own hearts, mean?

Everything or nothing!
If Kipling had never written any other story than this, he would still be one of the great authors of the world.

If James Young never directed another picture, "Without Benefit of Clergy" would proclaim him a master.

If everyone of the greatest features that have ever been made were wiped out, "Without Benefit of Clergy" would, in itself, proclaim the greatness of the art to future generations.

In its revelation of a wonderful love, in its amazing power to move the human heart, in its intensity of emotion, in its superb acting, its mysticism and its colorful and perfect presentation, "Without Benefit of Clergy" stands alone.

It is the screen's greatest triumph.
PATHE presents the superlative offering of the year. Rudyard Kipling is the world's greatest living author, a man whose works every school child knows, who is read by everyone who reads. "Without Benefit of Clergy" is one of the most wonderfully appealing love stories the world has ever seen; it is the story of two persons who were as far apart in birth and training as the North and South poles—a white man and a beautiful young Hindu girl, yet who loved one another with a perfect love. In every detail of story, direction, acting, production and universal appeal the picture is perfect. In itself it is a perfect answer to every critic the screen has ever had. It will play upon the heart strings of your audiences; it will move them as no picture has ever moved them before; it will bring them back again and again to see it; it will establish your house as the very temple of motion picture art. With the presentation and exploitation which it deserves, and for which it presents unparalleled opportunities, it will certainly surpass in receipts any picture you have ever had in your house. That is our honest belief.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... About 5,500 feet

"Fine Feathers" is from Eugene Walter's play which he has adapted for the screen for Metro's presentation. It may be that audiences accepted the stage version with satisfaction, but this sort of domestic drama has been used so frequently in screen entertainment in the past few years that its appeal is considerably lessened with each repetition.

Even though it has a note that rings more or less true to life, its situations are unreasonable in actuality, and of the nature that makes the spectator want to cry out "why doesn't she do so and so" and "why is he so blind," etc. But the players go right ahead with the author's ideas regardless of how impossible they may strike you. The plot is rather similar to the play which met with such success some years ago, "Paid in Full," and the opening scenes show the last act of it being enacted and witnessed by the principals of the picture play and gradually their own domestic affairs shape themselves after the fashion of the play.

The production is satisfactory, but contains evidence of revision and cutting which have probably benefited it a lot, but still the continuity is slightly ragged in spots. There is an overdose of sub-titles that might readily be thinned out. And then again where a sub-title would have been preferable to the use of a model showing a dam collapsing, they fail to make use of it. The model certainly doesn't look at all real.

Claire Whitney's performance is all that part of the wife requires. Eugene Pallette, as her husband, does good work but overacts a trifle in the dramatic climax. Others are Thomas Ross, Warburton Gamble and Jnie Elvidge.

Bob Reynolds accepts Brand's suggestion and passes on an inferior cement which is used in the construction of a dam which Brand is building, for which he is being paid a large sum by the Government. Bob's wife, Jane, enjoys the luxury which the newly acquired wealth affords, but doesn't know that Bob obtained it dishonestly until he tells her that Brand has "cleaned" him by giving him a false "tip" on speculation; also that he (Bob) has forged a check with Brand's name. Like the woman in "Paid in Full," Jane goes to Brand who gives her a check to clear Bob. The husband refuses to believe that Jane gave nothing in return. He kills Brand and then himself.

Should Go Where They Relish Domestic Drama

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Audiences that have shown a liking for drama of this calibre will in all probability be satisfied if you give them "Fine Feathers." On the other hand if you know how your patrons' tastes run and they are not entertained with domestic troubles of this character, you won't be able to put this one over because it is strictly dramatic and rather heavy at that if you take the tragic climax into consideration. Exhibitors will best use their own judgment with this one particularly if you cater to regular "trade."

Claire Whitney is an old favorite whose name mentioned with the title may attract them. Use the author's name and remind them of the stage play from which the screen version has been adapted. If you want to bring them in on the strength of the story, the Metro press sheet contains catchlines that can be used effectively. There are also further exploitation suggestions of which you can avail yourself.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Vaudeville team out of work plans Roman play which is shown bit by bit as they read the script

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 5,000 feet

All of Mack Sennett's best comedians, the appearance of the bathing girls in attractive costumes, and some lavish sets, do not make "Home Talent" the sort of comedy entertainment which is usually provided by and expected of this producer. Somehow or other this latest five reel comedy feature misses fire, and it seems hard to locate the reason for its failure to produce laughs. At any rate it doesn't.

And the Roman episode, which consists of several lavish sets and is fairly spectacular, falls in its burlesque of the Roman slave market. In this sequence James E. Abbe, a well known portrait artist, is given credit for the direction and photography. The settings are attractive and a large company is well handled. The scenes rather resemble some of those used in "A Small Town Idol."

Ben Turpin, Charlie Murray, Eddie Gribbon, James Finlayson and Kalla Pasha handle the comedy stunts, while Phyllis Haver has the feminine lead. The Sennett girls include Harriet Hammond, Mildred June and Kathryn McGuire. The best bit of amusement presented is in the Roman episode which gives a burlesque of an ancient Roman slave market. It would seem that the idea held forth better opportunities for comedy than have been secured. At any rate the laughs don't come spontaneously even in this sequence and the titles aren't up to the Sennett standard.

Murray plays the part of a landlord who cannot collect from a stranded vaudeville troupe. Other than to remind them of their rent, Murray hasn't much to do in "Home Talent." The title suggests a lot of fun in the way of amateur theatricals of the "Main St." variety, and that is all the more reason why "Home Talent" is apt to prove disappointing to the majority.

The picture opens with two vaudeville teams, out of work, deciding to combine their efforts in a play dealing with the ancient Roman slave market. They hold an impromptu rehearsal and then the actual play is visualized. These scenes done by James Abbe are attractive, and the composition is quite effective. In fact, the artistic quite overcomes the comedy element.

Will Show Up Better If Cut Considerably

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

After the laughs provided by "Love, Honor and Behave" and "A Small Town Idol," you cannot help but be disappointed with "Home Talent." Perhaps a final decision cannot be given from a showing given for reviewing purposes, but certainly everyone is human enough to want to laugh if they have something to laugh at, and you just can't laugh at "Home Talent." It would be well for both Associated and Mack Sennett if the picture were cut to a two or three reeler, eliminating much of the obvious padding which has been inserted to make it a feature. It hasn't feature possibilities, and especially coming after Sennett's last two, which were very much better, it's a big disappointment.

You had better use your own judgment with "Home Talent" because even one like this is apt to make it hard for you to convince them that you have a good one next time you announce a Sennett comedy. If, however, Associated cuts it to short reel length you need not hesitate, and the best of the burlesque sequence will likely please them.

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Artists’ model saves butterfly wife of man she loves from villain
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 5,000 feet

"Heedless Moths" offers a slight and conventional plot contrived in the main to permit Audrey Munson, a really famous artists' model, to display herself. The accent of the above sentence, be it said, belongs emphatically on the last syllable of the last word. The general public no longer is obliged to take the word of noted artists and sculptors that Miss Munson’s is the perfect figure. “Heedless Moths” brings everything out very clearly.

That the picture may possess commercial value and artistic merit are seemingly questions of minor importance; the big conundrum is “will the picture get by the censors?” There are some beautiful shots wherein she poses in the nude. But such beauty is not appreciated by those who censor the pictures of the screen. And it is needless to add that the close shot showing the Aphrodite depressions on either side of the base on Miss Munson's spinal column may be obliterated by the well known “film eraser.”

As for the story, it is trite. The beautiful, sensitive model, Miss Munson. The idealistic sculptor; his butterfly wife. The sculptor does a nude group working from the life. He and his model fall in love but it is a love not to be realized. In the meantime the butterfly wife has become emeshed in the nets thrown out by a dilettante artist. One night he pulls in the nets and the wife finds herself in his exotic apartment. Climax: the model realizes that the husband is searching for his wife. She breaks into the dilettante’s apartment, hides the wife and plays the role of the reveler, thus salvaging the domestic life of the man she loves. For the model, there is left—posing.

The continuity is only fair; but might seem better if the picture were run straightaway and not broken for stage effects as it is in its New York presentation.
Robert Z. Leonard’s direction at times discloses an artistic touch and the sets by A. Viragh Flower are very beautiful. Leonard, however, has done better work with a well oiled producing organization operating behind him.

Miss Munson receives acceptable support from Hedda Hopper, Holmes E. Herbert, Ward Crane, Irma Harrison and Tom Burroughs. The child actor is quite overconscious.

Value Depends on Censor’s Attitude and Character of Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The way for “Heedless Moths” has been paved with pages of publicity in the magazine sections of the Hearst papers and their allied syndicate organs.
There seems to be no doubt that if the exhibitor ties up his advertising of the picture with these articles
he will get the crowds coming in strong.

Providing the censors let the producers get by with all the scenes at present in the continuity, it will be possible for the exhibitor to truthfully advertise this as an “artistic production.” There is always the danger, however, of the nude arousing the wrath of the more straight-laced audiences. It can be said, though, in defense of the producers that there is nothing intentionally salacious or immoral about the picture.

So the course of the exhibitor is easy if he thinks his public will stand for all that may or may not be in “Heedless Moths” when it comes to him. The publicity received by the star will account for an immense curiosity on the part of a large slice of the public.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,279 feet

Edith Roberts’ latest starring vehicle for Universal offers a really novel little picture that contains considerable splendid artistic effort that isn’t always expended on features not included in the “super specials” list. Norman Dawn has provided Beatrice Grimshaw’s story with a charming sea atmosphere, that together with the appearance of the star, makes “Thunder Island” quite worth while.

The plot is along the lines of the well known pirate and buried treasure theme, which has already been done so many times that it’s hard to remember the number, but even though “Thunder Island” hasn’t anything very new or substantial to distinguish it as a story, the production given it practically covers up all other shortcomings that might otherwise make it commonplace.

The climax is not quite as forceful as most folks will expect it to be. There is considerable fighting, but it doesn’t seem big enough, and then too, it ends the story a bit abruptly even though it is opportune.

Miss Roberts is always pleasing as Isola Garcia, the Mexican girl, and in the first reel she plays a double role, that of brother and sister, in first rate fashion. There is one shot, probably double exposure, which is excellent. Others in the supporting cast are suitable and do adequate work.

Isola and her brother Juan tend sheep in the coast fields. One day Juan is killed by sheep thieves. Paul Corbin, a white man cruising along the coast in search of a buried chest of pearls, helps Isola to drive off the raiders. Corbin bids Isola good-bye, when the Don of the principality sends for Isola, the girl wife whom he had married two years before, when it was thought he was dying. The Don desired to leave his fortune to Isola. But he had recovered and was sending for the girl. Don Pio, the escort, in the meantime learns that the Don is really dead and plans to get Isola for himself. She escapes and goes aboard Corbin’s boat. Pio follows, but is overcome by Corbin, who has fallen in love with Isola.

If your folks like "pretty" pictures they'll be well satisfied with Edith Roberts' latest. It is really good to look at, and stills in the lobby will be certain to bring them inside to see more. Exhibitors who usually show Universal product and have played any recent pictures with Miss Roberts should please their audiences with "Thunder Island." The title may have some drawing power, but it isn't particularly pertinent, so you might use it in conjunction with the following: "Near the Gulf of California is a small island near which is buried a precious treasure. Edith Roberts will take you to 'Thunder Island' in her latest Universal picture."

Tell them about the dual role, showing pictures of the star as both brother and sister. If you can secure a short trailer to show prior to the regular showing, you will probably get them interested. The star's name will attract also.

CHARACTER OF STORY.......Author puts himself to the task of proving to a girl, unknown to her, that she will kiss him within a given time

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ............. 4,351 feet

From the very outset when you see the attractive heroine with a funny-looking face you know that it will be “The Kiss in Time” that will prevent her marriage to the unromantic looking, cold-in-the-head prospective. But how it will all happen is left to be told by Wanda Hawley, capably assisted by Walter Hiers and T. Roy Barnes, with a smaller contribution by Bertram Johns. The comedy business takes just a little too long to get started, but once on the right track, you are likely to be amused by a series of light comedy incidents that take place mostly in automobiles and in an attractive looking road house, called “Hustle Inn,” where the hero and heroine hustle out. Royal Brown’s story appeared in McClure’s as “From Four to Eleven Three.

It consists of unimportant occurrences that don’t amount to a row of pins of themselves, but director Heffron has put them nicely together, done some judicious padding that holds the attention over the less conspicuous places, and has secured players that put forth their best efforts to make you like it.

Perhaps the majority will not notice it, but there will be some who expect to have the hero win his case by dancing. He lists the qualifications expected by the heroine and crosses them off, one by one, as he fails. She had mentioned “dancing” and when they arrive at “Hustle Inn” it is natural to expect that his dancing will win her over—but they fail to step the light fantastic and hero is left to win the wager by accident. He rescues a little child from an explosion.

Sheila was an artist and Brian an author. Brian wrote a story about a girl who was wooed and won in four hours. Sheila refused to illustrate it because it was impossible for such a thing to happen, she said. Brian wagered that he could make her kiss him within four hours. His first step towards success is getting Sheila to go with him to an orchard where he shows her some beautiful blossoms. The atmosphere has no effect and they are forced to speed away to escape Bertie, a would-be detective hired by Sheila’s fiancé to protect her. Sheila and Brian hide in a roadhouse, are followed and escape. Brian has five minutes to go to win the wager. He saves a child from death by an explosion and is rewarded with a kiss. Of course Sheila acquires a new fiancé.

Star’s Name and Some Exploitation Should Suffice

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Realart is offering you another good summer number in “A Kiss in Time,” Wanda Hawley’s most recent feature. You have a good title to work with and one which suggests plenty of ideas for exploiting the picture. Secure a press sheet distributed by the producer and make use of the many ideas contained in it. A good variety of tie-ups and advertising hints will help you put the picture over. Tell them it is light comedy entertainment, and show some stills of Miss Hawley in her bobbed hair and also pictures of T. Roy Barnes and Walter Hiers, both familiar personages in comedies.

An effective prologue is outlined in the paper provided by Realart. If you go in for teaser advertising the title can be used to advantage. Say: “Sheila was engaged to an old fogey but see what happened by ‘A Kiss in Time,’ or others along those lines. A recently popular song hit “I Never Knew What a Kiss Could Do,” could be rendered during the showing with someone singing off stage.

"THE JOURNEY’S END"
Hugo Ballin Prod.—Hodkinson

DIRECTOR .................. Hugo Ballin
AUTHOR ..................... Sister Eileen
SCENARIO BY ................ Not credited
CAMERAMAN ................ J. Diamond

AS A WHOLE....... A sincere attempt to present a drama without words that would have proved successful minus considerable footage STORY....... Quite beautifully suggested and well acted; has rather unusual twist at close

DIRECTION.......Effective except that he dwells too long on each phase of the theme

PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Excellent
LIGHTINGS .................... Good
CAMERA WORK ............... Very good

PLAYERS.......The best performance contributed by George Bancroft; Mabel Ballin makes a serious effort but lacks facial expression; Wyndham Standing’s opportunities limited

EXTERIORS .................. Very pretty
INTERIORS ................... Satisfactory
DETAIL......................... More than is required

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Mill hand’s wife leaves her husband and later marries the owner when husband is reported killed

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 7,000 feet

Hugo Ballin’s third production has been adapted from a story written by a Dominican nun and called “Ave Maria.” The producer has set out to present a drama minus the usual sub-titles required to explain the action. In the main he has succeeded nicely in keeping it comprehensive, employing close-ups of letters to define some of the events, while flashes of a calendar indicate the passing time. But the extreme footage consumed in telling the story detracts more than a little from the complete success which the production might have attained. And there are moments, too, when for quite a stretch the spectator cannot grasp what is going on and the old sub-titles are really needed. This is especially true in the sequence showing the iron worker employed on a construction job, where he changes identity with a man who is killed.

The production values are excellent and considerable effort has been expended along artistic lines. Many fine touches in the telling of the story, done by suggestion, offer really worthy moments in the feature. On the whole the theme is not strictly original—the iron worker’s wife who falls in love with her husband’s employer and the subsequent reported death of the husband which allows her to remarry. On the other hand, the ending is perhaps a bit new. The remarried wife finds her former husband alive and living the life of a monk. But the conclusion would have been much more effective if about half the present footage were used to present it. It loses much of its force by being so long.

Quite the best acting in the piece is done by George Bancroft as the mill hand. He certainly makes a very real laborer and has a role that offers many fine opportunities. His characterization is first class. Mabel Ballin, who has been featured in previous productions made by Mr. Ballin, is adequate in the part of the wife, but would have made a finer impression if she would register some change in her facial expression. Throughout the picture she maintains an almost piously sorrowful countenance with the exception of one or two smiles. Wyndham Standing has little to do.

When the iron worker learns that his wife has gone away alone and not with the mill owner, instead of doing the natural thing, search for her, he allows it to become known that he is dead. In reality he goes to Rome and becomes a monk, where he dies some time later after seeing his wife on her honeymoon with her former admirer.

You Can Promise a Careful Production and a Novelty

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“The Journey’s End” will not only benefit by but requires cutting to make it get over. At a pre-release showing it ran ninety-five minutes. Reduced to six reels or even less it will prove more worth while. You have a novelty to offer in the fact that it contains no written-in sub-titles, excepting, of course, those lines presented in the form of letters. You have Hugo Ballin’s two previous productions, “Pagan Love” and “East Lynne,” to mention in conjunction with the showing of “The Journey’s End.”

You might interest a certain majority by announcing that the story is by a nun and originally called “Ave Maria.” In this connection you have a well-known sacred number which should form the basis of your musical accompaniment. Catchlines based on the unusual musical accompaniment. Stills in the lobby and exploitation generally should get them in.
Some Short Reels

"Flaming Ice"—National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel adventure scenic

"Flaming Ice" is a scientific scenic that presents an element of danger. The camera in this is turned upon a glacier, and there are many beautiful and descriptive shots that illustrate in detail the giant mass of ice and its crushing downward movement. The explorers are well fitted for the adventure, and take some chances when they lower themselves down on a crevice to get specimens and the photographs. There are some very lovely night scenes lit by torches whose flames are reflected in the ice. The negative is very skillfully dyed and as a whole presents a very realistic effect. It could, however, be greatly improved by judicious cutting.

"The High Rollers"—Pathe

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel comedy

Most of the fun in this comedy is obtained in a skating rink and from two boys dressed to resemble gorillas, who frighten the skaters. The comedy as a whole presents little that is really new in the field of screen humor, but it nevertheless moves along at a good pace. The pair of monkeys arrive on a boat and make their escape. They steal two pair of roller skates and skate into the rink. The rest is easy to imagine. The action of this reel is swift, and it is certain to get several good laughs though as a whole it is not far above an average comedy.

"Movie Chats"—No 56—Kineto Co.

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel magazine

This number of Charles Urban's Movie Chats contains some interesting shots and is well balanced. It opens with some views of Strassberg, the capital of Alsace-Lorraine, and turns the camera on the streets, squares, and canal of that quaint city. Gutenberg place and the monument to the inventor of movable type are both shown in the first part of this magazine. Girls in overalls are next shown picking fruit in California, "the vineyard of the world." The nature section of this magazine is devoted to large birds. There are some beautiful shots of cranes, falcons, hawks and eagles. The birds are shown eating their prey. In the last part of this reel the camera is turned upon the world of Spain attending the official enrolment of the Crown Prince in the army. The little Prince himself is shown kissing the flag and sword, and the army is then reviewed from the royal box in the field. The entire reel is well photographed and full of interest.

"The City of Algiers"—Burton Holmes—Paramount

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel travel

This reel combines scenic and travel. The city of Algiers, where the East and West meet, is shown in all its sunlight and splendor. Burton Holmes arrives at the harbor of this African city which was taken over by the French in 1830 and held ever since. Fishermen, harbarmen and life about the docks are all shown. The graded streets that lead to the freight docks are photographed before the camera is turned on the town itself. There is a French aspect to the streets of Algiers and a continental appearance to the cafes. The Grand Mosque and the whitewashed Mosque of the Fishermen are both brought into focus. The lower city with its European buildings is contrasted against the upper city with its narrow streets and general Eastern aspect. There are one or two splendid bits of photography in this section of the reel. The picture closes with several shots of the veiled women of Algiers going about their various tasks through the winding streets and arches of this interesting town.

"Golf"—Cinal-Educational

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel sport

If your folks have any sporting blood in their veins they will enjoy this slow motion analysis of the strokes of the game. The ball is struck first as the naked eye would see it, and then the speed is reduced and every detail of the stroke caught by the ultra-speed camera. The twist of the wrists is shown, the club face, the ball stroke and many other tricks of the game are clearly shown. When the speed of the ball is greatly reduced it can be seen as it leaves the club at the moment of compact. For a long time some experts have argued the length of the ball for six or eight inches after the ball is struck. But slow motion photography has now proved this to be an error. The ball leaves the club at the moment of impact and this is clearly shown in the above shots. The golf fans in your audience would enjoy and appreciate this sport picture and would be sorry to miss it if you overlooked it.

"Your Own Home"—Pollard—Pathe

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel comedy

The joys of suburban life and the inconveniences of a modern bungalow are all shown in this comedy. Leaky roofs, paper walls, quarrelsome neighbors, and house pets that can become pests all go to make up the fun in this slapstick comedy. Wind and rain effects are very well photographed and a good deal of the humor is obtained by allowing the roof to cave in and pouring streams of water on to the beds and furniture of the rooms. In the end the home owners decide to go out and spend the night in the garden for fear they will catch cold in the house. Although this comedy presents nothing that is very new it nevertheless will get several good laughs and for that reason would make a good program filler. The sets are well done and a good deal of attention has been paid to detail. Some trick photography too is effectively used to make the house shimmery when the fat woman dances.

"Annette Kellerman in High Diving"—Cinal-Educational

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel slow motion

Annette Kellerman does some fancy diving before the camera which is reduced to slow motion and every detail and grace clearly shown. Besides the ordinary and fancy dives Miss Kellerman does some under water swimming which is also reduced in speed and makes a lovely effect. Unfortunately the camera is turned against the light and in many places the shots appear not very clear. As a slow motion picture this reel is not up to the average either in interest or photography. A good deal of footage in this reel is wasted in an introduction and an epilogue which has little or nothing to do with the subject of diving.

Pathe Review No. 109

Type of production ........................................ 1 reel magazine

The greater part of this magazine is devoted to showing how radium is extracted from its ore, The various chemical processes are illustrated and the final product shown in its glass container. Some remarks regarding the extraction of this most precious element and its uses are included. The camera is next turned upon the screen. This section of the magazine is called "The Door That Has No Lock." The remainder is devoted to color illustrations of Japanese lilies, and a slow motion dance called "Swish swish." “Sneakers”—Christie—Educational
Type of production........................2 reel comedy

This is an average comedy production which holds the interest quite well, but presents little that is very new or very funny. A great many extras are used in the gambling house raid, which appears in the end of the first reel. The raid scenes are very effective and well done. The story is simple. Hubby receives a telephone call from the boys and tries to tell his wife that he must "stay up with Bill." His wife, however, keeps a card index and reminds hubby that according to his report a week ago Bill had died. Then she receives a phone call from one of her friends inviting her to visit a notorious gambling house and she steals out of the house. He too gets out, and they are both present when the house is raided but escape. After a good deal of difficulty they escape from the cops and steal back home, each believing that the other has remained in the house all night. In the end they discover that they have neglected the baby whom they fortunately find asleep with the dog. The action in this comedy is quite brisk and the interest well held throughout. The production as a whole is not much above the Christte average and certainly not up to his best.

“The Skylark”—Universal
Type of production........................1 reel comedy

This is an out-of-jail-and-run comedy. It presents nothing that is very new or original and the laughs are few and far between. The comedy is built on very old fashioned lines and runs through without a single surprise. The jail bird escapes at the very start of this reel, and the remainder of the footage is used up with the usual chase. Some trick photography is used and two or three street shots are registered. In the end an aeroplane chase is planted and the jail bird drops out and lands back into jail. A great many more laughs would have been obtained if the audience were not let into the secret of what the surprise is going to be. In almost every climax the trick leaks out and the thunder is lost before it gets the chance to develop.

“A Handy Husband”—Gayety—Educational
Type of production........................1 reel comedy

“A Handy Husband” is a single reel farce in which most of the fun is obtained from a pair of detachable mustaches. The story has been done so many times before that it is difficult to get a genuine laugh out of it. The young people run away from papa and are married in secret. Her brother arrives in town and the husband becomes very jealous, not knowing the relationship that exists between this man and his wife. The young husband then poses as the new butler using a pair of black mustaches to disguise his real identity. Sometimes the mustache is used for side whiskers and sometimes they become bushy eye brows. Each member of the household sees the butler looking differently until in the end the discovery is made. Henry Murdock, Teddy Samson and Thornton Edwards are featured in this single reel comedy. There are a few good exteriors in this reel, but the interiors, in which most of the action runs, are quite poorly put together.

“The Rim of the Desert”—Universal
Type of production........................2 reel western

For a western there is very little action in this one. The story too is not very convincing. Two young men are in love with the same girl, and in order to test their love, she says that she would marry the one who would first bring her a flower from the well in the center of the desert. Now such a test as this could prove woman’s endurance or a man’s willingness but hardly his love. It will be hard for an audience to swallow this pill. The two men start their ride across the desert for the flower, and during one night the bad man empties the other fellow’s canteen. The remainder of the story deals with the struggles of the hero in the desert. He looses his horse in a very realistic sand storm and chews up the earth as he lies dying of thirst. He is rescued by some mountain men and returns just as the bad man is about to claim the girl. Justice is then handed around—the hero gets the girl and the bad man receives a funeral. The director of this western certainly did not waste very much time with its production. Perhaps it could not have been helped very much anyway. The story is certainly not worthy of a better production.

“Man vs. Woman”—Christie—Educational
Type of production........................2 reel comedy

This is an average Christie comedy of the slap stick variety. It moves along quite rapidly and presents the usual amount of laughs. Although this comedy is not below the average Christie production, it is certainly not up to Christie’s best. The comedy is based on the cave-man theme. Jimmie, the hero, finds that his girl pays him little attention, and he proceeds to follow a tip and "treat 'em rough." Real cave-man sunglasses and a Great Ape are used, and the average audience is given a quick look at the origin of man. The story is not very complicated, and the comedy is quite good. The production of this reel is entirely above average and is comprised of very little footage, the sets are excellent, and the photography is very good. Perhaps a bit too many laughs are used but it is certainly worthy of the attention of the average audience. This is a very good comic production and one that is certainly worth the price of admission.

“Movie Chats”—No. 49—Kinetoscope
Type of production........................1 reel magazine

This opens with views of a new method of picking cranberries. No longer are they gathered one by one in a long tedious process, but are combed from the ground with a device that rakes and gathers the berries. The camera then goes back several years to record an event of history. The crowd in front of the opera house in Paris on Armitage day is shown dragging the trophies of war through the streets. The scientific section of this reel deals with the raising of turtles for the market, and the gathering of sap from maple trees in Vermont. A fly catching plant is shown in operation. The leaves are clamped shut and are provided with interlocking thistles. The leaves remain open and are lined with a sweet liquid to attract the fly. As soon as the fly enters it is certain to touch one or more of the three sensitive nerves and quickly as a flash the halves close tightly as a clamp. The body of the fly is absorbed in a remarkable digestive system possessed by the plant. This wonder of nature is certain to please and amuse any audience. Several oriental views are sandwiched into this magazine to round out the balance. Port Said, the Mediterranean entrance to the Suez Canal, is shown, and camel transportation in Egypt also appears in this.

“The Fox”—Pathé
Type of production........................1 reel adventure scenic

Bob and Bill appear in this red-blood outdoors scene, and demonstrate to the city folk how a trap for a fox is set. The trap is planted in a hole filled with clay, and to make sure that it springs fully it is wrapped in wax paper which protects the trap from the clay and is easily broken through by the foot of the unlucky animal. Before the trap catches its prey Bill and Bob decide to get as close to nature as they can; accordingly they discard their clothes and jump in for a swim. But the old farmer gives chase and in the end the dog recovers the clothes for the boys. Then they revisit the trap and find that it holds a grey fox. After a while they decide to give the beast its liberty and the frightened creature dashes off the screen. There are some very good locations caught in this adventure scene and some nice photography, and what is more important, it is clean and amusing.

weekly hopes for a postponement of American exports against the importation of foreign films on a large scale, the editor is in part read: "Our own attitude in this matter is international free trade in films as in every other industry, and in any consideration of the problem it should not be forgotten that the first interest to be considered is not that of the producer public. American Owned Pathe

Present American Stockholders and Management to Acquire Control of Pathe Company

In one of the most important motion picture transactions in recent history, American stockholders and management of Pathe Exchange, Inc., have just acquired control of the $7,000,000 Pathe company from Pathe Cinema, Ltd., of Paris.

Announcement to this effect was made in a cable from Paul Brunet, who has been arranging the details of the transaction with the officials of Pathe Cinema, Ltd., in Paris.

Charles Pathé retains a large share of stock in the American concern.

The transaction means that hereafter the American stockholders of Pathe Exchange, Inc., will direct the policies of the organization. There will be no change in the general policies, but there is indicated a broadening of its activities.

The policy rigidly adhered to since its inception of remaining out of the field of theater ownership will continue to be implicitly followed by Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Brunet was accompanied abroad by Edmund C. Lynch, of 120 Broadway, who heads the group of American stockholders taking over the majority interest in the Pathe American company, and Paul Fuller of Courbet Brothers, each of whom has been a member of the Board of Directors for five years. Mr. Lynch is associate, Charles Merrill, also has been a stockholder for five years. Bernard C. Wasser, vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is associated with Lynch and Merrill.

Brunet will leave France probably in a month from now, and on his arrival here is expected to give full particulars of the whole transaction. It is known that Brunet will continue as president.

It is understood that the employees of Pathe will have more voice in the actual direction of the affairs of Pathe Exchange, Inc., under the plans formulated by Mr. Brunet when he left for Paris with the idea of consummating the transaction just concluded.

St. Louis Exhibitors Ask Why F. P.-L. Can't Show Own Pictures in Their Theaters

The following letter signed “the small exhibitors of St. Louis” has been received by this office:

“Open Eyes”

“We would like to find out what is wrong with Famous Players-Lasky pictures, why can’t they run their own make of pictures in their theaters instead of trying to show pictures a theater with a seating capacity of 2,000.

“We will appreciate an answer in one of our daily papers.”

John C. Flinn of Famous Players-Lasky, who has been rather actively identified with the operation of the company’s theaters in St. Louis, has sent this letter. He operated the theatre immediately when a complaint was made.

It has not been reviewed prior to exhibition by any officer of the Famous Players-Missouri Corp., but was booked on the representation that it had been favorably received elsewhere.

“Open Your Eyes” played at the theater several days, but no complaints were made against it. It was withdrawn immediately, however, by the local management as soon as the attitude of the National Association of the M. P. Industry toward this picture became known to the local management.

Neither of these pictures will be played in any other of the houses of the Famous Players-Missouri Corp.”

Warns America
Weekly Hopes for Retaliation Foreign Producers Are Prejudiced Against (Special to WID’S DAILY, London—Kinematograph Weekly) Daily discusses the attitude of film people in America regarding the protection of American films against the importation of foreign films on a large scale. Publication which may be authoritative reflects the opinion of a large part of the British film industry that British theaters should show only films imported from countries which do not seek protection itself. It adds that America may expect retaliation for its own measures in favor of its own producers. —

A ‘16 “Muskeeters”
Dumas Story Made for Triangle Being Reissued—Tom Ine Supervised It.
Old timers in the film business recall that an American version of Alexandre Dumas’ famous story, “The Three Musketeers,” was shown in this country in 1916.

It developed yesterday that the picture was made by the New York Motion Picture Corp., one of the “angels” of Triangle, as the Syndicated and, supervised by Thomas H. Ince. The picture, while in the working was called by its original title the release title was “D’Artagnan.” It was made in 1915 in California and released through Triangle in 1916.

American Owned
Present American Stockholders and Management Acquire Control of Pathe Exchange, Inc.
In one of the most important picture transactions in recent years, American stockholders and American management of Pathe Exchange, Inc., have just acquired control of the $7,000,000 Pathe Exchange, Ltd., of Paris.
Announcement to this effect was made here from Paul Brunet, who has been arranging the details of the transaction with the officials of Pathe Cinema, Ltd., in Paris.
Charles Pathe retains a large share of stock in the American concern.
The transaction means that hereafter the American stockholders of Pathe Exchange, Inc., will direct the policies of the organization. There will be no change in the general policy, but the agreement indicated a broadening of its activities.
The policy rigidly adhered to since its inception of remaining out of the field of theater ownership will continue to be implicitly followed by Pathe Exchange, Inc.
Brunet was accompanied abroad by Edmund C. Lynch, of 120 Broadway, who heads the group of American stockholders taking over the majority interest in the Pathe American company, and Paul Fuller of Goudert Brothers, each of whom has been a member of the Board of Directors for five years. Mr. Lynch will associate, Charles Merrill, also has been a stockholder for five years. Bernard Benson, vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is associated with Lynch and Merrill.
Brunet will leave France probably in a month from now, and on his arrival here is expected to give full particulars of the whole transaction.
It is known that Brunet will continue as president of the company.
It is understood that the employees of Pathe will have more voice in the actual direction of the affairs of Pathe Exchange, Inc., under the plans formulated by Mr. Brunet when he left for Paris with the idea of consummating the transaction just concluded.

St. Louis Exhibitors Ask Why F. P. L. Can't Show Own Pictures in Their Theaters

The following letter signed "the small exhibitors of St. Louis" has been received by this office:

"Enclosed you will find clipings which speak for themselves. Can you tell the exhibitors of St. Louis why one of the largest firms disregards the law? After they stopped them from showing 'Temptation' they put on another picture equally as bad, 'Open Your Eyes.'

"We would like to find out what is wrong with Famous Players-Lasky pictures, why can't they run their own make of pictures in their theaters instead of trying to show pictures that are immoral?"

"We will appreciate an answer in one of your daily papers."

John C. Finn of Famous Players-Lasky could not be reached after he had identified himself with the operation of the company's theaters in St. Louis, has sent this office the following wire: "Immediately on arrival here, I investigated the report of the booking of pictures called 'Temptation' and 'Open Your Eyes' in the Royal. 'Temptation' played St. Louis three years ago and was rebooked at the Royal, but withdrawn immediately when a complaint was made. It has not been reviewed prior to exhibiting by any officer of the Famous Players-Missouri Corp. It was booked on the representation that it had been favorably received elsewhere.

"Open Your Eyes' played at the theater several days, but no complaints were made against it. It was withdrawn immediately, however, by the local management as soon as the attitude of the National Association of the M. P. Industry toward this picture was made known to the local management. Neither of these pictures will be played in any other of the houses of the Famous Players-Missouri Corp."

Want to See Books
new's Oppose Application by Rivas of 'Frisco Claiming Confusion Will Result Litigation in San Francisco between the Loew’s and Rivas, and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Rivas over the sale by the latter of valuable interests on the Pacific Coast, has been transferred unexpectedly to New York through the signing here of an application by Mrs. Loew and Leopold Friedman, secretary of Loew’s, to vacate an order for the inspection of the books account of Loew’s, Inc., and of correspondence with the Rivas, to which the trial in San Francisco was fixed. It is understood that no evidence will be taken.

The facts of the case as stated in an affidavit of Mr. Friedman are that the Rivas are going out of business and, under the terms of a contract, are scheduled to sell in several weeks. It is expected that the Loew books will be examined.

The original consideration for the sale, the Rivas interests was $212,000.00, but the contract stipulated that $35,000 will be held until October 15, and the other $177,000 will be held in trust in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Rivas. The court has ordered that the Rivas assign to Loew’s, Inc., all their holdings in corporations operating theaters on the Pacific Coast, and half their stock in the Hippodrome at Los Angeles, in order to Loew’s to operate the Hippodrome.

The above mentioned offer was made to Mr. Friedman, the plaintiff. Mr. Friedman has the plaintiff’s attorney who will handle the case.

Producer Censor
Being Talked Of in Albany—Many Candidates for the Board of Censor
(Special to W.D.S. DAILY)
Albany—That there will be a producer among the moving picture censors to be named by Governor Miller is the prediction which now is being freely made in political circles here. The explanation in connection with this viewpoint is that in order that the work of censoring the films for production in this state be done efficiently and with expedition it will be necessary for the industry to have a technical knowledge of the motion picture industry.

It is the belief of the three persons who are to hold the silent drama in the hallowed of their hands, as it were, have been expected for weeks. The delay in selecting the appointees has been due to the large number of candidates and the determination of the Governor to pick a trio who will be able to advance the motion picture industry and to the public as well, it is pointed out.

A Hit at the N. Y. Strand

Picture delights big crowds at Broadway House—praised by critics for excellent entertainment, tense drama, fine acting and direction

Read what the New York Morning Telegraph says:

"Excellent dramatic entertainment, tense dramatic scenes following one another rapidly. Melodrama all the way through except a slight touch of comedy here and there. It holds the interest with really fine scenes and acting that is decidedly praiseworthy. Miss Stewart does exceedingly well and there is a capable supporting cast and able direction."

"THE GOVERNESS"

(SIX REELS)

The negatives of these two features are hereby offered for sale for the territory of United States and Canada.

It can be unqualifyingly stated that this is the first time since the tremendous ovation given this incomparable screen artist that any production featuring Pola Negri has been offered to the independent National distributor.

What the magical name of Pola Negri means to the exhibitor needs no "sales arguments" nor expressions of creative imagination from the facile pen of the advertising writer.

Her nationally acclaimed work in "Passion" and "Gypsy Blood" heralds her a box office attraction second to none. (The exhibitor who disavows this is rare.)

The distributor will be able to purchase these two features at a price that will permit him to sell the territorial exchange man at a figure beyond any competition with any Pola Negri production distributed in the past or scheduled for release in the future.

The terms are cash, and negotiations will be conducted with principals only.

Screenings arranged for in order of application.

Zukor Promises

To Change Conditions With Regard to Operations of Black and Others Involved in Difficulties With Small Exhibitors —Will Go to Minneapolis—Debate Between President of Famous Players and Senator Walker Representing M. P. T. O. of A. With Marcus Loew Joining In

As the net result of a discussion which raged all yesterday afternoon at the Astor, Adolph Zukor promised to give his personal attention to change conditions as reported to him where Alfred S. Black and employees of Famous Players were operating in a manner to the detriment of the small exhibitors of this country. He also promised to attend the annual convention of the M. P. T. O. of America at Minneapolis next week.

The affair was staged by the T. O. C. C. and Senator James Walker, who has recently toured the country, and who, a week or so ago, made various charges affecting Famous Players, followed Mr. Zukor in the discussion. Before it was completed, however, Marcus Loew joined in. At the conclusion of the affair when asked if he intended going to Minneapolis Loew said: "Try and keep me away."

The general consensus of opinion was that the discussion had done much to clear the atmosphere, and it was predicted that there would be a great deal more cleared up in Minneapolis.

Standing room was at a premium and the largest attendance of the T. O. C. C. was recorded. Several out of town exhibitors were there, including Whitehurst of Baltimore, Anderson of Paterson, Linton of Utica, and just when the debate started, Marcus Loew arrived and was followed by Ben Moss.

From the moment President Brandt rapped for order things started. He explained how Mr. Zukor asked for an invitation to appear before the organization, and said that in the interests of fair play and after discussing the matter with several members the invitation was forwarded. Immediately Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State League, asked for a point of information and wanted to know whether, instead of discussing the matter in the presence of the New York exhibitors, Mr. Zukor would say whether or not he intended going to Minneapolis, to the national convention.

To this Zukor arose and declared that he was a New York man and wanted to be set right in New York. Several members jumped to their feet, Louise Blumenthal appealing that Mr. Zukor be heard. In the midst of the discussion, Brandt rapped sharply and said, "Mr. Zukor will now speak." And Mr. Zukor spoke.

Zukor started by declaring that he had no axe to grind, and desired only to explain the motives that had prompted him since he had started in the motion picture business, declaring that from time to time his motives had been misconstrued.

"I want to place my motives before you," he said. "A lot has been printed and a lot said." From then on he traced the history of the picture business from the time he saw a "flickering" picture in Harry Davis' Penny Arcade in in Pittsburgh, and went into great length relative to the early days of the industry finally reaching the point where he said:

"A rival company made up of a number of exhibitors made all kinds of tempting offers to my stars." He said that Fox, Goldwyn and Rowland, and the brother with other producers were at a meeting in San Francisco, where (Continued on Page 2)
Zukor Promises
they urged these exhibitors not to use results and that the following morning he found two of these exhibitors in a dressing room of Douglas Fairbanks. This was the first time he had ever heard of this and he declared: "I had worked hard. The only thing that I could do was to secure theaters to make sure that my product would be shown there."

"I never intended to or do not intend to run theaters for any purpose. I run theaters for one purpose and that is to insure the release of my product."

He declared that the statement made that he was seeking to "trustify," the business was a proposition.

"This statement was made with a purpose. He said, "What is the purpose of the men who are trying to malign me? They have called me a liar and a crook, and said that I have secret agents after theaters."

"I'm not seeking this business, but unless we can get together on legislation and see how we can protect our business, what is going to happen?"

When he reached the case of Mrs. Pauline Dodge, Zukor, with arms lifted, appealed for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the charges made with reference to methods being used to obtain theaters. He said that voice baying with emotion and with his arms apparently held before him, Zukor said, "Don't try to sacrifice me. I have spent the best years of my life building this business and I have my reputation at stake. I have my family to consider. Nobody has ever charged me before me crooning anyone. I am not a fit man to be in this business, then I will get out."

"I think too much of the picture industry. My record is clean, I will abide by the decision of any fair-minded committee."

Later he said with regard to the so-called "gang," after saying: "I can't believe the influence that Famous Players had with banks. "Banks are not played with like children. The fact that the studio is interested in making money is due to the fact that they are not interested in making money.

"These are a few of the factors that we want to do the best we can even as a matter of insurance to this business."

"The Public is bilingious on pictures. Next Fall business may not be better than it is now. We have got to make the very best pictures in the most economical way."

"The fact that we are keeping the studio open in this troublesome time is only another indication proving my faith. I have been here 18 years.

"In closing he declared that he was not trying to apologize to them, as he was trying to make the industry as receptive as possible.

"He reiterated the necessity for co-operation in the industry standing together, and then closed.

Leo Brocher, Senator Walker was asked to take the floor.

Walker Forceful
As usual he was forceful and dramatic. At the start he commanded applause by declaring that he was taking his place with the "continuance of the motion picture industry."

He said that his presence was practically demanded at the luncheon as much as he could not secure a postponement of the event until after the Minneapolis meeting, and this despite the obvious necessity for him to be present in view of an important hearing scheduled for a period of two weeks. He agreed with reference to tanks on theater roofs, affecting 14 theaters.

He said he had made no charges of specific wrong doing, but he declared would have made a success in any business he entered. "I have never heard such pleading, never have heard of such a good case out of a bad one as he has done," he said.

"And in a copy of "Progress-Advances," the Paramount house organ, dated Nov. 3, 1918, and declaring this fact couldn't be understated, he read from an article signed by Zukor, in which was expressed: "I don't think we have had any question of the good faith of the industry. This is the co-ordination of producers.

"It is the good cause of the last few days," declared Walker, "but it isn't always so good in these days." He said: "There is always some that exists today. Exists in Famous Players, declares that Zukor is short of $2,000,000 in the operation of the theaters."

Then he read from another article, which stated: "In a recent list of 135 theaters in the South, that Famous had loaned the money to operate which you may have felt to be a theater company—large sums; that Famous had loaned the theaters and the houses in the Black organization in New England."

"He returned to the question of why Zukor would not go to Minneapolis, instead of asking and trying to get a favorable demand to know: 'What fair play is he trying to have by being here in Minneapolis? You may truss the trade journals and the newspapers which you may have to look for my name,' said Walker, then went into details of the case of Mrs. Dodge. Reiterating the well known case and demanded at the finish: 'If you had to pick on someone out of the group, pick out a little widow woman who operated a house with 150 seats for 10 years and you pick out someone worthy of your size?'

Later he said: "Which can these men here represent? They represent a man who is not interested in the interest of the men. They represent a man who is not interested in the interest of the men. And, Mr. Zukor, you don't understand the purport of the words I have been using."

"One slogan is "injury to one is an injury to all. Don't forget Mr. Zukor, that while you had your graces, Mrs. Dodge is having hers now. Every one of you men here should go on every night and thank Sydney Cohen for what he has done for her, even at the sacrifice of his own affairs."

This brought tremendous applause. Following this Walker went into details of the Schwartz case and the Loew Opera House, General Manager of the Willamantic, Conn. where he charged that Alfred S. Black had succeeded in securing the lease and forced Schwartz out of business.

Walker, all through this portion of his speech, declared that he was not attempting to secure his charge, but as it is usual custom, interspersed his speech with remarks of his own. He continually stated that of all the charges Zukor could not hold Zukor as an individual responsible for all the occurrences. He said that Zukor's prestige and authority as president was the several theaters. His house was forced to purchase Metro to offset it.

At the conclusion of Walker's speech, Cohen spoke a few words and then said: "This is the last period of the association. Cohen had bought Paramount Pictures, and was to be seen in a direct competition with Mr. Zukor. He stated that Zukor's representatives included.

Mr. Zukor in his reply said: "I make a definite promise to the gentlemen, all that of these charges be investigated. Of a great many people know nothing, but of others entirely unfamiliar.

It is hereby announced all responsible members of the Famous Players Corp. I was promised you in this District do not want to make money at it."

Zukor's remarks were signaled by a statement made by Mr. Cohen. Brandt spoke a few words and then said: "We Cohen made a few remarks, stated that he was forced to purchase Metro to offset it. At the conclusion of Cohen's speech, Cohen spoke a few words and then said: "I am here of a plan advanced to Loew by Mr. Black to help the industry."

theaters for a consolidated exhibitor if necessary.

Loew then spoke and said that he had entered production not to offset Famous shows, but all producers. He went into a full and frank exposition of the difficulties in extending the demand for films and how important it was for all producers to work for a solution of all problems.

"This is not a black plan," Loew said, "but when Black failed to do, something must be done. We are going to present a plan of our own." He then referred to the Black plan, said that Loew said he told Black "It couldn't be done. "Not with me," Loew said he told Black. Loew made some additional remarks about the situation, but all producers are in agreement that there is a need for a solution.

Cohen of New York, who was present at the meeting, said that Cohen told his representatives that they should be prepared to meet with the producers and work out a solution to the problems of the industry.

Cohen added that he hoped that the producers would continue to work together in order to find a solution to the problems of the industry.

Billy Brandt, president of the T.

said yesterday that he felt that a geal of good had been accomplished by the Tuesday luncheon when Adolph Zukor and Senator James Walker participated in a discussion relative to Famous Players' theater activities.

Brandt said that he believed the atmosphere had been materially closed and that he believed the discussion had opened the way to the Minneapolis convention proceedings with the regular routine of business, spending a long time on the question of Famous Players' theater activities.

Reports were circulated before and after the luncheon that efforts were being made to prevent Zukor from making any address whatsoever and that marked pressure had brought upon Brandt to bring this about. Brandt refused to discuss this report yesterday.

It is understood that Brandt will not attend the convention.

Lowe Talks
Says Unless Allied "Lab." Members Cease "Foolishness" They Will Drive Brulatour Into Game
Albright T. Lowe, personal representative of J. E. Brulatour, recently talked with the traffic men with reference to the laboratory situation.

After going over the situation and referring to the Eastman Kodak Company reduced price of raw stock during the war, he took up various other points of the controversy now up.

He stated that he was absolutely certain that Mr. Brulatour was not at the present time connected in any way with the laboratories anywhere.
He said that over a year ago he had own stock in the Paragon, but the Paragon was now controlled by Wm. A. Brady.

He stated that it was his personal belief that unless the laboratory men stopped their "foolishness" that they would drive Brulatour into the laboatory business.

He accused Republic and Craftsman of stirring up all the trouble and said that it was easy because those two and Ehrub in were the only ones in the city that were making money. He said the others were starving, and that they were willing to

He said that the best reason to

Newspaper Opinions

The Golom—Controlled by Hugo Fox

HERALD—In fact, it might be called a Babe Ruth among photoplays. In its growth the more or less similar, but even “fuzzier,” while it has some of the qualities that are characteristic of the old-style tales, it has none of the grimness and the realistic backgrounds that are the marks of the kind of story that a picture of this type is bound to attract. The story is a combination of exceptional acting and grotesque in this country.

WORLD—The great trick in the production, of course, is to make the grim rather than grotesque. He succeeds in this almost entirely, as the story, shot on an excellent set, becomes more like the big chief out of a tobacco ad. The supporting cast is consciously inferior.

AMERICAN—This is the most important “mon-” story I have ever sampled. Even poor old Frankenstein, the most quoted monster in the world, will make a box seat.

TRIBUTE—Paul Wegener directed the picture, and he played the title role and it is a marvellous piece of work. The story is beautifully photographed.

GLOIRE—Original in conception and stupendous in execution is the new foreign picture.

MAIL—It is not too much to say that “The Golom” is one of the most original and perfect pictures ever produced. The magic of the actors, the exciting story, the entirely new, has rarely been equalled and the entire production the work of an artist.

SUN—It is a screen masterpiece and should run many weeks at this Broadway picture single.

JOURNAL—The picture is legend and it should be seen now. The acting and the lighting and backgrounds are in fine accord with the story. One should see it.

DAILY NEWS—The recent release of rather restricted appeal, with more racial than universal significance; a series of highly unusual settings, and acting, mainly by Herr Wegener himself, that stands out in bold relief against the ordinary run.

Howells Sales Has Two for Independent Market—J. A. Levinson Two More

The Howells Sales Co., Inc., has two Pola Negri pictures available for the independent market. They are, "Vendetta" and "Intrigue." The first was made in Corsica and the second is a story of Paris. D. P. Howells was instrumental in bringing "Passion" and "Gypsy Blood" to America.

With the release of these pictures the Howells Sales Co., Inc., has adopted a policy under which pictures will be offered to the independent buyer based entirely on the merits. The plan is to build a permanent states rights organization. They say they do not expect to make a fortune on each production which they handle, but merely a fair profit based on the actual cost of the picture to them.

In other words, if they are fortunate enough to obtain the rights to a big picture at a low price, they will in turn pass that low price on to the independent territorial buyer instead of putting a price on the production that is all the traffic will bear.

J. A. Levinson of 1600 Broadway also has two Negri pictures which he is offering for sale. They are "Infatuation," or the Polish Dancer" and "The Governess." The first is in five reels and the second in six.

A Thought

 Writes Cruickshank of the Screen Sketching Service, 145 W. 45th St.:

"A suggestion—why don't some enterprising man in the motion picture field get together and organize an independent exchange for the marketing and releasing of animated cartoon products?

"The animated cartoon has been a neglected possibility and its ramifications have never yet been adequately exploited.

"The fat producer has done nothing to keep it on the program, while the exhibitor and the movie fan have continually howled for the pen-drawn picture.

"There are high class artists who can make up this brand of stuff, also animation studios fully equipped for producing purposes.

"Surely the time has arrived for a live exchange to handle this class of animated material. The animated cartoonist would then have a market place."

No Let-Up

Reelcraft Studios to Show No Sign of Abating—Mirth, Aladdin and Sarg Almanac

"Despite the intentions of a number of prominent producers and distributors to temporarily curtail their production plans during the summer months, we are happy to announce that we will continue the production of comedy vehicles with the same energy which has characterized our production efforts in the past."

Thus did R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft, yesterday set at rest unfounded rumors which have gained currency of the reported suspension of production activities of the three units now engaged in the production of Mirth, Sun-Life and Aladdin comedies.

"Our distributing schedule at the present time," said Cropper, "calls for the release of a single one-reel comedy and a two-reel comedy each week, making for a total of 104 releases a year. In order to be assured of a steady output we are at present more than two months ahead of our releasing schedule. In addition to this, our studio in Yonkers is operating with three different companies, and contrary to the usual summer policy, there will be no stoppage in production. Our orders at the studios have already been issued and they read, 'Full steam ahead.'"

Sun-Life comedies have added Boothe Burns and Jobyna Ralston to the company.

Sees Bright Future

The independent market faces the brightest prospects it has known in years, according to Nat Levine of Plymouth Pictures, Inc. Plymouth Pictures, Inc., plan to release a minimum of six films before the close of the present year, three of which have already been acquired.

We know that’s unusual in the motion picture business, but that is the policy we have adopted and we intend to stick to it. That’s why when we tell you that we are offering Pola Negri in two of her greatest pictures, Vendetta and Intrigue, we expect you to believe what we say and believing — act. These two pictures have greater dramatic value — greater audience value and show more of the ‘dynamic beauty of Pola Negri’ than anything yet seen. You will clean up on them and so will your exhibitors. We believe Pola Negri to be the greatest emotional actress in the world today and Vendetta and Intrigue prove our contention. We are offering these two pictures together for outright sale on terms that will surprise you, they will be snapped up like wildfire. We have set a price on them that represents our cost plus a reasonable profit, and if you offered ten times what we are asking, we would have the courage to refuse. We are in business for more than making money on one or two pictures — we intend to build a permanent states rights organization of stability and responsibility to both the states rights buyer and the independent producer. We have one price and it is the same price to everybody.

Uran Challenges Offers S. R. Kent His Mattoon Theaters as a Price Test—Kent Delers Answering
(Special to WID’S DAILY)
Mattoon, Ill.—B. F. Uran, manager of the Grand and “K” theaters who is involved with Famous Players over the policy of that organization with regard to the rentals and the advertising of Paramount Pictures here, as he saw WID’S DAILY’s reply to the answer made by Sidney R. His reply in full follows: “I believe I am entitled to reply to a statement of perverted ‘facts’ made by Mr. Kent of Famous Players in WID’S DAILY of June 17, with reference to the ‘Mattoon case.’

‘With reference to the attempt made by Gerald Akers, Paramount’s St. Louis manager (now assistant general manager), to buy controlling interest in my theaters, it is a matter for exhibitors to ponder whether or not Paramount’s hirings are buying theaters unassisted by Paramount.

“My grievance against Paramount has been and is based upon the spurious advertising campaign they are carrying on in Mattoon in order to force me to buy their pictures at prices that I cannot afford to pay.

Cohen Has Checks Says M. P. T. O. May Not Accept Zukor Tender—Minneapolis
Sydney S. Cohen, of the M. P. T. O., said yesterday before leaving for Minneapolis, that his organization was in receipt of two checks for $5,016.53, drawn on behalf of Mrs. Pauline Dodge and H. Schwartz, who had drawn them to cover the damages Mrs. Pauline Dodge and H. Schwartz had estimated was caused them by Famous Players—Lasky and Alfreid S. Black. He added that the tender made by Zukor may not be accepted by the organization, and said the matter will be discussed at Minneapolis by the executive committee and perhaps, the exhibitor body as well.

It was first announced that Zukor had sent the checks direct to Mrs. Dodge at Morrisville, Vt., and to Schwartz at Wilimantic, but Cohen said yesterday they were drawn on behalf of the M. P. T. O. and were in payment.

The check to Mrs. Dodge’s claims was for $5,016.53 divided as follows: for less of theater $2,000 and for expenses incurred in fighting the case, $3,016.53; to Schwartz, $3,000 for the loss of the theater and $500 for legal fees.

Two Big Ones 1st Nat'l-Tully Deal Closed for “The Masquerader” and “Omar The Tentmaker”

Omar the Tentmaker” and “The Masquerader,” the two Richard Walton Tully plays in which Guy Bates Post has scored unbroken success for almost a decade, are to be produced for Associated First National. The deal between Tully, and First National has been completed and work on "Omar the Tentmaker," which will be the first to be released is already under way.

Guy Bates Post will be starred in both productions, which will be made by James Young with the personal assistance of Mr. Tully, who wrote and directed the plays for the legitimate stage.

These productions will mark the advent of Tully, who also wrote "The First National," and that of Post as screen star.

New Arc Lamp 40 Percent Increase in Light Gained by New Device Using Less Amperage
The new arc lamp, made for Powers by the General Electric Company, threatens to replace all other known devices and eliminate many arc problems.

The new lights have now been working for over a week in the projection booth of the Central where "A Connecticut Yankee" is being shown. About a 40 per cent increase in light is effected by the use of this new lamp. This results in a clearer and sharper picture on the screen, and entirely does away with that black haze called the "ghost."

The new lamp uses pencil carbons of the regular type only it rotates the carbon with the crater at a uniform speed. This is accomplished by a separate worm drive motor secured under the self feeding device. In this manner the shape of the crater is preserved throughout the entire length of the carbon. Not only has a stronger light been obtained, but a saving in “juice” has also been found to result. While the lights placed in the above theater continued from 90 to 100 amperes the new Powers-G. E. uses but 70.

The operators at the Central, T. Ridder and M. Smith, are very enthusiastic regarding this new device that they are using in their machines.

What’s Blackton’s Deal? Reports from London have it that Commodore Blackton has consummated an important deal covering the future activities of J. Stuart Blackton, the company he formed when he left this country to start work on the first of the Lady Diana Manners pictures.

In the Courts

The fact that Abraham L. Eulner and Marc Klaw have come to an agreement by which their right to produce "Ben Hur" has been eliminated from the accounting suit between them now pending in the courts was made known in the Supreme Court recently when Justice Whittaker on the application of both parties signed a stipulation that Mr. Klaw's allegations as to his interest in the film were withdrawn from his answer to Eulner's suit.

An affidavit by the parties to the suit stated that they had made an agreement with the estate of Lew Wallace, and Harper & Bros., concerning the picture rights to "Ben Hur." This agreement was necessary before the film rights to the famous play could be sold.

F. U. Nash has written this office as follows:

"Regarding an article appearing in your paper in the early part of May, of Nash vs. Cameron in the courts, allow me to state that this action was started by me on information which has since been proven to me as misleading and untrue, and naturally I have withdrawn the case. I am offering this to you to vindicate Mr. Cameron in this matter, and in justice to him would ask you to publish this matter."

A suit for $400,000 damages has been filed in the Bronx Supreme Court by Mr. Morrissey against N. Sohmer and Daniel Morris against the Wardin Co., Inc., relative to the lease on the open air theater and stores at 107th St. and Webster Ave.

In the suit of Vario Films against Arthur F. Beck and Sidney Garrett a demurrer has been filed in the Supreme Court by counsel for Beck alleging that the complaint does not state a cause of action against him.

The suit brought against the American Cinema Corp. by the Ritchey Lithographing Corp. through a mis-understanding has been satisfactorily adjusted.

The Best Hot Weather Picture You Can Get

—Detroit Free Press

Critics Tell How Crowds at Madison Theatre, Detroit, Rock With Laughter Over Hilarious Situations

ROCK WITH LAUGHTER

"Jackie Coogan's pranks provide the fun in this hilarious comedy. The crowds at the Madison theatre rocked with laughter throughout the 70 minutes. As a hot weather picture this is hard to beat. The titles, the work of Irvin S. Cobb, the well known humorist, add greatly to the enjoyment."—Detroit Free Press.

THE BEST ONE YET

"I assert flatly that Jackie Coogan in 'Peck's Bad Boy' is the most refreshing young person I have ever encountered. Aged 6, he puts to shame some 15 comedians whose combined ages total 600. His artlessness is art—his mischievousness is masterly. If you have youth, celebrate it now. If you had youth, wander back through the years for an hour or so and prank with Jackie."—Detroit Journal.

EVERYONE LIKES HIM

"It adds to the merriment of the world. The offering is undeniably amusing and made so by the unconscious artistry of Jackie. He plays his part with the poise and dexterity of a matured actor. His face is pleasing in the extreme and he just naturally reaches across the screen and claims the affections of the spectators. He is so good natured, so unaffected, and so earnest that he does not for a moment convey the impression that he is acting. The story is full of action and amusing. There is an excellent supporting cast."—Detroit News.

troop in Mattoon lied to him, as I have the original list of prices before me, as given by Paramount's representative. I do not know where the $500 quotation on Forbidden Bloom came from, as the one I refer to me on this picture was the same as on 'Hello, Dolly.' It is true that these prices were somewhat reduced after a month spent by Paramount in displaying all its bag of bluffing, bull- dozing, threatening and coercive tricks and after I had considered all the pictures I needed from other sources.

"Mr. Kent further states that the prices quoted me were not higher than those which I had paid under the preceding contract. As a matter of fact the list of prices above referred to, as compared to the preceding contract, shows an increase of more than 75%. Even the final figures quoted me were considerably higher than the preceding group. (This in the face of figures which I had given them showing a loss under the preceding contract.)

"I further states that they offered to put in a number of pictures at my price, providing the results on these pictures would be the basis on which would be sold future pictures, or the balance of the block of pictures. This statement is untrue in every respect.

"He states that I refused to show Paramount representatives my books. I will have to plead guilty to this crime, and if I owe Paramount an apology for it I am afraid I shall always be in their debt. I had had previous experience in this respect wherein I had opened by books to three or four of their representatives, one after the other, without getting anywhere.

"He also states that they offered to play all of these pictures at fair percentages, without asking me to pay one dollar in advance for them. This statement is absolutely untrue. The only percentage proposition ever made me was on a basis of an assured rental with a division of the receipts over a certain amount. This percentage plan I never do and will never accept.

"If Mr. Kent wants a real test of what any theaters are doing, and of what prices I can afford to pay, I challenge him to accept the following proposition:

"'I will turn over both of my houses to Paramount for a period of one month.'

"Paramount to pay all running expenses and to pay me the rental prices which they demanded on all Paramount pictures shown.

"'My admission prices must not be reduced or anything done that would injure the business after it is turned back to me.'

"At least two-thirds of the pictures exhibited must be Paramount pictures.

"'This will give him an opportunity to make precisely the same picture with their proposition would permit me to make and they can call in their experts and go to it.'

"However, it seems to me that all this is beside the case and simply clouds the issue. So far as I am concerned it is perfectly legitimate for Paramount to charge a rental price of $400 or $4,000 per day in Mattoon, but when they resort to harrassing, and coercive local advertising to force their terms it is time for every exhibitor who contemplates putting on a Paramount program to know what he is going to buck up against later on.'

Mr. Kent was shown Mr. Uran's statement, but declined to comment on it further than to say that he would prepare an answer.

95 from Paramount

That’s the Outside Limit, Although

There May Be Less—Original Estimate Was 104

Famous Players-Lasky will have from 90 to 95 productions for the 1921-1922 season, according to an official announcement made by Sidney R. Kent, general manager of distribution. Recently it was reported from usually reliable resources that the company would release as many as 104.

Kent, in speaking of the plans, said:

“We shall schedule our pictures only 30 days in advance. We shall have a representative of the sales department stationed continually at the studios to give us advance information on productions.

“The idea of the school, which is now holding its third class, will continue its sessions regularly, feeding the distribution department with men better trained in the Paramount idea of increased service to exhibitors. We shall hold a bookers’ class once a year and also will soon start a class for office managers.

“We will increase our service to exhibitors in small towns we plan to enlarge our exploitation force by the addition of 30 men.”

Will Sign Bill

Illinois to Have Deposit Law Segregating Money by Counties—Exchanges Disturbed

(Special to WID’S DAILY)

Chicago — Information reaching here from Springfield has it that Governor Small will sign the bill segregating deposits in a few days.

The bill calls for the setting apart of deposits in the county in which the contract is signed.

Local exchanges here say it will work considerable hardship, since a copy of the contract must be filed with each deposit in whatever county the deposit is placed.

Ignore Missouri Law

(Special to WID’S DAILY)

St. Louis: The Penzel Deposit Bill went into effect on Monday and is now the law of the state until repealed or set aside by a decision of the Supreme Court.

It has been learned that the major counties, if not all, of the managers of St. Louis exchanges have received orders to ignore the bill and continue to exact deposits on contracts for films by night past.

A show-down of the law is expected in September when the leading exhibitors sign their yearly contracts for films. It is expected that the legal controversy will be carried to the State Supreme Court, regardless of the decision of any lower courts.

The measure requires that deposits must be put in a bank and in the county in which the exhibitor resides, to be held in trust for the exhibitor for the same time as the contract is fulfilled.

F. & R. Get “U” Exchange

An agreement has been consummated by H. M. Berman, general manager of the Universal exchanges, whereby the Universal exchange of Minneapolis comes under the management for a period of years of the Finkelstein & Ruben interests. This move has been under discussion for several weeks.

By this arrangement Universal, which has been kept out of many of the first runs in the Minneapolis territory, is said to secure the desired entrée into a number of first-run theaters in Minneapolis, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota. The person who managed the exchange for Universal will remain in Minneapolis.

Indp’ts Organizing

J. J. Goldberg Fostering Idea for Co-operative Body—Two Meetings Scheduled

What bids fair to be an organization embracing a considerable number of independent producers and distributors in a co-operative body was discussed at a luncheon at the Astor on Thursday, at which were present about 30 independents or their representatives.

The luncheon met at the suggestion of J. J. Goldberg, who is now affiliated with Imperial Prod., Inc. Gold- burg sent the notices out for the luncheon and made known his plan when the independents had gathered. The idea took immediate hold and a by-laws committee was formed. Goldberg has arranged for a meeting on Monday night in the office of Joe Schnitzer and on Thursday there will be another meeting at the Astor to continue the work.

The aims of the organization will be:

To eliminate from the field the fly-by-night independent.

To establish state right percentages along definite and concrete lines. It is of importance to determine where ideas for the good of the market can be interchanged.

Among those who attended the luncheon were:

S. J. Rollo of Clark-Cornell Corp.; Marion H. Kohn, Consolidated Film Corp. of San Francisco; Sidney Asher, Asher Prod.; Joseph Schnitzer, of Equity; Joe Brandt of C. B. C.; Jesse J. Goldberg of Imperial Prod.; Max Adler of Tarzan Sales Corp.; Victor B. Fisher, of Associated Photoplay, Inc.; J. Weinberg of Canyon Pictures; William G. Smith of Fidelity Pictures; Joseph Sameth of Forward Film Distributors, Inc.; Robert W. Priest of the Film Market, Inc.; Harry J. Shegad of Ketron Co. of America; Don Carlos Ellis of Harry Levey Service Corp.; Nat Getz of the Phone Exchange; Mr. Getz’s wife now manages the exchange for Universal, will remain in Minneapolis.

Important Companies Agree to Aid in C. C. Pettijohn's Idea—The Plan in Detail

Charles C. Pettijohn, who it will be recalled, presented a plan for the creation of a film "war chest" at the recent annual meeting of the National Association, states that 12 of the larger companies have approved the idea and that they have all accepted. The companies are: First National, Metro, Educational, Selznick Bros., Klaw-Eaton-Coli, Realart, Famous Players, Triangle, Universal, Goldwyn and Associated Producers.

Pettijohn plans to present the idea to all of the other companies just as fast as it is possible to do so, including the independent distributors in various states.

Under the terms of the plan, the distributors are called upon to supply Motion Picture Day rentals. The idea has created considerable interest in certain film quar- terly publications. To increase its importance, the plan, as developed by Pettijohn, is printed in full:

Plan

In order to further the cooperative handling of the industry's problems and to do away with the frequent solicitation of relief organizations in motion picture theaters, it is proposed to designate one day each year to be known as Motion Picture Day.

I. All producers and distributors of motion pictures to furnish gratis their film service to the theaters which participate in the plan.

II. All exhibitors who receive such film service to donate 50% of their gross receipts on Motion Picture Day. The specific percentage which such exhibitors will be asked to donate is:

I. To finance the necessary cooperative work for the protection of the motion picture industry.

II. To contribute to worthy charities and humanitarian relief funds, thus avoiding, as far as possible, the solicitations for such purposes in motion picture theaters.

For the present year, Thursday, August 25 has been designated as Motion Picture Day.

Organizational Plan

The organization plan provides for the appointment in each state of a Motion Picture Protective Committee to be composed of 12 members, 9 of whom are to be exhibitors and 3 of whom are representatives of the companies representing participating producing and distributing companies in such state. If it is found desirable in certain states to decrease or increase the size of such state committee, the ratio of exhibitor and exchange representatives will be changed.

For the purpose of contact and communication, each state Motion Picture Protective Committee to designate a point person, who will present the committee in all matters pertaining to Motion Picture Day in that state.

Administration

On the day immediately following Motion Picture Day, each exhibitor participating in this movement, will report to the office of the exchange which has furnished his feature picture for the Motion Picture Day performances, all checks representing such gross receipts for Motion Picture Day, less admissions tax. This check will be made payable to the Motion Picture Protective Committee Chairman in his state. The exchange manager, upon receipt of the check, will immediately deliver it to the Motion Picture Protective Committee Chairman and the latter will acknowledge its receipt in duplicate, to the exhibitor and the exchange manager.

Exhibitors who do not voluntarily run matinees on this date are urged to open theaters earlier than usual and to give the greatest possible number of performances.

In some instances where film has been paid for in advance by an exhibitor, a credit memorandum for the Motion Picture Day rental will be issued by the exchange to the exhibitor.

Fifty per cent of the gross receipts for all performances given on Motion Picture Day, less admissions tax, may be accounted for to the state chairman.

One third of the funds thus raised in each state to be remitted by the respective state chairmen to the Chairman of the Motion Picture Protective Committee in New York (representing the participating producers and distributors) for the specific purposes set forth in this plan.

Two thirds of the funds raised in each state to be remitted by the Motion Picture Protective Committee of that state, to be expedited for the specific purposes hereinafter mentioned, for the Motion Picture Protective Committee for disposition in each state.

AS A WHOLE...... Another distinct and unusual creation from the foreign studios STORY...... Has considerable racial appeal, but this should not detract from general consumption value DIRECTION...... Has retained a perspective throughout and shows real care in composition
PHOTOGRAPHY ......................... Good
LIGHTINGS .......................... Very good CAMERA WORK ......................... Effective PLAYERS...... Paul Wegener gives remarkable performance in the title role; types well chosen and all do creditable work
EXTERIORS ......................... Many extraordinary sets
INTERIORS ......................... Not the usual thing
DETAIL ......................... Apparently adequate CHARACTER OF STORY...... Ancient Jewish tradition based on the theory of a Rabbi who trolled a miracle image
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...... About 5,000 feet

Added to the previous successful productions contributed to the American market by foreign producers, comes “The Golem,” at the Criterion for an indefinite run, dependent apparently on the way the picture is received. Like “The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari,” Paul Wegener offers a distinct novelty but one which presents a genuine contrast to the latter. While the settings seen in “The Golem” are not the regulation affairs, they are unlike the futuristic or cubist designs of “Caligari.” Wegener’s sets all maintain some manner of perspective without the zig-zag shadows distorting the general appearance. The main difference is the unfamiliar construction and architectural form.

Paul Wegener displays a distinct creative ability in his production of “The Golem” and he tells the story in a comprehensive fashion, wastes no time with padding and builds toward the climaxes with a deft force-fulness that cannot be mistaken. There are really several climaxes but each gathers a new interest, and perhaps it may seem strange that the interest can be evenly maintained in a development of this sort, but there are no obvious slumps. The producer also appears in the title role, that of the image which lives or ceases to live at the will of Rabbi Loew. A rather uncanny makeup is required but certainly, both in appearance and ability, the actor holds the center of attention.

The story has a powerful racial appeal and regardless of that phase of it will, in all probability, prove universally interesting because of the production values and the atmosphere of magic and novelty which it contains. It is based on the theory or legend which is told of the Rabbi Loew who created an image called “The Golem” which he could will to live or die.
The Golem became the servant of the persecuted Jews in Prague, whose ruler sought to drive them from the Ghetto of the city. While pleading before the King, Rabbi Loew foretold misfortune if the throng scroffed him. They did and as a consequence the walls began to fall. The Golem upheld the falling beams and for this act the King ceased persecution. A short romance between the Rabbi’s daughter and the King’s attendant is also told. At the close, a little child removes the magic star from the breast of The Golem and the image lives no more.

Another One Which Exhibitors Should Judge for Themselves

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The booking of “The Golem” confronts the exhibitor with the much discussed situation of the so-called foreign “invasion,” and as with the others, this is another case of using your own judgment. If you think the picture will make money for you, you can probably secure a showing although no distribution plans have as yet been announced. Perhaps if you played “The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari” you will be better able to judge whether or not you can put over “The Golem.” If they liked the former, they will be interested in this; and on the other hand, if they did not like Caligari you can promise them a different novelty in “The Golem.”

The picture has not played long enough at this writing to judge its New York success, but this is almost certain—that its religious appeal is genuine and should be well received by those whose forefathers’ legend it tells. The novelty angle should appeal to all.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... English engineer in India loves native girl who bears him a son. Child dies of fever and mother falls victim of Cholera plague

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...... About 5,300 feet

Although "Without Benefit of Clergy" is undoubtedly one of the world's greatest stories the same cannot be said for the screen version. This is another case where a great story does not make a great picture. The reason for this is plain; the story lacks dramatic screen values. The effect of unavoidable tragedy is presented at the start and carried out to the finish in this production that adds another name to the small list of "unhappy-ending" pictures.

Mr. Kipling could certainly have made a better choice for the screen. There are many of his stories, while perhaps not quite as perfect technically as "Without Benefit of Clergy," would nevertheless, be better for the screen. There is a vast difference between short story technique and screen technique and "Without Benefit of Clergy" proves it. Even "The Light that Failed," although screened about five years ago, could have been presented again with greater advantage than this one.

This production is a picture composed almost entirely of atmosphere, produced not so much through characterization as through scenic effects. These are very well registered and many of the sets artistically done. While it is necessary to have a great many titles in a production lacking self-explanatory action, still they could have been shortened to advantage in this.

There is very little to the story. A young Englishman in India falls in love with a native girl and they live together very happily until their baby dies. Later she dies of the plague. In the first part of the production the continuity showing the buying of the girl from her mother is a little garbled, perhaps purposely, for instead is inserted a native wedding scene. Mr. Kipling certainly has been careful to leave out any mention of this in his story.

A good deal of the detail is not fully explained, as the breaking of the dagger on the floor, and the child taking cold on the roof.

Virginia Brown Faire plays Ameera, the native girl, with girlish charm. Thomas Holding takes the part of the English engineer and does good work in a difficult role. His acting is a bit stiff and angular, and his characterization more American than English. Evelyn Selbie does good character work as the mother, though the character is not in keeping with the hard mother penned by Kipling.

The photography, lighting and camera work all stand out as being well and thoughtfully done. The melancholy strain that runs through this unhappy story was done with a good deal of artistic feeling. The production as a whole is quite a faithful rendering of Kipling's text, but is more literary than cinematographic.

Success of The Classical Story Depends Upon Audience

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Kipling's name is worth a good deal as a box office asset and the title of the story too is very well known. You can promise your people a good wholesome production with plenty of atmosphere. Lay stress on this rather than upon the theme of the story. Also mention the realistic plague scenes that appear in the last reel of this production.

In presenting this use a prologue with some of Kipling's songs and give it an oriental atmosphere. If there is any doubt in your mind whether the unhappy ending will get over with your audience look this over before presenting it. If your audience is highbrow and like artistic productions and stories with more atmosphere than action, they will probably like this one. Kipling's name should be a drawing card if well advertised.

Shipwreck-Desert Island Story; Different Only Perhaps in Ending

Edith Storey in “BEACH OF DREAMS”
Haworth Pictures—Robertson-Cole
DIRECTOR .................. William Parke
AUTHOR ..................... H. De Vere Stacpoole
SCENARIO BY ............ E. Richard Schayer and Nan Blair
CAMERAMAN ................. Felix Schoedsack
AS A WHOLE ...... Interest slightly below par because of hackneyed situations that have been presented time and again STORY ...... No new twists to lift it; desert island formula with which picture goers are quite familiar DIRECTION ...... Production values are adequate and presents good island atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Very good
LIGHTINGS ..................... Good
CAMERA WORK ................ Good
PLAYERS ...... Edith Storey does satisfactory work but the role does not tax her ability; Noah Beery as a hero instead of his usual villainous part; others suitable EXTERIORS ................... Pretty coast shots
INTERIORS ..................... Sufficient
DETAIL ......................... Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... French aristocrat shipwrecked on an island, falls in love with rescuer, but racial differences prevent marriage
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 5,005 feet

Edith Storey’s appearance in the Haworth production “Beach of Dreams,” recalls a picture which she made some years ago for Vitagraph when she was co-starring with Antonio Moreno, called “The Island of Regeneration” and which was probably the first, or among the first of the desert island pictures to be offered the public. That was several years ago and the same formula has been popular with producers ever since at regular intervals.

The only appeal which can be found in “Beach of Dreams” is the location and general atmosphere of the sea. The choice of locations and background selected for the story’s enactment are attractive and there are numerous beautiful coast shots. Other than this the feature cannot boast of being quite up to the entertainment mark. The theme contains no new twists to distinguish it from its predecessors. One or two mildly thrilling incidents occur which can be commended. A death in quicksand which also threatens the life of the heroine; a fight on a cliff in which the heroine stabs her assailant and his subsequent fall from the cliff, and finally the battle with Chinese poachers, are the biggest moments.

The actual telling of the story covers considerable time and space but the sub-titles do most of the indicating. The latter are numerous and contain many flowery speeches. They are not usually in good taste.

Miss Storey is pleasing but the part doesn’t call for much display of her acting ability. Noah Beery will surprise his followers by playing hero instead of villain. The ending is perhaps not what the spectator will expect as it is not the usual happy one. On the contrary, it leaves the characters just where they were in the beginning.

Cleo de Bromsart, a French aristocrat, refuses to marry any of the noble gentlemen who seek her hand. She accepts the invitation of Prince Selm and goes for a cruise on his yacht, promising Chenet, a suitor, she will give her final answer upon her return. The yacht is wrecked and Cleo cast upon a desert island with only two uncouth sailors as her companions. One meets death in quicksand and the other she kills when he attacks her. Cleo is almost dead when Raft, a common sailor, discovers her. He takes care of her and gradually the girl falls in love with him. Finally they make their way back to Paris where the girl’s parents are shocked at her mingling with a common person. Cleo wants to marry Raft but thinking it would not be a happy union, bids him good-bye, and tells Chenet she will never marry.

All Right If You Think Your Audience Will Approve

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The title will give them a pretty good idea what to expect if their senses are keen, and they are quick to judge. You know pretty well what your folks want, and if this type of story has proven popular in the past and you think they will accept another, give them “Beach of Dreams” and they’ll probably be satisfied. Perhaps they would be interested in knowing some of the incidents, in which case you might enumerate the incidents mentioned above.

You can use the names of the principal players. Both Miss Storey and Noah Beery are probably familiar to your patrons, and if you have recently played any production in which either of them appeared, it would be well to mention the title. Catch-lines might catch the eye. “Is caste a barrier to happiness? Or should it be? It makes up the main situation in ‘Beach of Dreams.’” Others similar can be arranged.
There are two ways to crush Independents in this Industry

One is to 'gobble up all the theatres you Independent Exhibitors have built up by hard labor and money. That will give the Big Interests control of the screen. If successful, practically every Exhibitor of Pictures is under control.

The other way is to close the Independent Laboratories which have been built up also by hard labor and money. That will give a certain few men, who are allied with the Big Interests, control of the Developing and Printing of Motion Pictures.

There you have the network—control of exhibition by taking your house from you and control of Developing and Printing by closing up the Independent Laboratories.

Independent Exhibitors, Independent Laboratories and Independent Producers have a common interest. They must support each other.

Wouldn't it be easy for Jules E. Brulatour, who controls the distribution of Eastman raw film and is reported to control three great Laboratories, the Paragon, G. M., and San Jac, to combine and use that control so that no Independent Laboratory can supply you?

Jules E. Brulatour is a director of Famous Players-Lasky Corp. Are they competing with you? Placed in full control of the Laboratories of the country and distributing Eastman raw film, whom do you suppose Mr. Brulatour would give the preference in film supply and laboratory work—the company in which he is a director or the Independent Producers?

Mr. Exhibitor, you can come to but one conclusion, whole heartedly support the Independent Producers' product from the Independent Laboratories.

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Crook posing as

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...... About 6,000 feet

Stories dealing with society crooks have been popular with producers for the past few months, and now Selznick comes forth with one presenting Eugene O'Brien as "The Magnet," a notorious criminal. But "The Last Door" is different from any of its predecessors in that it has a really clever surprise twist, and you don't even know it is to deal with crooks until it is well under way, and then comes the disclosure that the hero is not a nobleman but a thief.

The development of the story is what makes it unusual, and the audience is kept guessing continually as to what will happen next. The director never allows it to become obvious, and least of all do you expect the ending to be as it is, and after all it is well received if for no other reason than that it is out of the ordinary. The hero does not marry the heroine and there is no fade-out showing them wandering arm in arm down the primrose path. When the theme develops into a genuine crook story, they get in some good business in "The Magnet's" home where he makes use of various "disappearing" devices in eluding the police—a stairway that conceals an exit and pool with a trap door.

There are too many guests in the society home of the heroine. Every time the host moves from one room or part of the room, the guests follow up like a lot of chickens after the mother hen. This isn't any serious fault but makes the "extras" conspicuous when they shouldn't be. Eugene O'Brien does good work in a thoroughly suitable part, and Martha Mansfield again appears opposite him. The other members of the cast are not given credit.

Mrs. Hamilton Rogers entertains, among others, Somerset Carroll, noted for his chivalry. A convict has escaped from a nearby prison. The guests decide to join in the hunt but Carroll remains at home and is surprised when the escaped girl comes into the house and begs him to hide her. He does to the extent of escorting her. After some mishaps he gets her safely to his home where the girl confesses she is Helen Rogers and that it was all a joke. Carroll then returns the surprise and discloses his true identity, that of "The Magnet." He keeps the girl a prisoner, and returns to the Rogers' to secure the ruby he went after. Just as he decides not to take it, Helen appears but doesn't expose him. The girl later risks her reputation to warn "The Magnet" that the police are after him, and even though they love each other, they part.

You Can Give Them This and They'll Like It
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Selznick is offering you a really worth while feature in Eugene O'Brien's latest. You can tell your folks it is a crook story full of surprises and unusual twists that hold the attention from beginning to end.
You'll find it hard to please them at all if they don't like this one. In case you have played the recent O'Brien pictures, among them "Gilded Lies" and "Worlds Apart," you can tell them that "The Last Door" is even better.

Play up the story with catchlines along the order of:
"He might have gone free and married the girl he loved but at 'The Last Door' he turned back and faced the law." Or, "Does the heroine always marry the hero? 'The Last Door' is different. See Eugene O'Brien in a novel crook story, his latest Selznick release." The feature should prove worthy of exploration and the receipts worth while any advertising expense.
There never was anything surer than the overwhelming national popularity of this marvelously clever dog. Featured always in clean, bright snappy comedies that suit every audience, BROWNIE, the CENTURY WONDER-DOG, has come to be one of the sure-fire attractions of the screen. It is of this wonderful little pup that TURNER & DAHNKEN say through Manager Castelle of San Francisco; “BROWNIE is the best animal comedian in pictures.”

See him—show him in “PLAYMATES” and “PALS” with BABY PEGGY MONTGOMERY, both recent releases. Play him in his latest release “SOCIETY DOGS,” of which M. P. World says; “An exhibitor showing this picture will be performing a service to his patrons.” Watch for “THREE WISE BOOBS,” soon to be released. The biggest house in the land can’t do any better than to show these Century Comedies featuring BROWNIE, the Wonder-dog—a whole show in himself.

Jack Nelson has a faculty for giving Douglas Mac-Lean an interesting introduction to his audience.
This is noticeable in the recent pictures directed by him. In "One a Minute" the opening shots are aboard a moving train, and there's no fake about it either.
Fred Jackson's story, while not sparkling with originality, offers a good role for Mac Lean, and at the same time has a quality of humor that will probably satisfy the majority.

There's just one slip-up—the laughs are not well distributed. You'll find a first rate bit of comedy business that goes over fine and then it settles down to a sober stretch that threatens the interest until they pick up the humorous vein again. At the Rialto they seemed to get a lot of enjoyment out of the situations presented. One especially good bit that they appeared to like was the hero's own surprise when he found out that his patent medicine really effected a cure. Again when he is being tried for vio1ating the pure food act, a Chinaman's testimony, of some length, is translated as "Yes." This is an old one, but they liked it.

Douglas MacLean puts a lot of life into the picture by his own performance, and Victor Potel, a familiar figure in short reel comedies of the past, contributes some fun of his own accord. Marian De Beck, apparently a newcomer, is the leading lady. Others are Frances Raymond, Andrew Robson and Graham Pettie.

Jimmy Knight returns to Centerville from the city to run the little drug store left to him by his dead father. A syndicate, headed by S. P. Rogers, is about to open a modern store across the street, which threat-ten to put him out of business. They offer to buy out Jimmy but he decides to fight them. Jimmy reads
P. T. Barnum's famous motto about a fool being born every minute, and gets out a patent medicine which his father had worked upon for many years—a panacea for all ills. The medicine contains four ingredients which can be analyzed and a fifth which is unknown to all save Jimmy. "Knight's 99" is a success.
The syndicate reports Jimmy's activities to the Pure Food committee which causes his arrest for violation.
He proves himself innocent, makes plenty of money and also wins the heart of Rogers' daughter and then is elected mayor of the town.

Light Comedy That Should Please Them
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can please a good majority of your folks with Douglas MacLean's latest comedy, and if he is well liked and they look forward to his picture, it should be only necessary to announce his name and tell them he has another good story in "One a Minute." Other than using the star's name, it would be well to run catchlines in your program giving an idea of what it is all about. Say: "Are you ill? Try 'Knight's 99.' It cures anything as Douglas MacLean will prove to you in 'One a Minute,' his latest Paramount comedy."

The press sheet which Paramount will provide contains some effective suggestions for exploitation which can be employed to get them interested in the showing. If you played MacLean's last picture,
"Chickens," you might recall that title in case some of your patrons might have forgotten his name.
Delightful views of Majesticland showing why the kiddies love it
Why Dallas Kiddies Love “Picshures”

From all over the country reports are reaching New York of ambitious efforts being made by exhibitors to interest the kiddies.

Perhaps this is due to the unusual condition of affairs or it may be just the usual summer desire of showmen to stimulate business by making their houses attractive for the little ones.

There isn’t anything in the world better for business generally than to please the kiddies.

Can you remember the time when you believed in Fairies? When the biggest and most powerful of them was called Woo?

Can you remember that your dearest wish was to commission Woo to provide you with a vast playground that held monkey cages, and wiggling snakes—and gold fish and singing birds? A playground where there would be a Merry-Go-Round that you could ride on all day without paying a nickle? And toys—a million of them would be putting the estimate too low?

Of course you do. And so did Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement Company, when he planned the wonderful $2,000,000 New Majestic Theater for Dallas, Texas.

For down in the basement of this palatial playhouse Hoblitzelle has fulfilled the magic of Woo. He has built a playground called Majesticland that is all of 90 feet long by 60 feet deep.

It is a veritable land of make-believe. Down its center street stand old fashioned postern lamps that light the way to the Doll’s house, where Tea is served throughout every vaudeville performance—where story books are read, and happy children rock their dollies to sleep.

No words can adequately describe Majesticland.

For who would dream of a Merry-Go-Round that never stops—who would think of monkey cages, and squirrel cages, and prairie dog cages, and cages full of 100 singing canaries?

Who would think of a fountain—a beautiful replica of the fountain found in the Vatican at Rome—a fountain filled with swiftly swimming goldfish—with growing water hyacinths to give them seclusion when eager childish eyes become too monotonous.

There’s a wonderful old woman’s shoe that forms a slide. High enough to be thrilling—and low enough to be perfectly safe.

There is an electric city, too—a perfect little jewel of a model city that has electrically lighted streets and houses—that shows running street cars—and yes—a really truly vaudeville theater with sign all ablaze. How you’d love to live there?

In one corner of Majesticland is a wonderful Cinderella coach—all red and gold. Two coachmen in all their splendor of satin coats and trousers—silk hose and three cornered hats as they sit stiffly on the box. Stepping daintily into the waiting coach is Cinderella, all dressed up in lustrous satin. And just as the fairy tale tells, she has lost her glass

SESSUE HAYAKAWA in

"BLACK ROSES"

By E. RICHARD SCHAYER

"Black Roses" is a crook story in which the craftiness of a Japanese gardener is pitted against a couple of blackmailers. Has many dramatic incidents and holds the interest of the audience by reason of being forcefully acted and well staged. Sessue Hayakawa, the star, has won an enviable position as an actor in the silent drama. He is ably supported in "Black Roses" by Tsuii Aoki, his wife, Myrtle Stedman and a notable cast directed by Colin Campbell. The photography is excellent. This is a production that will please your audience and increase your box-office receipts.

"WHAT'S A WIFE WORTH"

Written and Directed by William Christy Cabanne

"What's a Wife Worth," a leaf from a woman's soul reaches tremendous heights of drama and romance and withal has that underlying current of philosophy and truth that makes the productions of this prominent author-director, William Christy Cabanne, so distinctive. Mr. Cabanne has chosen his cast with the greatest care. The two principal roles are played by that capable juvenile lead Casson Ferguson and the sweet faced and clever Ruth Renick. Beautiful Virginia Caldwell, lovable Cora Drew, and others equally well known among the lovers of the screen drama, complete the cast. Your audience will like this photoplay.

"BEACH OF DREAMS"

Produced by HAWORTH with an all-star cast

By H. DE VERE STACPOOLE

Adapted from one of the best adventure novels of a decade, the "Beach of Dreams" is the thrilling picturization of the problems of a rich young society woman who is cast away on an island where her only companions are three ordinary sailors.

"IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW"

Based on Balzac's Meditations on Marriage

"If Women Only Knew" is a story full of action, emotion and laughter, splendidly directed and beautifully photographed. It is an unusual production through its realistic conception of human characters who are neither heroes nor villains, in the fictional sense, but draw their attractiveness from the fact that they are types met in every day life. "If Women Only Knew" is an American story although based on a French classic. The characters are all American. Carefully cast and directed by E. H. Griffith "If Women Only Knew" gives opportunities that seldom come to most screen actors and actresses. Exhibitors will find this an excellent summer box-office attraction.

All four productions have excellent entertainment and educational values, beautiful scenes, splendid action. Wonderful photographic effects, artistic direction.

AS A WHOLE........ Meek sort of comedy offering with a few amusing situations, but slumps noticeably between times

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Girl in love with aunt's fiance finally "lands" him for herself
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,214 feet

In "Don't Call Me Little Girl," Mary Miles Minter's current Reallart release, she virtually steals a part away from Constance Talmadge, inasmuch as it requires a strenuous series of vampings in which the heroine steals her aunt's fiance—a part usually associated with the bob-haired comedienne. Miss Minter is pleasing as the mischief-maker even if she does appear a bit overgrown as the "little girl." Probably that's why she insists upon not being called that.

Catherine C. Cushing's story served as a stage vehicle for Billie Burke and played under the title of "Jerry." It might have been an entertaining play, but there aren't sufficient real situations to carry it over as a five reel picture. There are a few good incidents that draw some laughs, but between times the interest lags badly and you wait for something to happen. The director has made an effort to pad it out, but the lapses are too long and the good bits too few and far apart. This is especially noticeable in the "in and out" business, of which there is too much.

One feature of the development which might be considered effective is the manner in which the conclusion is kept dark. While you probably expect the girl to win the fiance for herself, still various occurrences lead you off the track and you don't know just how it will turn out. Those who appear in support of the star are well suited to their roles.

Mrs. Doubleday and her young daughter, Jerry, come to visit Aunt Joan who is finally to be married to Monty Wade after an engagement of ten years. Jerry is a firm believer in love at first sight and Monty is her victim. Then follow a series of strenuous efforts in which Jerry vamps Monty over to her side, and at the same time she induces Peter Flagg, an old admirer of Joan's, to push his case. As a last resort Jerry pulls a fake suicide and Monty admits he loves her, while Aunt Joan seems perfectly satisfied with Peter.

You can have lots of fun and cause a good deal of excitement with exploitation and stunt advertising if you care to go to a little trouble to get them interested in "Don't Call Me Little Girl." Realart’s publicity department has thought up some good ones which you can obtain from the press sheet. Where Mary Miles Minter is popular it shouldn’t be necessary to resort to advertising. Just use her name in your announcements. Or if you want catchlines say: “See Mary Miles Minter’s latest picture, a story with a moral: Marry your fiance before your niece vamps him.” Or, “No wonder she said ‘Don’t Call Me Little Girl.’ She wasn’t. Carey Has a Good Story in His Most Recent Universal

Harry Carey in

Universal

DIRECTOR ................ Jack Ford
AUTHOR .................. Courtney Ryley Cooper
SCENARIO BY ............... E. J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN .................. Harry Fowler
AS A WHOLE ...... Well sustained interest and some good live action; has entertaining quality STORY ........ From a magazine short story that made interesting reading DIRECTION .... Very good; tells the story smoothly and logically; builds to first rate climax PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Good throughout LIGHTINGS ................ Some night stuff good CAMERA WORK ............... Satisfactory
STAR ...... Has a fine part and makes the most of the opportunities it offers SUPPORT ...... Irene Rich pleasing in a small part; Barbara La Mar not especially well suited; others adequate EXTERIORS ............. Few pretty snow scenes INTERIORS .................. Requisite
DETAIL .................. All that is necessary
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Man goes to jail to save man he believes is brother of girl he loves
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,577 feet

Universal has selected Courtney Ryley Cooper’s story which appeared in the Red Book Magazine under the title of “Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte” for Harry Carey’s latest vehicle. At the time the story appeared in magazine form it’s more than likely that a good many readers realized in it suitable screen material for one of the portrayals of western, good-bad men parts and perhaps more than a few thought of it in connection with Bill Hart. But it was cornered by Universal and it remained for Jack Ford and Harry Carey to show what they could do with it.

The result of their efforts is a picture with a well sustained interest, a smoothly and logically unfolded tale and enough good action to satisfy anyone, together with a first rate climax that is quite effective. The scenario writer has stuck closely to the original and provided an unbroken continuity. There is but one difference which is recalled and that is the fact that in the original Bart Carson did not meet the heroine until he sought refuge in her cabin on Christmas Eve. For the sake, perhaps, of rounding out the romance and permitting a happy ending, in the screen version Carson is in love with the woman at the outset and the conclusion finds him free to marry her.

Production values are all excellent and the latter reels contain some pretty snow backgrounds that lend an atmosphere desirable, since it is Christmas Eve. The story contains a rather unusual twist in the surprise finish where the escaped prisoner makes the son of the woman he loves his captor in order that he may claim the reward for the sake of the money they need so badly. The action taking place aboard the train is just a bit confusing owing to most of it being night stuff which nevertheless is well done. Carey gives his usual satisfactory performance.

Carson believes himself in love with Lou and even goes to jail to save Walker, a man she says is her brother but who, in reality, is the husband who deserted his wife and two children. Carson breaks jail when he learns the truth and trails Walker, who falls off a train trying to escape. Then Carson seeks refuge in the cabin of Mrs. Walker, where he is captured, but the officials have learned the truth and a pardon is promised.

They Should Accept This Both for Story and Production

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can assure them they will be satisfied with Carey’s most recent Universal offering, and by means of catchlines and a fair amount of exploitation and advertising should have no trouble in convincing them they’ll like it if they come in. Where the star is a favorite you should merely have to mention his name in your previous announcements, and tell them that “Desperate Trails” has been adapted from Courtney Ryley Cooper’s story “Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte,” for the benefit of those who may have read the story in the Red Book.

In case you want lines to attract their attention you might try: “He went to jail to save a man his sweetheart claimed as her brother, but even a prison couldn’t hold him when he learned the truth. It happens in Harry Carey’s latest Universal feature. See ‘Desperate Trails’ at the blank theater.”
Star and Production Good If Familiar Plot Is No Objection

Edith Storey in
“The Greater Profit”
Robertson-Cole

DIRECTOR .................. William Worthington
AUTHORS ............... Clifford Howard and Burke Jenkins
SCENARIO BY ............. Bennett Ray Cohen
CAMERAMAN ................ Eddie Geller

As a whole..... Will be favorably received if several of its kind have not already preceded it

Story....... Crook story that isn’t very different but satisfactory portrayals and adequate production help

Direction..... Not unusual though sufficient for the material he had to work with; might have made ending less obvious

Photography ............... All right
Lightings .................. Satisfactory
Camera Work ............... Straight stuff

Star...... Hasn’t much emotional opportunity but is pleasing in straight playing

Support..... Pell Trenton leading man with others in crook roles capable Exteriors ............. One or two pretty estates

Interiors ............... Sufficient
Detail .................. Appears sufficient

Character of Story....... Girl crook falls in love with ex-Army captain who finally marries her regardless of her past

Length of Production ....... 4,220 feet

There is considerable rivalry among three very popular plots to see which one will be used the most. At any rate it would appear that way from the frequent use of all three. First there’s the eternal triangle, then the shipwreck and desert island formula, and finally the crook story, for which “The Greater Profit” casts another vote. Edith Storey’s latest feature is a thoroughly satisfactory picture, although the theme is not original.

Like other girl crooks, the heroine wants to reform when she falls in love, and here is where “The Greater Profit” is like many of the others. The ending is what you expect it to be. For a time you are led to believe that something original will turn up when the hero and heroine separate and she returns to her old life. But the misunderstanding is cleared away and they live happy ever after.

The direction is quite satisfactory and good judgment is shown in keeping an uninteresting political feature in the background, except where it is directly brought into play and then no time is wasted on it. No excessive footage is used in reaching the conclusion which might, however, have been made a little less obvious.

Edith Storey has but one emotional opportunity in the picture, but is thoroughly pleasing as Maury, the shoplifter. Perhaps some of her feminine admirers will wonder at her rather passe costumes, since the part doesn’t call for them. Dorothy Wood, Pell Trenton, Lillian Rambeau, Lloyd Bacon and others appear in support.

Mrs. Hardage becomes interested in Maury and brings her into her home, where Maury meets Captain Ransom. Rhoda Hardage sees to it that Maury leaves the house when she realizes that Ransom is in love with Maury and not herself. Maury returns to the old life but one day goes to Ransom’s home to warn him against the spurious financial schemes of Hardage, his associate. Finally, the misunderstanding is cleared away and they are married.

Will Go All Right Unless They Are Fed Up On Crook Subjects

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The best advice is to use your own judgment, not that you are likely to displease them with the actual picture, but with regard to the familiar theme. If you have given them most of the recent crook theme pictures which have been on the market, then they may not want another. On the other hand if you haven’t had one recently, you ought to please them with “The Greater Profit.”

Edith Storey’s name can be used, unless you know that your patrons are not familiar with her. In that event, play up the story with catchlines such as: “Do you believe in the reformation of crooks? If you do, don’t bring a girl shoplifter into your home. See what happened in ‘The Greater Profit,’ and you’ll understand why.” Or, “Which is ‘The Greater Profit’? Honesty or dishonesty? The answer will be found at the blank theater in one of Robertson-Cole’s recent productions.”

Grace Darmond in
"THE BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER"
Universal

DIRECTOR .................... William Worthington
AUTHOR ........................ Peter B. Kyne
SCENARIO BY .................... Hope Loring
CAMERAMAN .................... George Barnes
AS A WHOLE .............. Action good if you don't mind it a bit rough; will go where they like bar-room westerns STORY .............. All hackneyed situations without an original twist; you always know what will happen next DIRECTION ............ Piles the fights on thick; otherwise fair
PHOTOGRAPHY ................. All right
LIGHTINGS ....................... Adequate
CAMERA WORK .................... Average
STAR .......... Photographs well and is pleasing to look at; has a sympathetic part SUPPORT .......... Jack Mower leading man, Harry Van Meter a typical villain; others adequate EXTERIORS ...................... Not many
INTERIORS ....................... Satisfactory
DETAIL ................... Appears correct
CHARACTER OF STORY .... Girl forced to marry mortgage holder later finds happiness with reformed rich man
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,458 feet

Perhaps Peter B. Kyne’s story made good reading matter, but it doesn’t reproduce as very good entertainment for the screen. It will go all right with those who like the typical western bar-room sort of story with roulette wheels, the proprietor who chews on a cigar, and the frequent fist fights incidental to the routine of such establishments. But folks who like their entertainment in less boisterous atmosphere won’t be likely to favor “The Beautiful Gambler.”

The story is a very old formula and develops towards its climax in such obvious fashion that you have nothing to expect. The spectator is always a lap ahead of the action. The minute the gambling hall owner proposes to Molly you know he holds the mortgage on her father’s home. And then the instant the hero appears on the scene you know he’ll rescue Molly from her “life of bondage,” and that somehow or other the unwelcome husband will exit.

Molly Hanlon marries Lee Kirk, owner of a western gambling house, to save her father’s home. The father commits suicide and Molly takes up her new life, obeying Kirk, wearing the clothes he buys for her and assisting at the roulette wheel. Miles Rand, a rich fellow whose father had turned him out because of his dissipation, comes to Kirk’s place. He observes that Molly is unhappy and a mutual friendship between them is formed. Kirk orders his man Devlin to get back a roll which Rand won at the roulette wheel and when Devlin fails Kirk throws him out. Devlin sets the place on fire and then denounces Kirk. Two years pass and Molly marries Rand, believing Kirk dead. But he appears and there’s a fight between Rand and Kirk, during which Kirk is killed by a shot. Rand is accused but at the last minute Devlin confesses to having fired the shot through the window. Rand’s father forgives him.

Use Your Own Judgment on This One

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Grace Darmond in
"THE BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER"
Universal

This is one on which you'll have to use your own judgment pretty much. You know best just how this type of picture goes with your audience and can act accordingly. It's one of those "if they like this sort of thing, they'll like this." Houses in business sections catering mostly to men may find that it will go over in their particular theater. It isn't the kind of a feature suitable to the so-called family trade. Not that there's anything very offensive, but just the fact that the bar-room atmosphere makes it a bit rough.

Universal is starring Grace Darmond in this picture so if your folks have come to like her in her supporting capacities they will be glad to see her starred. Stills of Miss Darmond in the lobby will attract attention, and catchlines can be used to good advantage if you decide to show them "The Beautiful Gambler." The title isn't a very alluring one. Sort of reminds you of "Mabel the Cloak Model" and the like.

Some Short Reels

"The Policeman and the Baby"—Selig-Rork-Educational

Type of production.............................................2 reel drama

This two reel drama marks a departure in the short reel field. It has all the earmarks of a feature picture inasmuch as the story, cast and direction are all of feature standards, only the padding is reduced. The idea behind this new Selig-Rork series, which is to be released through Educational, is a good one. Photoplay rights have already been secured for stories from well known authors. The list includes such names as James Oliver Curwood, Mary Roberts Rinehart, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Orie Read, Leo Tolstoi, Montague Glass, and many others.

The first of this series "The Policeman and the Baby," is adapted from a story by Clarence C. Cullen and was directed by Bertram Bracken. It deals with a policeman, baby, crook and $1,000 reward. The crook returns home to find his mother dead and about to be buried in Potters Field. This prompts him to go out upon a "job" so that he may secure money to give his mother a funeral. In the meantime the policeman's wife has left her baby in a department store and the child was handed over to the chief crook to care for.

The policeman did not recognize his own baby, and while on the way to the station he ran into the robbery. The crook, however, jumped into the policeman's taxi and found the baby on the seat. A chase takes place that ends in a smash-up. The crook saved the baby from the flames of the burning car, and only later does the policeman discover that it was his own child.

The cast of this two reel drama includes Wm. Desmond, Elinor Fair and Wallace Berry. The direction and photography are both excellent and the action swift. There is very little padding in any of this series.

This departure in the short reel field promises to fill a long felt want. There are many people who would rather see two short reel dramas with the padding left out, than a feature longer than this. Many of the background drawings could have been improved, and the preaching endings might well have been toned down to advantage. However, your people are certain to laugh when they see these.

The first of the series is called "Mice in Council." The mice come out of their hole and fish the cheese out of the trap. Mr. Cat walks up and down policing the kitchen. The mice have a meeting and carry banners that read "Down with the Cat," and "Freedom of the Cheese." The moral is brought down to every day life and a street agitator is shown in the concluding feet of this reel.

"The Goose that Laid the Golden Egg" is another of this series. The farmer and his wife kill the goose that has laid the 18 karat egg. The parallel drawn at the conclusion of this represents labor and capital in a cartoon killing the goose that laid the profits.

The third of this series which will be issued weekly deals with "The Rooster and the Eagle." The rooster and the duck engage in a very funny fight. The defeated duck is counted out and the rooster thinks himself a hero. The eagle, however, has been watching all this from his lofty peak and swoops down upon the rooster. There are quite a few laughs in this new series.

"Watering the Elephants"—Mutt and Jeff—Fox

Type of production.............................................1 reel animated cartoon

Mutt and Jeff have done better than they do in this. They have gone through more amusing situations and have produced more laughs than this will ever get.

"Who's Who"—Sunshine Fox

Type of production.............................................2 reel comedy

There is something really new in this Sunshine comedy. It is an effect obtained by double exposure. The funny hero and his girl are being pursued in the Canadian wilds when they run into a raging storm. Suddenly they find themselves in the middle of a typical Indian battle. They run, get washed away, the ground to the sky, the blinding blizzard blows. Both sets are produced and are shown in a single frame. A good deal more could have been made out of this effect. The lovers could have stopped to pick bananas while the search party on the other side of the picture became lost in the snow storm. This part of the story, however, is only incidental to the main theme of the comedy which deals with a trial in court. The story told by the defence leads up to the North woods and satires, the Canadian melo-drama. In the end the chairman of the jury and the State's attorney turn out to be the real criminals. There is new stuff in this comedy which is certain to get quite a few laughs from your audience.

"How She Lied"—Vanity Comedy, Educational

Type of production.............................................1 reel comedy

This story has been done many times before in almost exactly the same situation. Mary tells her brother that she is married and the brother assumes the wrong man. She sends for a minister, marries the right fellow and they clinch just as the brother returns. It takes them a very long time to explain and in the end all is well. Not very much time was spent in the making of this production.
slipper as she enters the coach. You should see those champing steeds drawing that wonderful coach. Four Shetland ponies, milk white, gaily comparisoned.

But above are only a few of the wonders of Majesticland. Another corner has been set aside for Robert Louis Stevenson’s Treasure Island in miniature. My—how fiercely Dick Silver glares at you. How weighty the treasure chest looks. It’s all one can do not to drag it away from Dick Silver’s ruffians, to see how many jewels it contains.

You’d think that this was enough. But that’s because you don’t know Majesticland. There is a Doll Home, too, completely furnished. All along the huge posts that support the building Alice in Wonderland panels have been painted—and ’tis said that Alice, herself, and the Mad Hatter, and the White March Hare often visit Majesticland.

Truly the Babies—the wee tiny ones asleep in Sandmanland’s have heard Alice sing them to sleep. For you know even Alice couldn’t pass up Sandmanlands’ anymore than you could. There are all of a dozen snowy cribs in Sandmanlands, and every one is filled at every performance with a wee one.

Even the grown-ups visit it every day. They say it’s the most wonderful place in the world. Take care tho; for you may get lost. Every wall is painted—a wonderful country. Fair—far reaching forests, and it looks big—Oh, a thousand times bigger than a mere 90 feet.

But if you’ll knock at Dr. Toots’ house he may direct you—that is if he’s in. If not just do like thousands of happy children, wander round and round and round, for it’s a sure thing that just as you think you’ve seen all the wonders of Majesticland, you suddenly discover a big horse—the most obliging, gentle creature that rides you on springs exactly like a real horsey—and never, never throws you off, or tires of your shouts of glee.

Oh, Majesticland is indescribable. And of course it couldn’t have happened if there hadn’t been the fairies and Woo—for if you ask one of the little visitors they’ll tell you Woo is responsible, for of course he told Karl Hoblitzelle to do it.

And who wouldn’t obey Woo. So Hoblitzelle obeyed Woo—and gave Dallas’ children the most wonderful playground in the world—Majesticland.

Distributors Erecting Own Exchanges—21 New Ones Built in Last Year

Housing conditions of film exchanges throughout the country have greatly improved during the last 12 months, according to the annual report of the Fire Prevention Regulation and Insurance Committee of the National Association.

In a large number of cities exchanges have recently moved into one or two story buildings and many, once quarters of a similar type are under construction. The distributors are rapidly abandoning the old buildings.

In 14 cities, 21 new and four remodelled buildings have been occupied during the year by 111 exchanges, an average of slightly over 10 exchanges to a building.

Inspection of exchanges throughout the country indicate a general improvement in their housing and in the installation of additional fire protection equipment. In fact, these conditions are said to have so greatly improved that recently a high official in one of the large insurance companies sought information which might be used as a basis toward the limiting of fire.

The following exchange buildings have been completed and occupied during the year:

- Oakland, 2 new buildings, housing 7 exchanges;
- Buffalo, 2 new buildings, housing 8 exchanges;
- Chicago, 1 new building, housing 1 exchange;
- Cincinnati, 1 remodeled, housing 1 exchange;
- Cleveland, 1 new building, housing 1 exchange;
- Kansas City, 1 new building, housing 1 exchange;
- Dallas, 1 new building, housing 2 exchanges;
- Los Angeles, 2 new buildings, housing 2 exchanges;
- Montreal, 1 new building, housing 1 exchange.

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—On the eve of the opening of the second annual convention of the M. P. T. O. of America there is every indication that this will be a “humdinger.”

The West and Radisson Hotels are already crowded to capacity, and while it is too early to forecast with any degree of accuracy the number of exhibitors who will attend the convention which opens this morning, there is every likelihood that there will be 1200 or more. In addition there will probably be 100 or more exchange men, salesmen, accessory representatives and others who usually frequent exhibitor gatherings.

The Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia delegates here will make a strong fight to have the next convention held in Washington. It is expected that in view of the excellent work which the executive committee put through in Washington recently this may act in a very favorable way toward having the next gathering at the national capital.

From all indications Sydney S. Cohen will have no opposition for the presidency.

The slogan of the convention will be the fight against producers invading the exhibitor field. There will be a number of pertinent developments with regard to this. In addition, a number of other important matters will be taken up, including the fight against the payment of music tax. In connection with this the report is being spread here that members of the Society of Music Publishers are using all tax money paid by exhibitors for the purpose of having other exhibitors pay this tax. It is fully expected that the Convention will adopt means to take this matter through the courts.

An effort will be made to show Congress that the five per cent film rental tax should be abolished. Then (Continued on Page 8)

When it gets to golf. I’m Ima’s brother. So, to set you right here’s the chance: WID’S DAILY will offer a cup. Solid silver. Nice and pretty. Good stuff for any collection. For the best score turned in by January one, next. For 18 holes. Open to all film golfers. Anywhere in this country. Or Canada. Shoot in your score. With your club handicap. And if you haven’t a handicap get yourself one. Had to put in the handicap. Otherwise Tom Moore might walk away. With the mug. He has a roomful now.

Just to set this right. Abe Warner stands up. And offers another cup. For the best score turned in. From the Manhattan district.

THE Photoplay Magazine Medal of Honor

TO BE AWARDED TO THE BEST PRODUCTION OF 1920 AND ANNUALLY THEREAFTER TO THE BEST PICTURE OF EACH YEAR

The way to surpass the photoplays of every invader on earth is to make every American motion picture devotee realize the truth—that America does lead the world on the screen—that we are making, in these United States, photoplays which have more humor, more romance, more thrill, more reflection of real life than any photoplays subtitled in any language.

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE’S Annual Medal of Honor has been established to testify to and proclaim this fact—to institute a serious search for the producer worthy of most signal honor—to acclaim the best screen work of Americans.

The PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE MEDAL OF HONOR has been permanently established as an award of merit to the producer—not to the director unless he happens to be a director producer; not to an actor or author unless he is also the producer, for it is the producer who is ultimately responsible. It is he whose foresight makes him venture his money, his reputation and his position in the industry in the selection of story plus director plus cast.

The verdict will be given by the public through a nation-wide ballot of the 2,500,000 intelligent and interested devotees of pictures who read Photoplay Magazine.

A default judgment for $1,267 has been filed in the Supreme Court against Clare Whitney Kane, film actress, in a suit of Frances M. Johnston to recover for moneys spent for her benefit.

The Fox Film Corp. has filed an answer in the Supreme Court to the action of Alexander J. Gordin for an accounting of the proceeds of the "Queen of Sheba" play. It is alleged that after he had completed the scenario he refused to send it to J. Gordon Edwards at Hollywood, Calif., as directed, and that the defendant had to employ some one else at $1,000 to do the work. For this reason he was discharged. A counterclaim for this sum is made on the ground that Gordin received $700 on the rate of $70 a week, for what he did.

A judgment for $973 was filed in the City Court against the Community Motion Picture Bureau by Dudley Murphy in a suit to recover $300 for services and $450 expenses in producing films.

The Community Motion Picture Bureau sued in the Supreme Court by the Bay City Film Corp. for $6,160 as the value of 137 prints from which the defendant got 2,000 feet of film which could be used.

Clearing the Atmosphere

I. E. Chadwick, president of the F. I. L. M. Slubs, feels that there is some doubt as to the attitude of his organization over uniform contracts, because the text of the M. P. T. O. standard contract was followed by another article last week telling of the resolution passed by the F. I. L. M. Club on the same subject. Chadwick says:

"The coincidence of publishing the two articles on successive days, has led in some quarters to the misconception that the F. I. L. M. Club, by its resolution, approved and urged the adoption of the standard form of contract submitted by the M. P. T. O. This is not a fact, and I write to ask you to correct the apparent misunderstanding due to a heading used by you in your issue of June 15th. The F. I. L. M. Club did not and does not approve the principle that a standard form of contract be adopted without passing on the merits or demerits of any specific contract proposed.

"The F. I. L. M. Club deems it the province of the National Association and not that of the F. I. L. M. Club, to adopt such a contract."

CROWDS GATHER FOR CONVENTION

Meeting On
there will be a discussion favoring the shipping of film through parcel post, this obviating express charges, and a number of other matters will also come in for attention.

It would not be surprising if representative from the important producing and distributing organizations presented to the Convention suggested the purchasing of a more definite line-up with the exhibitor body in the effort to fight the producer-distributor who has entered the exhibition field.

The fight being made by the Allied Laboratories to prevent the "control" of the laboratory field in the East may also reach the Convention Room on the ground that with laboratory work controlled, the independent producer may find it impossible to have prints made and thus block his distribution.

Steffes Active
W. A. Steffes, president of the Wisconsin Exchange, has enough work on hand looking after the various details of the Convention, the handling of the delegates, members and visitors and the planning of arrangements for the visiting ladies to keep him working 24 hours a day. He expects to get a good night's sleep maybe once a month next week, but until then he will be on the job about twenty-four hours a day.

H. J. Linton, of Milwaukee, is helping out a lot. Charlie O'Reilly is also working here lining things up, with Sam Berman not far behind. Berman has secured a supply of busses to keep his throat clear. He wants to be heard every time he starts during the next three days.

Fed Exchanges
The Federated Film Exchanges of America are holding a meeting here and practically every territory is represented. While the work of the organization is handled by the various members are not overlooking any opportunity to tell the exhibitors present all about Federated products.

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—The entire first session of the convention was up by the report of President Sydney S. Cohen, who gave the activities of the M. P. T. O. in the past year.

Here were over 600 delegates and about 300 additional members present when the gavel was raised for order. Convention is being held in the West Hotel and the room session yesterday was crowded to capacity. Hot weather was in order. Coats were shed and collars removed. The heat was intense.

Cohen was given an ovation when he mounted the platform. Among the outstanding features of his lengthy address were:

That exhibitors should be the judges of the product to be shown, and that they should not be influenced by motives or operations of producers-distributors.

These are the principles that should control the exhibitors' own screens.

At the exhibitor body should be permanent representatives from each state capitol, and that this committee represent the national capital, Washington. This will be the function of a statistical bureau established and that a card index be kept of each legislator.

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—It is learned here that the M. P. T. O. is seriously considering the formation of a $5,000,000 fund to finance production and that the move is being considered as part of a plan, whereby the exhibitor organization may be in a position to make or release their own productions and offset the possibility of producers and distributors invading the exhibitor field.

While nothing official can be obtained at this time relative to this proposition, it is understood that the plan calls for a bond issued on the amount involved with bonds ranging from $100 up. These bonds will be sold to exhibitors on a profit-sharing basis to be later worked out.

It is understood that several different propositions have been made to the officers and executive committee from independent producers, and that the most important of all was a co-operative proposition advanced on Sunday night to the executive committee by leading officials of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, represented by James Vincent of the New York Lodge, Sargent of the Los Angeles Lodge and an attorney named Simpson. Their discussion lasted for a considerable period.

Details of that conference are not available but in a general sense, it is learned, this developed: All members of the M. P. D. A., including some of the most noted directors of America, are to finance their own productions and make them for release through the exhibitor body. (Continued on Page 4)

Lewis J. Selznick
Gigantic Producing Unit Talked of at Convention

May Produce

If this plan is adopted, part of the financing of the productions will come from the $2,000,000 trust fund. This would also mean that a new distribution system would be put into effect covering the entire plan. If it is possible, it is the intention of the producer to perfect the idea and organization so as to be able to release productions for the season starting in September.

Central Distribution

Is L. Selznick's Plan To Cut Expense—E. H. Hampton Talks

Along the Same Lines

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—Lewis J. Selznick and Benjamin B. Hampton were in conference with the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. on Saturday to plan for the formation of one central distributing company through the amalgamation of existing branches in order to effect a big saving in distribution costs. Representative of the Motion Pictures Directors' Association conferred with the committee and the same lines. Elsewhere in this issue will be found details of the M. P. T. O. plan.

Hampton made the suggestion that the M. P. T. O. broaden its activities so as to include independent distributors and producers. Under Hampton's plan, the distributors are to be admitted as allies of the exhibitors. He, like Selznick, advocated the formation of a central distributing organization to handle all releases and the raising of a fund, up to $2,000,000, to develop the business of the independent exhibitors, distributors and producers.

Dinner Tonight

Some Weighty Discussion To Be Indulged In—General Air of All Business, No Fun

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—The high light of the M. P. T. O. convention today is expected to be the dinner which will be given at the West Hotel tonight. A number of prominent film men are slated to attend and it seems likely that all of them will speak.

From the present outlook the brunt of the argument will be borne by Senator 'Jimmy' Walker, national counsel for the M. P. T. O.; Sydney S. Cohen, national president, William H. Buxbaum, Rudolph Finkelson and Governor J. A. O. Preus.

Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, J. Selznick, Benjamin B. Hampton, and Al Lichtman are only a few of the well known film men who are to attend. Senator Owen of Oklahoma, and Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, will likewise be guests.

There seems to be a serious-minded discussion at the convention this year. The general attitude seems to be one of all business and no fun.

This state of affairs is apparently emphasized by the fact that practically no entertainment for the male members has been mapped out. The women are the only party having luncheons and bus rides to entertain them while the men settle down for the business of the convention.

Resume By Cohe

That a fund be established to carry the message of the national organization to the exhibitor body has been much in evidence. What a slat he took at Stanley before coming to Minneapolis. It was along the catering lines. Evans one of the strongest M. P. T. O. supporters. A fighter, too.

H. B. Varner of Charlotte, N. C., around-much. Varner just had a convention down in home before coming here. Southern crowd crazy to get next convention for Washington. Varner to vote that way when the question is put. So are a lot of them.

Among the stars here or expected to-day are Ann Little, Eddie Lyons and Ben Wilson.

There are so many palm beach suits in evidence that the convention hall looks like a South Dakota wheat field.

There are several candidates for President and Sidney Cohen is all of them.

Among the several forms of amusement going on in the New York special was a "Put and Take" tournament. After the smoke had cleared away a prominent magnet from 729 renamed the game to "Put and Put." The officials of the convention will be here to-day and the Radisson hotel yesterday. Not at the same table.

Looks like Washington will be the next convention city. Hope so. Maybe we can get the Senate and House to move out for a few days.

What a difference just a few short months make. Now the official drink of the convention is vanilla ice cream soda. And to make it worse the boys walk brazenly into any "silly" emporium no matter how public.

Minneapolis—Work for the men fun for the women. That, briefly, the program for the convention.

A Clever Ad
That Comes from England May Contain an Idea for Someone Here

Just to give the tired advertising fireetor an idea, here is something that is part of a full page used in "Kino," issue of May 26.

It starts off with a cut in italics: "Conferences of a Screen. What a Life," and then goes on to say:

"Some silly things think it awfully nice to be a screen. They've got a crazy notion that it must be fun to have thousands of eyes staring at you day and night, and to be used for all kinds of shows. First you are in China, and then, maybe, you are whisked off to Peru. And next day you are back again in Bethnal Green. * * * And then the excitement. To have motor cars racing across your face, and murders taking place in every inch of you, and lovers kissing all around you! My! The sights I do see! * *

"Yes, but what about the things I have to put up with? What about my sufferings? The duds that crawl on me for two solid hours, one after another, and I have nothing to say, being part of the 'silent drama.'

"Sometimes, just when I think they ought to laugh, they cry, and just when I expect them to cry, they laugh! What agonies! And then some of them have the sauce to turn round and say it's all my fault—I'm a 'bad screen.' * * *

"No one pities me! Sometimes I wish all we screens could get together, like some other things, and go on strike.

"Why won't someone throw a bomb at me—or even an orange, or an egg, so that I could fade out and stop this torture for ever. * * *

"But then, just as things seem at their worst, I catch the words 'Ideal Picture,' or I hear a whisper about a Denison Clift production or Milton Rosmer, and then I begin to feel better."

From here on it tells about productions of Ideal Films.

Announcing a New Eastman Product

Eastman Positive Film
WITH TINTED BASE

The tint in the print is put there by the manufacturer—the film base is impregnated with color.

Seven colors are now available—amber, blue, green, orange, pink, red and yellow.

And there is no advance in price over regular Eastman Positive Film.

All Eastman Film, tinted or untinted, is identified by the words "Eastman" and "Kodak" stencilled in the film margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
To the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America

In your successful convention there will be—and for months there has been—much talk about domination or control of this industry by one or two factors.

There is natural and proper complaint about excessive film rentals; complaint that there are no fixed price standards; that exhibitors never know in advance what rentals they are to pay; that exhibitors are subject to circuiting and differing standards with each picture and by each individual company.

I wish to tell your organization and all other exhibitors that the F. B. Warren Corporation has done exactly what the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have discussed and planned to do.

We have established a price rating system for every theatre in America; a rate per theatre of so many dollars per $100,000 of the national quota of a picture. We can tell any exhibitor now what his rate is and our national quotas are not revised upward after a picture has had a few "test showings."

More than a million dollars is being invested in the formation of the F. B. Warren Corporation, with exchanges in 22 cities and the intention of increasing rapidly to 32 exchanges.

Not a dollar of exhibitor money is being invested in production and the producers who release through our organization are financing their pictures in full through legitimate financial channels. F. B. Warren Corporation is the only organization of its kind in the world without a dollar of investment in production.

We are not now—nor will we be—in the position where we will have to release to you weak or inferior product because we have an investment therein that must be gotten out. We have no such investment.

You have all the benefits of a just and fair rating system devised by a man who has always kept his reputation in the motion picture industry clean—a rating system available to you without your being asked to buy a "franchise." Our rates are adjustable, based upon the actual trade conditions existing in your town.

PARAMOUNT Pictures have always been a vital factor in the success of the exhibitor.

Today they are more so than ever.

The assurance of a continued and uninterrupted flow of pictures, the calibre of which may be judged from the list of new productions announced yesterday, is an assurance that means much to the exhibitor today.

Paramount is striving harder than ever for better pictures.

The entire weight of the great organization behind Paramount Pictures is being concentrated on three things—the making of still better pictures, the continuance of an uninterrupted flow of money making productions day after day and week after week, and the continued bettering of Paramount service to the exhibitor in every way the word “service” applies.

Milwaukee Exhibitors Fear Monopoly Resulting in Increased Theater Admissions

(Special to WID'S DAILY)

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Action has been taken by Milwaukee and Wisconsin managers against the bill now before Congress which provides for an 11 cent tax on film stock. Many telegrams have been sent to Congressmen protesting the passage of the bill.

The bill has been recommended by Special Means Committee of the Senate Finance Committee, and if placed in the hands of one company in this country an admission price of 50 cents would ultimately raise the price of stock films to such an extent that the additional cost of film would be borne by exhibitors. At least, that is the attitude of F. Bauman, secretary of the Wisconsin Exhibitors’ Association, which represents 500 theaters in the 14 districts of Milwaukee, and believes that the tax will be passed by Congress.

Saxo, president of the Saxe Mission Co., Leo. A. Landau of Chicago, and E. C. Bostick of Saxo’s have all voiced opinions in the passage of the bill as drawn which might ultimately mean increased admissions.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellows know how you cleaned up.

The Brooklyn Mark Strand isn’t suggesting to its patrons that warm summer days are here and that the Mark Strand is the proverbial “coolest spot in town.” Instead the theater is getting the jump by featuring novelties into which every artistic endeavor, musical and scenic, are being utilized to create the impression of cool weather.

Wherever possible Managing Director Hyman is using scenic sets for his novelties wherein there are mechanical waterfalls, rippling water effects, etc. Hyman demonstrated this in the violin-dance number he put on recently, wherein a swan-like dancer in fluffy white ballet costume danced languorously before a rural drop of sheep. Blue lights were on the floor and the dancer was in a blue spot from overhead. John Sevely, violinist, played Saint-Saens’
“The Swan” from the pit while Ermie Mathews, danseuse, emulated that graceful water fowl in a dance.

Des Moines, Ia.—J. Helmt, manager of the Strand, devised an original idea when putting on “Now or Never,” a Harold Lloyd comedy.
It announced a “Perfect Impersonation Contest” amongst the inhabitants of the town and had no trouble in getting the daily papers to publish the photos of the six best contestants, who after having been given three minutes on the stage to show their antics, had been adjudged best by the audience. Local optical shop took up the idea and advertised spectacles with “Look like Harold Lloyd.”

The winners were given prizes in cash, ranging from $10 downwars and tickets. Helmt secured promi-ience on the front page of the “Des Moines Capital” the most important paper of the town for the entire week during which the picture was shown.

Sandusky, Ohio — Playing cards were used to good effect in exploiting “Without Limit,” during its showing at the Schade.

The Schade management used playing cards as throwaways. The back of each card had the following white insert:

“We’re playing ‘Without Limit’ at the Schade. Sunday, Monday, Tues-

The Photoplay Magazine
Medal of Honor

TO BE AWARDED TO THE [BEST] PRODUCTION OF 1920 AND ANNUALLY THEREAFTER TO THE BEST PICTURE OF EACH YEAR

The way to surpass the photoplays of every inverter on earth is to make every American motion picture devotee realize the truth—that America does lead the world on the screen—that we are making, in these United States, photoplays which have more humor, more romance, more thrill, more reflection of real life than any photoplays subtitled in any language.

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE’S Annual Medal of Honor has been established to testify to and proclaim this fact—to institute a serious search for the producer worthy of most signal honor—to acclaim the best screen work of Americans.

The PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE MEDAL OF Honor has been permanently established as an award of merit to the producer—not to the director unless he happens to be a director producer; not to an actor or author unless he is also the producer, for it is the producer who is ultimately responsible.
It is he whose foresight makes him venture his money, his reputation and his position in the industry in the selection of story plus director plus cast.

The verdict will be given by the public through a nation-wide ballot of the 2,500,000 intelligent and interested devotees of pictures who read Photoplay Magazine.

Belasco's Civil War Romance Given Splendid Production

Tom Terriss production
"THE HEART OF MARYLAND"
Vitagraph

DIRECTOR .................. Tom Terriss

SCENARIO BY ............... William B. Courtney
CAMERAMAN ................. Tom Malloy

STORY...Provided with a first rate scenario and given realistic and interesting production

DIRECTION...Keeps his story moving toward the conclusion all the time; wastes no footage on battle scenes

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Very good
LIGHTINGS .................. Some pretty effects CAMERA WORK ............... Well judged

EXTERIORS .................. Always pretty
INTERIORS .................. Good
DETAIL .................. All right

CHARACTER OF STORY......A romance of Civil War period in which Southern girl chooses between duty to the South and love of her Northern sweetheart

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...About 6,000 feet

David Belasco's play of the Civil War has been a favorite for so long that a picture bearing the title "The Heart of Maryland," it is enough to attract attention. But that is not all. Tom Terriss has made a thoroughly fine picture that will bear comparison favorably with several of the so-called specials that are being released, although his production is not claiming such prominence. William Courtney's scenario was well prepared in the first place, but it remained for director Terriss to make it a reality. He has retained Belasco's original story, and presented it with a deftness that makes the picture first class entertainment.

First of all a delightful Southern atmosphere and real Southern backgrounds are to be found, the old colonial mansion, the costumes and general air characteristic of the people, all add to its realism. The general production values are all splendid. The story moves along smoothly and surely, to a definite conclusion. There are no interruptions to break the well sustained interest. There are no long battle sequences to bore, only an acceptable number of short flashes, and then no actual bloody combats are used.

Catherine Calvert typifies excellently the character of Maryland Calvert, and her work throughout is interesting. Crane Wilbur, as her Northern sweetheart, plays with sincerity and good discretion. The minor characters are all suitable and do good work. The player impersonating Lincoln bears little resemblance to the Emancipator, and one or two other soldier make-ups might have been improved upon.

Alan Kendrick, at the outbreak of the Civil War, an officer in the U. S. Army, is forced to choose between serving the North or remaining true to his Southern sweetheart, Maryland Calvert. Alan chooses to serve the North, and the engagement is broken. Alan is captured by the Confederates and held prisoner in a church near Maryland's home. When Maryland learns that Alan's life is endangered she risks her life to save him and when the bell which announces Alan's death does not ring Maryland is found hanging to the clapper to prevent the sound. The girl is arrested and condemned as a traitor. In the meantime she assists Alan to escape.

Major Thorpe, a traitor to both the North and the South, holds Maryland a prisoner until Alan returns with evidence which causes Thorpe's arrest and gives Maryland back to her lover.

Should Make Your Box Office Feel Good

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you want to show a really worth while feature, secure "The Heart of Maryland," and you will be sure to satisfy your folks with it. The fact that it is a war romance should not detract from its appeal since the romance is the prominent feature, with the actual war scenes few and not numerous enough to displease even those who balk at war pictures. You have a genuine Box Office title that shouldn't require further exploitation to get them interested.

Tell them they'll be well pleased with Tom Terriss' adaptation of David Belasco's stage play, and you can promise them a fine piece of entertainment. For those who may suspect long battle sequence be sure to tell them there are but few war scenes, and above all, no long shots of actual combat. Advertise the showing well in advance with large posters bearing the title.

Arrangements have been made with the Twin City Bus Line to provide as many vehicles as are necessary to ride the women around the Twin Cities. The first half of the trip will start this morning at 10:30 a.m., sharp, start to be made from the West Hotel.

The first day's trail will lead through the parks of St. Paul to the State Capitol building, where there will be a 15-minute stopover. Lunch will be served in the St. Paul Athletic club. From the athletic club the visitors will be taken to Minnehaha Falls, the celebrated fish hatcheries of Minnesota, where a half an hour will be allowed for inspection.

The run will then continue along Summit Ave., the picturesque and residence section of St. Paul to the River Boulevard to Minnesota Falls, then along the Minnehaha Boulevard to Lake Harriet, back to the West Hotel, arriving there about 6 p.m.

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, the buses will again call for the women and carry them along Superior Boulevard to Wyzatza, around the famous Minnetonka, both upper and lower lakes, to Excelsior, where a fish dinner will be served.

After dinner there will be a two-hour boat ride. The return trip will be made over the Tonka Boulevard, Kenwood Drive around the Lake Calhoun and Lake of the Isles, returning to the West Hotel at 6 p.m.

That the Governor has had a difficult task making selections. He has been asked several times regarding various phases of the subject, but his replies were invariably evasive and no real information was obtained.

After permitting the showing of the production of "The Cave Girl" at the Governor's home last Saturday, it was believed that the Governor was about ready to announce the appointment of the censorship committee, but he left town without doing so.

Although several weeks ago he said that he intended to name one woman on the commission, it is now reported that the Governor is not so keen to have a woman on the commission.

The whole thing is up in the air, and there is no intimation as to the individuals whom he is considering for the positions.

Why We Should Have Exhibitors Support

The R-C Pictures Corporation (Robertson-Cole) are foremost of the independent motion picture producers and distributors. The organization neither owns nor controls any theatre. It is not an exhibitor and has no financial interest in any exhibiting unit or organization. Although only two years old as a producing company, there are now available to Exhibitors 102 photoplays, including dramas, comedy dramas, comedies and such notable successes and productions as Otis Skinner's "Kismet," series of pictures with Pauline Frederick; series of pictures with Sessue Hayakawa; Georges Carpentier in "The Wonder Man;" George Beban in "One Man in a Million;" Max Linder in "7 Years Bad Luck;" William Christy Cabanne and L. J. Gasnier specials including a score or more of equally notable screen successes.

AT LEAST 26 NEW PICTURES THIS YEAR

Our Hollywood studios, considered the most complete and up-to-date in existence, will produce at least a minimum of twenty-six pictures for distribution during the next 12 months. These will include unusual motion picture features, a series with Pauline Frederick, a series with Sessue Hayakawa, and a directors' series by William Christy Cabanne, L. J. Gasnier and other equally known directors. Negotiations are pending for new stars and directors. All departments have been strengthened and we will give exhibitors the best product obtainable in photoplays.

EXHIBITORS CAN MAKE POSSIBLE MORE, BIGGER AND BETTER PICTURES

We are concentrating on the most advanced and serviceable methods of service to exhibitors, to provide methods by which they can attract larger patronage to their theatres when they show R-C Pictures; and to aid them in building larger permanent patronage.

It is only by booking the output of such independent producers and distributors as R-C Pictures Corporation that increased production, bigger and better pictures for your patrons can be made possible—productions that can be booked at reasonable rental, backed by advertising, publicity and exploitation, insuring adequate box-office receipts.

R-C Pictures, adequately advertised and exploited and properly presented will make your theatre the most popular place of entertainment and amusement in your community.

Talk Of $5,000,000 Fund For Production Stirs Convention—Exhibitors Divided on Subject—Methods of Financing M. P. T. O. Discussed At Length

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—Nothing has proven so important a question in the history of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, as the proposed fund of five million for the purpose of distributing pictures. And if necessary the producing of pictures for use among exhibitors identified with the organization. This was the chief topic of discussion in Minneapolis yesterday.

The chief difficulty of the proposed measure is the fear on the part of a number of the larger exhibitors that if this plan is put into effect they will be driven out of business before it can be effectively inaugurated. They point out that it will take at least two years to perfect a producing and distributing plant which can provide for the needs of 8,000 exhibitors, the number now said to be included in the national organization.

Before the plan has been effectively put together they say the important producing companies now in business would cut off their product and this would compel them to close.

Another interesting view was presented by an important exhibitor of one of the key cities, who was active in the formation of the Chicago gathering a year ago which paved the way for the present national body.

His man, who does not wish to be named, said that the executive committee of the organization had recommended that the group be limited to five persons, and that no nominations for the position of chairman should be made.

The committee finally reached the decision to place the matter before the actual convention for decision. (Continued on Page 3)

Several Interesting Plans Advanced To Raise Funds for Operative Purposes

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—Financing of the national organization is being discussed at length here.

Several interesting plans have been proposed and others will be before the question is finally solved. One of the most interesting suggestions advanced is to have the exhibitors set aside one day a year on which films of their own will be secured without cost to the producers. All receipts are to be turned into a general fund of $50,000. Two thirds is to be retained by the state organization and one third is to be divided equally among the exhibitors.

Each state treasurer is to be bonded, assuming there are 8,000 members. The average receipts of this (Continued on Page 3)

Head of Famous Spends Grilling Three Hours Before M. P. T. O.—Told Promises Cannot Be Relied Upon—Matter Goes Before Convention Today

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—Adolph Zukor spent a grilling three hours and longer before the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America yesterday. At the conference the entire situation with regard to the policy of Famous Players-Lasky as chiefly affecting the operation of the smaller exhibitor throughout the country was gone over. It is understood that Mr. Zukor made a definite promise that from now on such incidents as the case of Mrs. Pauline Dodge of Morrisville, Vt., that of B. F. Uran of Mattoon, Ill., and that of H. Schwartz of Willimantic, Conn., would not again occur.

He was told bluntly by the members of the executive committee that his word could not be given serious consideration inasmuch as his written pledge had been broken.

He was further told that there was no reason to assume that future promises would be kept.

Additional reports of developments at the M. P. T. O. convention will be found on pages 3 and 10.

Executives and prominent exhibitors of America attended the dinner at the West Hotel last night at which a number of important problems were discussed.

Among those present were Sydney S. Cohen, Senator James J. Walker, Sam Berman, Charles O'Reilly, John S. Evans, E. F. Peter, Adolph Zukor, A. H. Lichtman, L. J. Selznick, Benjamin B. Hampton, J. L. Friedman, Senators Owen and Kenyon and a host of others.

The dinner broke up at a rather late hour. Details of the various speeches made will be published in tomorrow's issue.

Three German Units
Zukor’s Teuton Organization Being Developed Rapidly—Four Stars Under Contract
(Special to WID’S DAILY)
Berlin—Adolph Zukor’s European Film Alliance is being rounded out rapidly. Three distinct producing units have been formed and four stars placed under contract.

The producing units are the E. L. J. M. Film and the Max Reinhardt Films. The first is formed to make Ernst Lubitsch productions, and the second to make pictures by Joe May. The stars under contract are Pola Negri, Emil Jannings, Dagney Saerves and Harry Liedtke. George Jacoby will be another producer.

In addition there are three other E. F. A. companies: the E. F. A. Films, the E. F. A. Studio Co., and the E. F. A. Theater Co. Albert Rachmann has been placed in general charge of all three companies.

The board of directors is composed of Carl Bratz, Max Davidsohn, and councillor Wethauer. Jacob Karol is managing director of the commercial department and will be in general charge of distribution of Famous Players product for all of Central Europe. He was formerly the Unione Cinematografica Italiane.

The first film is already under way. Ernst Lubitsch is making it. He has secured a plot of ground 105,000 yards in area and on it is being build an Egyptian village. The story is called “Pharaoh’s Wife,” and in the cast will be Emil Jannings, Harry Liedtke and Dagney Saerves. Max Reinhardt is getting ready to film “Paradise Lost,” and Joe May, “The Indian’s Tomb.”

Blumenthal Sails Today
Ben Blumenthal sails for Europe today. He will first go to Paris and then to Berlin.

Stromberg Leaves
Hunt Stromberg, former director of publicity for Thomas H. Ince, leaves today for the coast. It is understood he has closed a deal for a series of pictures with one of the important distributing companies.

‘Lab’ Men Active

May Address Convention on How They Are Trying to Avoid Monopoly in New York

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—H. J. Yates of the Republic Laboratories and Major Tom Evans of the Evans Laboratories of New York are here as a special delegation representing the Allied Film Laboratories of New York. They are preparing a letter to the exhibitor body.

An effort will be made to secure the privilege of the convention floor to tell the assembled exhibitors the story of how they are trying to avoid the creation of a monopoly in the New York laboratory situation.

Voting By States

Convention Being Operated on New Basis—As Many Delegates as Representatives in Congress

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—The convention is being operated along somewhat new lines. Each state has its own delegation, selected on the basis of Congressional representation. Thus each state has as many convention votes as it has representatives in Congress. This naturally will hold down the actual number of delegates. A large number of exhibitors who have no representation are here, however.

Divided Over Idea

quoted, in discussing the proposed fund said:

“The Chicago and later the Cleveland convention was called for the specific purpose of protecting ourselves against the possible invasion into the exhibiting field of the Duponts who were in Goldwyn, of Famous Players, and other producers who had ideas of becoming exhibitors. This proposed move on our part seems to me to be turning things completely around. We are now proposing to do the very things that we opposed a year ago, that is, enter the field of the other fellow.

“If it was wrong for the producers to become exhibitors, then it is equally as wrong for us exhibitors to become producers or distributors. I can see much trouble ahead if we go in on any such plan.”

One of the leading exhibitors of the Middle West who controls one of the largest chains in that territory, declared that the plan was proposed was all wrong.

“If we want to do anything,” he said, “let us guarantee some independent distributor that we will take a certain number of productions annually. Then let us perfect a percentage system in which we would be protected and interested. This would assure us product and we could go ahead safely. Otherwise I fear that any exhibitor owning more than one or two houses would be placing himself at the mercy of the existing producers and distributors, and I hate to think of what they would do to us.”

A Message to the Gentlemen

THE MAN BEHIND

A group of men got together back in 1776. They made up their minds that what was their's WAS THEIR'S. They were willing to fight for it. They won. They made history. We are they.

Descendants of that determined group are now gathered in Minneapolis and let's hope that they will make up their minds to fight for what's their's. They are better equipped in every way than the patriots of '76 for Law and Order promises square dealing—if they decide to have what's their's. We are they.

Independent Exhibitors, Distributors and Producers own what they have bought with the sweat of their brows. No Bull or Bear from Wall Street produce their money for pleasant smiles or "blocks of common stock." It was earned.

By right of honest toil their theatres and productions are coming into their own—that's proven by the fact that the crowd from Wall Street desires to crush. Wall Street has never feared a dead one—therefore we must be alive. It's going to be suicide, murder or a happy prosperous life—which shall it be?

Don't let's sit back to "let George do it" for George has a funny knack of passing the buck around—and it's never done. Let us all do it. Do now. Do it well.

Let's show Mr. Wall Street that our pictures are wanted by intelligent audiences—that our theatres house discerning patrons. Let's sho... him how little he really is, by making ourselves so much bigger. He is not the bad, bad bogeyman he would have us believe—not by a long shot. His theatres are not better than ours nor are his pictures. All he really has is MONEY—and that is dwindling so fast that he has had to practically turn Highwayman.

He is only standing behind the microscope of advertising, and if you'll peek behind you will find that he is not near as big as we—and KNOWS IT! But he doesn't know that we know it, so let's show him!

Let's hold our ground, hold our theatres, hold our producing units and the first thing you know he'll be asking us to let him play in our yard. We have pictures and theatres—thousands and the best. We have the ability and desire to satisfy the Public's wish for clean and human photoplays. Let's give it to them and forget all about the MAN BEHIND THE MICROSCOPE.

I sure would like to be with you fellows out there in Minneapolis, but I feel that I am where I can do US the most good. I am opening "THE TWICE BORN WOMAN" at the New York Hippodrome. You will read more about it later in this paper. Mr. Wall Street could probably tell you how many pictures of his were turned down to let this feature run.

That's my first shot—let's lay down a barrage and pretty soon the MAN BEHIND THE MICROSCOPE will be "irised" to fadeout size.

B. B. Hampton and Lewis J. Selznick Present Concrete Plan—Latter Places Waste at $30,000,000 Yearly

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—A plea for centralized distribution of pictures and a complete control of production and exhibition by exhibitors was the keynote of the Monday afternoon session, at which Lewis J. Selznick, J. J. Friedman, President of the Federated Film Exchanges of America; Dr. Francis Holly, in charge of the Bureau of Commercial Economics at Washington, and Benjamin B. Hampton were the principal speakers.

Mr. Hampton, whose talk carried word to the convention from M. H. Flint, president of one of the leading banks of Los Angeles, to the effect that his financial unit was prepared and willing to finance the independent producer,

"I am informed," said Hampton, "that production this year is only about 19 per cent of the 1920 production, and of this 19 per cent the biggest share is in the hands of Famous Players-Lasky. The production of the independents is about 95 or 96 per cent off from last year."

Hampton proposes centralized distribution, governed by a board which shall pass on all questions between producer and exhibitor. Selznick had previously expressed the opinion that about $30,000,000 was being wasted each year through the existence of too many exchanges in the distributing zones. In this Hampton heartily concurred.

"You are paying the cost of this," said Hampton. "There isn't any reason why one or two exchanges should not handle all the business that is to be transacted in each zone."

Hampton paused to pay tribute to the organization powers and ability of Adolph Zukor. He, however, did not eulogize the methods of Mr. Zukor or Famous Players, using Zukor's personality only as a means of pointing out the basic principle which must govern the deliberations of the M. P. T. O.

Selznick declared his willingness to join any organization that would seek to govern the amount of annual production, and to step aside as an exhibitor.

"If you tell me," said Selznick, "that 24 or 18 or 10 pictures are all you want from me, that is all I will give you. Such a barometer will help me to control the salaries that are now being paid to actors and actresses and authors. The vexatious problems confronting the exhibitors today must be solved, either by the exhibitor himself, the producer or Wall Street. Wall Street has proven itself unfit. I believe that centralized distribution is the only solution, at least it is the starting point. I would like to see exchanges started in 30 zones which would tell the producer what his output is to be. In this way, and in this way only, the producer and exhibitor brought the session to a close.

Do You Know How Big “The Independents” Are In This Business?

No one has to write a speech for Sydney Cohen or Jimmie Walker to deliver to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at the Minneapolis Convention. There is some highly important data that they can and will give the delegates and the most important data available to all of them comprises the following information:

The total aggregate of well-made and powerful pictures made by independent producers and released by independent distributors for the season of 1921-1922 is greater in volume (by 3 to 1) than the aggregate of the rest of the industry.

F. B. Warren Corporation, absolutely independent of all affiliations with any other company, will release 30 productions. William Hodkinson will release 30 or more. First National announces 40 or 45. Robertson-Cole announces approximately 30. William Fox will release probably 52 and Universal approximately the same number. Goldwyn’s output will be around 30. Who does any exhibitor in the United States have to be afraid of with this much, and a great deal more, product available for his theatre or theatres?

F. B. Warren Corporation has no bed-fellows in the motion picture industry. We are alone and wholly without allies. Our place in the industry will be established by the value of the pictures we distribute and the cleanliness of our business relations with the nation’s theatre-owners who buy pictures from us.

We are definitely no part of the feuds and politics of this industry. We do not belong to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry nor will we be committed at any time to any pool agreements affecting relations with exhibitors.

We know that the season of 1921-1922 will be the biggest “independent year” ever known in the motion picture industry. We think we can prove to you by titles of pictures and by names of directors that the biggest productions of the year—the greatest number of big pictures—are coming to you from these sources.

F. B. Warren Corporation sells its pictures to exhibitors under a price rating system, fairly made, and has no franchises to sell of any kind or character.

To Cut Overhead

Dr. Holly outlined to the convention the circumstances which brought about the founding of the Bureau of Commercial Economics. He suggested that all exhibitors open their theatres each Saturday from 9 A.M. to noon for the junior and senior classes of the nation’s high schools for the study of the educational films. A promise to come before the convention or the executive committee the theater owners with a solution of the problems confronting exhibitors was made in a brief talk by J. L. Liedman.

To Ignore Ass'n

Review Board To Continue Its Work Despite Creation of 'Editorial Committee' of N. A. M. I.

The National Board of Review, in a form letter addressed to all of its correspondents throughout the country, has taken the stand that it will ignore its decisions ever decisions will be decided upon by the recently created "Editorial Committee" of the National Association, and that it will continue to review according to its own standards.

The letter says, in part:

"At the request of motion picture producers made two years ago, the National Board adopted a special edition of its code of standards for the guidance of producing companies. Since that time the board has repeatedly warned producers that these requirements must be rigidly adhered to. They have now been paraphrased in 'thirteen points,' by the producers as their own production standards.

"We wish to emphasize that no matter what interpretation the so-called 'editorial committee,' or producers may make of the 'thirteen points' adopted from the board's standards, the National Board will base its decisions exclusively on its own interpretation of its standards. Without any regard whatsoever to the 'editorial committee's' opinion of the questions involved. In other words, the National Board will reach its decisions entirely independently of any opinion or action of the producers' committee and only the National Board's own judgments will appear on the bulletin.

"Our correspondents will no doubt recognize that owning to the highly competitive nature of the motion picture industry together with the fact that many companies who are not members of the producers' association will not take part in this proposed trade censorship for various reasons, makes it important that the National Board continues its vigilance to safeguard the public against the production of objectionable pictures. The board realizes that, however well intentioned, the motion picture industry as a whole is not developed sufficiently to merit public confidence without some check on its activities by representatives of the public themselves. This position of the National Board is concerned in leading independent producers and exhibitors, as well as by the motion picture theater owners, who are dependent upon the producers for their daily programs.

COHEN RE-ELECTED

Convention To Enter Upon Second Agreement with Zukor Regarding Theater Operations—Dodge and Schwartz Checks Accepted

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—Shortly before adjourning for lunch yesterday, the convention unanimously agreed to permit the drawing up of a second agreement between the M. P. T. O. and Adolph Zukor with regard to the latter's promise to protect exhibitors from the sort of treatment meted out to Mrs. Pauline Dodge of Morrisville, Vt., and H. Schwartz of Willimantic, Conn.

The checks drawn by Famous Players on behalf of Mrs. Dodge and Mr. Schwartz will be turned over to them with deductions for expenses incurred by the M. P. T. O. in bringing both matters to a successful termination.

This move was not decided upon except after a lengthy discussion in which Cohen told the convention that Zukor had promised that the the coercive advertising such as was used in Mattoon, Ill., would be stopped. At one point Cohen said:

"They've threatened me."

The convention generally took this as a reference to Famous Players and then said Cohen:

"I told them to go to it and I'd give them a receipted bill."

This occasioned tremendous cheering. Cohen declared there was a lot of propaganda being circulated by companies other than Famous Players at the convention.

One of the interesting happenings at the session was the appeal made by Marcus Loew on behalf of Zukor. Loew declared it took a damned big man to apologize as Zukor had done. He added that Zukor, if talked to in the proper vein, would further the distribution plan of the M. P. T. O., but insisted that if an effort was made to drive the heel of Famous Players, Zukor would rebel.

A number of other exhibitors made pleas on the floor that Cohen's suggestion for another agreement be adopted. Then Mrs. Dodge and Schwartz gave thanks to the organization for the efforts made on their behalf. This practically settled the matter and the convention then agreed to be a party to a second agreement.

Again Heads M. P. T. O.—Given Tremendous Ovation—Committees Submit Reports—Many Resolutions Adopted

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—Sydney S. Cohen was unanimously re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America at yesterday afternoon's session.

Mr. Cohen was given a tremendous ovation on the convention floor: an ovation that all but overwhelmed him.

The resolution covering the selection of the next convention city was amended yesterday to place the power of selection in the hands of the executive committee, the committee to be governed largely by the nature of conditions as they exist at the time the choice is to be made.

Yesterday's sessions were marked almost entirely by the reports of various committees and the passing of a number of resolutions.

John Harris of Pittsburgh, was spokesman for the committee which recommended the appointment of a committee of five to confer with producers relative to the plan of the members of the M. P. T. O. to organize a distributing company. The committee recommended the plan as outlined at the Tuesday session. This report was unanimously adopted.

Glenn Harper of Los Angeles, reported for the committee on resolutions. The principal resolutions offered and later unanimously adopted were as follows:

That the month of September be set aside as Independence Month when exhibitors are asked to play as many independent productions as possible.

That the convention pledges its support to the independent laboratories to the end that independence in every branch of the industry be maintained.

That the theater owners strive for an equitable and standard form of contract.

That the theater owners strive for the abolishment of the deposit system.

That the theater owners confer with their representatives in Washington in an effort to pro-

finance productions of members of the organization. It is stated that the members of the financing group which is headed by a New York bank are ready to go ahead with the proposition once they are shown that the independent field as represented by the new organization is of sufficient stability to warrant the investing of large sums of money in it. The announced motives of the association are as follows:

To co-operate for the purpose of driving the irresponsible and "fly-by-night" from the field.

To establish a credit bureau which will investigate the past and present business status of exchanges with whom the members have to transact business.

To launch a national education campaign the purpose of which will be to inform the public that the independents are the basis of the success of the picture industry and not the members of the big corporations backed by unlimited financial power.

To standardize contracts.

To standardize the percentage ratios of various territories.

To standardize the division of territories.

To adjust grievances that may arise between exhibitors and distributors.

To adjust grievances that may arise between producer members and distributor members.

Mr. Goldberg, in speaking of the plans of the organization, said yesterday:

“We really mean to make this organization one of a lasting nature. Under the by-laws a member must be confined to either the distributing end of the business or the producing end. A producer member cannot also be a distributor and vice versa. There will be a board of eight directors to govern the affairs of the organization, four from the producing ranks and four from the distributing ranks. We now have 34 members and expect to line up more. There will be a paid secretary to manage the details and executive headquarters will be maintained in New York City.

“I have twice before attempted to launch an organization of this character, but at each attempt various men thought the plan was not feasible. Now we are going through it.

“The idea in itself is not a particularly new one with me, but in recent weeks the absolute necessity of forming some kind of a national co-operative organization of independents was brought home to me in the course of carrying out certain financial negotiations.

“Certain men asked me whether it was not true that Adolph Zukor was for all practical purposes dominating the industry. I replied in the negative and added that I thought he had a strangle hold on it.

“They later inquired whether or not the independents had any sort of an organization through which an effort could be made to secure a market for meritorious product. I was forced to reply that they had not. I was told that it the independents could point out specifically that they could work together harmoniously and agreeably that the necessary financing would come through. That's one reason why this organization has come into being.”

Weis Nails Rumors

In order to set at rest various rumors which have been circulated since the announcement of the "Adventures of Tarzan" serial starring Elmo Lincoln, Louis Weiss of the Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corp. yesterday issued the following statement:

“I wish to point out now that ‘Adventures of Tarzan’ is brand new. It is being produced at the present time at the coast by the Great Western Producing Co., with the direction in the hands of Robert F. Hill. It stars Elmo Lincoln and is being made from the concluding chapters of ‘The Return of Tarzan.’”

Harry C. Tandall was on hand leading the District of Columbia delegation which is fighting for the next convention. Only real opposition is Atlantic City. That is, so far. Convention may not decide the next here, but may leave it to the executive committee. But the Washington group is busy with banners, pencils and other stunt to land the convention.

Handy fans were being distributed by the Friedman Film Corp., who are distributing Curwood’s “God Country and the Law” in this territory. The heat made the fans popular.

Senator Hartford of Pawtucket, R., who has an argument on with Fawson about booking pictures, was on hand. Convention is expected to take his case.

Some Discussion
(Staff Correspondence)
Minneapolis—W. D. Burford of Aurora, Ill., started something in the corridor of the West Hotel when he met Adolph Zukor. They began to discuss the question of the small theater and the policy of Famous Players. Before anyone knew it about 300 visitors were gathered about them, and there was another repetition of the various events with regard to Paramount policy. It was interesting only to those who had not heard the discussion before.

The Sacrifice
(Staff Correspondence)
Minneapolis—When Harry H. Buxbaum, district manager for Famous Players in New York, entered the convention he was accompanied by a little dinge all dressed up. “That’s the delegate from Honolulu,” said “Bux.”

“Oh,” said somebody, “I thought it was the sacrifice that Zukor was going to make to the exhibitors.”

Closing Confabs
(Staff Correspondence)
Minneapolis—With the election of Sydney S. Cohen as president and the delivery of the reports of the various sub-committees the M. P. T. O. convention reached its closing stages yesterday afternoon.

As is usually the case, however, the executive committee still has a considerable number of matters to thresh out before the convention can really terminate. These matters of business will be taken up in executive session, however, and represent a portion of convention business on which the various state delegations have no direct bearing.

All around the hotels are heard expressions of satisfaction over the manner in which the convention was held. There is a feeling that the business scheduled to be transacted has really been attended to, and that the atmosphere of indifference which has characterized conventions in former years was noticeably absent at this one.

Cohen Re-elected
(Continued from Page 1) note the best interests of the bill amending the present copyright laws as they relate to music taxation.
That censorship is distinctly un-American.
That the exhibitors pledge their support for the elimination of all unwholesome pictures.
That producers who strive for clean, educational entertainment be favored by the theater owners.
That all “blue law” propaganda be condemned.

That exhibitors pledge their support to the Americanization of the foreign-born, and that a committee be appointed to aid in the preparation of suitable scenarios with the Americanization idea in mind.

That exhibitors go on record as opposing the appearance on the screen of anyone whose sole claim to fame is unsavory publicity.

Col. W. B. Butterfield of Battle Creek, Mich., reported the result of his conferences with officials in Washington, relative to taxation. He stated that while there was good prospect of the film tax being repealed, the repeal of all other tax measures was highly improbable, inasmuch as the country is badly in need of funds, and inasmuch as the 1921 tax returns promise the nation but scant financial relief.

Indecision over Production Idea

Evenly Divided

Distribution Idea Causes Considerable Discussion—Some Exhibitors Pledge Money
(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—The question whether or not the M. P. T. O. should sponsor the distribution of its own pictures was one of the most important topics under discussion yesterday.

From the moment the report was before the convention the discussion raged. Sentiment seemed evenly divided in favor of and against the proposed plan, the chief idea being not to hurry into anything of this size without due consideration.

Marcus Loew spoke at length relative to his experiences as a producer and wound up by saying that if the convention had confidence in its committee then the committee should be appointed to proceed with the plans for the distributing company.

"Where there's a will there's a way," he said.

Joe Mogler, of St. Louis, offered $5,000 personally to the plan and when Edward Fay, of Providence, said the exhibitors had offers from five or six producers to join with the exhibitors in the plan someone asked who they were.

Cohen replied naming Hodkinson and Selznick, "together with others." He also said he had received a wire from Tom Ince regarding the distribution idea.

Mr. Griffith, California, said 100 producers wanted to market their pictures through the exhibitors, but John Harris, of Pittsburgh, warned the exhibitors they were starting the very thing they had told the producers not to do.

Julian Brylawski, of Washington, also advised caution in the proceedings. Tom Goldwyn, of New York, was not afraid of it. The financial interests of Wall Street with their interest in Famous Players, Goldwyn, and Loew's, all are drifting in the same direction. But that doesn't frighten me. It is too big a proposition, too big for Wall Street to attempt. I have told my associates that if that time ever came when a trust was attempted that there would spring up over night producing companies making product just as good as that made by the producers in a trust and I have told them let it come."

This brought a tremendous cheer.

"Your organization has a value that most people in the industry don't see," he said. "I know the question of censorship he held the producers to blame, exonerating the exhibitor by saying that the pictures were usually bought in bulk upon the claims and promises of the producer, and that the exhibitor did not know what was coming to him."

"But," he said, "when you show these pictures to your audiences they don't know that and they naturally hold you to blame."

A set of handsomely prepared resolutions was tendered through W. Stephen Bush to Dr. Francis Holly of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, and in expressing his thanks for them Dr. Holly made one of the most interesting addresses of the evening. He suggested an international organization of exhibitors to control the screens of the world.

The banquet was not over until very late and then the executive committee and the special committee handling the distribution problem went into session. Both were at work until after three o'clock yesterday morning.

Hamm Against It

Northwest Exhibitor Official Thinks Idea Is Wrong—Talk Highlight of Dinner
(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—There was one outstanding feature of the banquet tendered to the delegates at the Radisson Hotel by the United Theatrical Protective League of Minnesota, and that was the address of William Hamm, of Pinkielein and Ruben. Hamm is a wealthy brewer who entered the theatrical firm when the Volstead Act became effective. He is immensely wealthy and an excellent type of the "big league" business man.

Introduced by Senator Walker as the "Ham that am," he evoked considerable applause when he said, "I say to producers; if I was in the producing business I would make the road of the small exhibitor as easy as I possibly could."

Later he declared that it would be a grave mistake for the exhibitors to get into the production game.

"It would lead you to complications that would pull you down," he said, "but the distribution idea can be worked out."

Teaching upon the so-called trustification of the industry he said:

"I have no fear of trustification. I am not afraid of it. The financial interests of Wall Street with their interest in Famous Players, Goldwyn, and Loew's, all are drifting in the same direction. But that doesn't frighten me. It is too big a proposition, too big for Wall Street to attempt. I have told my associates that if that time ever came when a trust was attempted that there would spring up over night producing companies making product just as good as that made by the producers in a trust and I have told them let it come."

This brought a tremendous cheer.

"Your organization has a value that most people in the industry don't see," he said. "I know the question of censorship he held the producers to blame, exonerating the exhibitor by saying that the pictures were usually bought in bulk upon the claims and promises of the producer, and that the exhibitor did not know what was coming to him."

"But," he said, "when you show these pictures to your audiences they don't know that and they naturally hold you to blame."

A set of handsomely prepared resolutions was tendered through W. Stephen Bush to Dr. Francis Holly of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, and in expressing his thanks for them Dr. Holly made one of the most interesting addresses of the evening. He suggested an international organization of exhibitors to control the screens of the world.

The banquet was not over until very late and then the executive committee and the special committee handling the distribution problem went into session. Both were at work until after three o'clock yesterday morning.

Hamm Against It
Northwest Exhibitor Official Thinks Idea Is Wrong—Talk Highlight of Dinner

(Staff Correspondence)

Minneapolis—There was one outstanding feature of the banquet tendered to the delegates at the Radisson Hotel by the United Theatrical Protective League of Minnesota, and that was the address of William Hamm, of Finkelstein and Ruben. Hamm is a wealthy brewer who entered the theatrical firm when the Volstead Act became effective. He is immensely wealthy and an excellent type of the "big league" business man.

Introducing Senator Walker as the "Hamm that am," he evoked considerable applause when he said, "I say to producers; if I was in the producing business I would make the road of the small exhibitor as easy as I possibly could."

Later he declared that it would be a grave mistake for the exhibitors to get into the production game.

"It would lead you to complications that would pull you down," he said, "but the distribution idea can be worked out."

Touching upon the so-called trustification of the industry he said:

"I have no fear of trustification. I am not afraid of it. The financial interests of Wall Street with their interest in Famous Players, Goldwyn, and Loew's, all are drifting in the same direction. But that doesn't frighten me. It is too big a proposition, too big even for Wall Street to attempt. Robert Priest Helps Clear Up Norfolk Man’s Disputes over Monopolies

Some interesting correspondence has passed between Robert W. Priest, president of the Film Market, in New York, and A. C. Hathaway of the Real Estate Investments, 310-213 Dickson St., Norfolk, Va.

Mr. Hathaway originally sent a letter to Priest, the contents of which appear below:

An owner of a property 58 by 206 ft. extending from Granby St., our principal thoroughfare, to Monticello Ave. in the rear.

This I consider the best location in the city for a motion picture house.

I told that the Wells-Wilser-Clancy Corp. has accumulated a number of films that can be shown in Norfolk. We judge that the market comes here.

The theater is growing rapidly and during the next ten years will be the fastest growing city in the United States.

If you are in position to make a contract for first class films in Norfolk, please advise me of your company.

Mr. Priest’s reply, in part, follows:

Lewis Sails for Europe

I have read with great interest the contents of your letter of June 23, while I am not directly interested in theater property I will take this opportunity to advise you that Wells-Wilser-Clancy Corp. or any other existing theatrical enterprise or corporation has no contracts on the motion picture output of America, Inc., helicopters, “Penny of Top Hill Trail,” and “Dangerous Toys.”
